"SIR: Ambroise and Pierre Toma, two of the heads of the St. John's Tribe of Indians, came in here this day and desired me to write you the following letter, from their own mouths, and forward it to you by the first opportunity, and to request an answer from you.

"At the Truck-House, Penobscot Falls, Sept. 12, 1775.

"Capt. Thomas Fletcher and Lieutenant Andrew Gilman, interpreters, present.

"We, Ambroise and Pierre Toma, the heads of the St. John's Tribe, and in behalf of said tribe and the Mickamack Tribe, salute the chiefs of the Colony of the Massachusetts, and wish you health, and that God would prosper you in your present war with Great Britain. We have talked with the Penobscot Tribe, and by them we hear you are engaged in a war with Great Britain, and that they are engaged to join with you in opposing your and our enemies. We heartily join with our brethren the Penobscot Indians in every thing that they have or shall agree with our brethren of the Colony of the Massachusetts, and are resolved to stand together and oppose the people of Old-England that are endeavouring to take your and our lands from us. We are brothers of one Father, and one God made us all, and we will stand by you as long as the Almighty will give us strength, and we hope you will do the same for us. We have no where to look to for assistance but to you, and we desire that you would help us to a priest, that he may pray with us to God Almighty. We have no place to go to but to Penobscot for support, and we desire you would provide ammunition, provisions, and goods, for us there, and we will come in there and give you our furs and skins, and take our support from you in return, and will be thankful to you for the kindness.

"Brothers, we pray God to bless you and prosper you, and strengthen and lengthen this new chain with us."

Therefore, Resolved, That a Committee be now appointed to prepare and bring in a Bill for the confiscation of all armed and other Vessels that shall be taken and brought into this Colony, together with their Cargoes, appurtenances, &c., which shall have been found making unlawful invasions, attacks, or depredations on our sea-coasts or navigation, or improved in supplying the enemy with Provisions, &c., or employed by them in any other respect whatever; and that provision be made in said Bill for encouraging such of the inhabitants of this Colony as shall for this purpose be recommended by the Committees of Correspondence and Safety of the Town in which they shall dwell, to fit out Armed Vessels, under such regulations as the General Court shall order; and that all Vessels and Cargoes that shall be taken by said inhabitants or others, properly authorized to take the same, and that shall be legally condemned in this Colony, shall be the property of the captors, they paying the charges of condemnation. Message from a majority of the honourable Council, viz: "Gentlemen of the House of Representatives :

"We have taken under consideration your message of the 9th instant, relative to certain armed vessels at Long-Island, near Penobscot, to protect and guard those who are employed in cutting and transporting wood to Boston, for the use of the Ministerial Army; and, after the strictest inquiry, we find that there now are, or very lately have been, sixteen vessels at Long-Island, one twenty gun ship, one of sixteen guns, two tenders, ten large transports, and two wood sloops, who are taking wood from thence. And that Colonel Cargill had, ten days since, collected about five hundred men, with sixteen days' provisions, and a sufficient number of boats to transport them from the main to the said islands; that he apprehended he had a force sufficient to prevent the enemy's executing their purpose. It does not, therefore, appear to us necessary, at present, to make any further provision."

Read, and ordered to lie.

That there also be sent to the said Truckmaster a quantity of provisions and clothing, as shall be judged necessary to be sold them in exchange for furs that they may bring to him. That it is further the opinion of this Committee, that a letter be wrote that tribe, expressive of the desire we have that the friendship at present subsisting may be continued; that the expenses of these Indians be paid by the Colony, and such a present as this Court shall think proper be made to them, as a testimony of our friendship.

We received your letter dated at the Truck-House, at Penobscot Falls, the twelfth day of September, 1775.

We take this opportunity to write to you an answer.

We salute you, and wish you the best of Heaven's blessings—health, peace, and prosperity. We heartily receive you as our brethren, in the same manner as we have received our brethren of the Penobscot Tribe. We will do every thing for you that we have promised to do for them. We shall be always ready to help you, and stand firm together with you in opposing the wicked people of Old-England, who are fighting against us, and who are seeking to take your and our lands and liberties from us, and make us their servants; and we have good reason to believe that we shall soon drive them out of our land.

We are thirteen Colonies of white people, who have joined in one long chain, and almost as many Tribes of our brethren, the Indians, who have very much lengthened and strengthened our chain: it is now so long and so strong, that (if we don't break it ourselves) those wicked people of Old-England will never be able to break it. We are willing you should have a Priest of your own, and worship as you choose; for our great dependance and trust is on Almighty God, (who made you and us,) for protection and defence.

According to your desire, we have sent to our Truckmaster, at Penobscot, money to purchase ammunition, provisions, and goods, as we think will be sufficient to supply you this winter. We have told our Truckmaster to supply you, and take your skins and furs in payment. Thus we have cheerfully complied with your requests, and shall be always ready to hear your requests or complaints, and we trust you will help us in our present war with the wicked people of Old-England, if we send for you.

We pray God to bless you, and keep you out of the hands of all your and our enemies, and that you may make a part of our long chain of brothers, as long as the sun and moon shall endure.

*Petition of the Committee of Correspondence for the Town of Worcester, humbly sheweth: That Monsieur Viart, a Frenchman, about three months ago, was put under their custody by the Committee of Safety, with directions that the said Viart should have liberty to walk for his health, to a convenient distance about this Town; and they would inform your Honours that he hath enjoyed the liberty according to the directions given him, like a gentleman of strict honour; and as they have received your Honours' orders, dated August 15, 1775, to keep the said Viart under custody, with the same liberty, until further order, they beg leave humbly to show that the said Monsieur Viart came to them in such clothing as was fit for summer only, and that without some provision be made for him, or he be liberated, so he may provide for himself, he must suffer in this cold climate. He is at this time destitute of comfortable linen, stockings, shoes, &c.

Your petitioners therefore pray, that your Honours would take the matter into consideration, and give such directions relative to the premises, as your wisdom shall dictate. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

†Petition of the Selectmen of Provincetown, in the County of Barnstable, humbly sheweth: That this Province, for several years last past, to encourage the poor inhabitants of that place to tarry there for the preservation of so valuable a harbour, and to relieve people that are frequently cast on shore on that desolate place, and who must unavoidably perish, in case the inhabitants leave the place, made a grant of twenty Pounds a year towards supplying them with winter preaching, which sum they have received annually until May, 1772, for which grant they gratefully acknowledge the Province's care of them; and upon the 26th day of February, 1774, the General Court, taking their circumstances into consideration, came into the following resolve, viz:

“That there be allowed and paid, out of the publick Treasury, into surey of this Colony, to the Honourable James Otis, Esq., to be by him delivered into the hands of the Selectmen of the Town of Provincetown, or to their order, the sum of one hundred and thirty-five Pounds, for the use of the Inhabitants of said Town, to enable them to discharge such debts as have arisen for the preaching of the gospel; and further to enable them to pay the Protestant Minister already settled in said Town, agreeable to a grant of the General Court or Assembly of this Colony, at their Sessions in February, A. D., 1774, which grant was made of the sum of forty-five Pounds annually, for twelve years next after the year one thousand seven hundred and seventy-two, which sum of one hundred and thirty-five Pounds is in full of said grant till May last. And the Receiver-General is hereby ordered and directed to pay the abovesaid sum of one hundred and thirty-five Pounds to the said James Otis, Esq., for the purpose abovesaid, he giving his receipt therefor.

In Council, October 17, 1775: Read and concurred.

Afternoon.

The Militia Bill was read the first time, and ordered to be read again on Tuesday, at ten o'clock, A. M.

Ordered, That Mr. Sullivan bring in a Resolve empowering some person to purchase sundry articles of Provisions, Goods, &c., for the Honourable Jedediah Preble, Truckmaster at Fort Pownall.

— Tuesday, October 17, 1775.

Mr. Gerry, according to order, brought in the following Resolve. Read and accepted.

Whereas the Committee appointed to settle all such Accounts of the Committee of Supplies as remain unsettled are empowered to pay and discharge the Accounts of the Selectmen of the several Towns in the Government, for Blankets by them supplied, agreeable to a Resolve of Congress; and there are many Non-Commissioned Officers and Private Soldiers enlisted by this Colony, and now in the American Army, who have found their own Blankets, and not received payment therefor; and others who are yet unsupplied with Blankets, or Money to purchase the same:

Therefore, Resolved, That the Committee aforesaid be, and they hereby are empowered to pay twelve Shillings to each and every Soldier, as aforesaid, who shall fully satisfy said Committee that he hath not received a Blanket, or payment therefor, from any Selectman or Committee of this Colony.

Mr. Speaker communicated to the House a Letter from Joseph Reed, Esq., Secretary to General Washington, enclosing a Letter from Dr. Church to the enemy, as deciphered by the Reverend Mr. West, together with the Proceedings of the Council respecting the same. Whereupon,

Resolved, That Dr. Church ought to be brought to the Bar of this House, to show cause, if any he has, why he should not be expelled the same.

the hands of the Selectmen of Provincetown for the time being, the sum of forty-five Pounds annually, for twelve years next after the first day of May, 1772, to the use of the inhabitants of said Town, to enable them to discharge such debts as had arisen for the preaching of the gospel amongst them, and further to enable them to pay the Protestant Minister already settled in said Town: Provided, always, That they continue him, or some other officiating in that character, amongst them during that time; the same to be applied to that use only. And further, that all such sum or sums which said Town have received out of the publick Treasury, to hire publick preaching in said Town, within the time included in said grant, be first deducted out of such sums as by this resolve they might have been entitled to receive.”

But so it happened, that, notwithstanding said grant passed all the branches of Government, by the neglect of the person who had the care of the business, there was no application made for a warrant on the Treasury for what was then due, according to said resolve, by which means the said Town has had no benefit of said resolve to this day, by reason whereof our present Pastor is kept out of the money due to him, and will be under a necessity of leaving us, in case he has not that subsistence the Province intended him, as an encouragement to settle amongst us. Wherefore, as there is due to us, in consequence of said resolve, from May, 1772, to May, 1775, one hundred and thirty-five Pounds, according to said resolve passed, we humbly pray the honourable Court to take the matter into their wise consideration, and order us to receive one hundred and thirty-five Pounds, out of the publick Treasury, to complete the grant to May, 1775, unless you should, in your wonted goodness, give us twenty Pounds for the cost and trouble of our reverend Pastor's ordination, as we are very poor, and order us to receive one hundred and fifty-five Pounds, or to relieve us as your great wisdom shall see fit. And, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

Resolved, That notice be hereby given, that where the inhabitants of any Town are desirous that the Coats by them provided should be delivered agreeable to this encouragement, it is expected that such inhabitants will take care that said Coats are delivered to the Soldiers from their respective Towns accordingly; and whenever any person shall present to the Committee of Clothing at Watertown a receipt in form following, viz: "We, the subscribers, inhabitants of the Town of . . . , in the County of . . . , now belonging to Captain . . . 's Company, in Colonel . . . 's Regiment, hereby acknowledge that we have each received of the bearer, . . . , a Coat, according to the encouragements of a late Congress of this Colony," subscribed by any number of Soldiers belonging to the Town by whom the Clothing was provided, and the same shall be witnessed by the Commissioned Officers of the Companies to which such subscribers belong; in such case, the Committee are directed to pay the sum of twenty-five Shillings for each Coat so delivered, taking receipt therefor. The Committee of Clothing have procured Buttons, which they will deliver to the Selectmen of any Town, or their order, for as many Coats as they shall certify are providing for the use of the Soldiers belonging to their Town.

allowance for Pockets, Thread, and Staying, Worsted or Mohair, for Button-Holes, as they shall judge reasonable, and also for transporting the Coats to Watertown, having proper regard to the weight thereof; that they be directed to purchase Blankets for the Colony, on reasonable terms; that they make compensation to those Non-Commissioned Officers and Soldiers that suffered loss at Bunker's Hill, who have not already received recompense agreeable to the Resolve of Congress of the 19th of June last, hereto relating; that said Committee be directed to keep the Coats that shall be brought in to them from each Town separate; that they deliver them out to the Soldiers, or their order, by any of their Officers, as they shall apply, endeavouring, as nearly as is convenient, to conform to the encouragement at first given; that they allow each a Coat to the value of twenty-five Shillings, and where any cost less, that they make up the deficiency in Cash; if any Coats that shall be brought appear to be more ordinary than common, that the Committee take more particular care that such be delivered according to these directions; and, in order to prevent all injustice to the Colony and Soldier, that said Committee be directed to keep a fair account of the names and places of all Soldiers who shall receive Coats or Money, showing to whom they were delivered; and that, in their accounts, they use care to keep the respective Companies in each Regiment distinct.

Whereas it is necessary that an application of the Truckmaster of Penobscot, for sundry articles to supply the Indians in that part of the country, should be complied with, as a salutary measure for preserving their friendship; and this Colony, having exhausted its stock of Flints to supply the Continental Army, is unable to furnish any for the immediate purposes mentioned:

Resolved, That his Excellency George Washington, Esq., be, and he hereby is desired to order Enoch Plummer, of Newburyport, to be supplied, out of the Continental Magazine, with five hundred Flints, for the purpose aforesaid, he paying a reasonable consideration for the same.

In Council, October 23, 1775: Read and concurred.

Mr. Spooner brought down the Letter prepared to be sent to the Continental Congress, viz:

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: You have here enclosed nearly the amount of our disbursements, which have been paid by our Treasurer, before the 5th instant, for the support of the Army stationed in this Colony, and for providing necessaries to enable us to make a proper stand against the Ministerial forces. The hurry with which we have been driven, the perplexities which have attended the sudden collection of an army, and the multiplicity of business which naturally arises from attending to their various wants, together with a due attention to our suffering friends in and about Boston, have prevented our perfecting such an account as your Honours might expect. But as soon as a settlement can be made with our several Committees, and our accounts adjusted, which are daily coming before us, we hope to be able to transmit to your Honours such an account as will appear satisfactory and reasonable.

In the mean time, as the sum on the paper enclosed arises only from the purchasing articles absolutely necessary for the support of the Continental cause, about ten thousand Pounds, whereof is for provisions and other articles in store before the arrangement of the American Army, which have been and are daily delivering to the Continental Commissary and Quartermaster-General, we trust you will be induced to grant us the same, or such other sum, to supply our pressing necessities, as to your Honours may appear fit and reasonable. It is proposed that we should pay up the troops raised by this Colony to the 1st of August, (as will appear by a copy of General Washington's letter transmitted herewith,) which business we shall attend to as soon as the pay-rolls are laid before us. We have paid the non-commissioned officers and soldiers of this Colony only forty shillings each, which is included in the within account; and as most of them have been in camp since the 19th of April last, we imagine that the balance of said pay-rolls will amount to the sum of sixty-five thousand six hundred and eighty Pounds. Agreeable to the terms of enlistment, each non-commissioned officer and private soldier, raised in this Colony, was to have one coat given him. Many of these coats have been already delivered, and the expense of the whole will, we presume, amount to the sum of sixteen thousand two hundred and twenty Pounds, at the least.

We have also already before us accounts from several Towns, of powder supplied the Army, to the amount of one hundred and seventy-four barrels and a quarter. We would further inform your Honours, that we have raised in this Colony two thousand and eighty men, officers included, and stationed them on those parts of our sea-coasts which were most exposed to the depredations of the enemy. We judged this step absolutely necessary, in order to prevent our enemies from supplying themselves with provisions and other necessaries. Their vessels of war made several attempts on the most naked and defenceless places on the sea-coasts of this Colony, whose situation exposed them beyond that of our neighbours; but although their attempts were bravely opposed, we knew the inhabitants of those places had not sufficient force within themselves to repel all such invaders. It was, therefore, of the utmost importance to send them such additional forces as might enable them effectually to cut off all supplies of provisions, wood, &c., from the Ministerial forces in Boston, as well as to secure themselves against the vengeance which might be expected from the rage of a disappointed enemy, and under which those unfortunate people are now suffering in a shocking degree. To these forces we have paid the sum of four thousand and eighty-three Pounds, eight Shillings. A measure so necessary and so essential to the service of the common cause, we are persuaded, will meet with the approbation and support of the Congress; and we trust your Honours will consider the above expenses, in connection with the within account, and make such grants as you may judge fit and reasonable.

We have exhibited no account of moneys advanced in removing and supporting the inhabitants of the Town of Boston. The distress of those persons who have virtuously sacrificed, not only the conveniences but necessities of life, to save their Country, so much deserves the compassion of this Continent, that we shall, as soon as may be, beg leave (in pursuance of a resolution of the late honourable Continental Congress respecting them) to lay an account of our disbursements thereon before you, for consideration.

Resolved, That the foregoing application be presented to the honourable the Continental Congress, now sitting at Philadelphia; and that the same be signed by the Secretary, in the name of the General Court, and forwarded as soon as may be, with the schedule and certificate accompanying the same.

In Council, October 23, 1775: Read and concurred.

Upon motion, Ordered, That the Committee for bringing in a Bill for regulating the Militia proceed on that business.

A Letter to the Hon. John Hancock, Thomas Cushing, Samuel Adams, J. Adams, and R. T. Paine, Esq's, viz:

"The General Court of the Colony which you represent in Congress now encloses you an application made to your honourable Assembly, for a grant of the sum therein mentioned, which application you will lay before said Congress or not, as you shall judge prudent. The frequent calls this Colony has been obliged to attend to, in support of the Army, together with those daily made for that purpose, renders it of the greatest importance to it to have an immediate grant of the money applied for. This Court therefore desires your particular care and attention in procuring the same, according to the best of your prudence, and the true interest of your constituents."

Resolved, That the foregoing Letter be sent to the Hon. John Hancock, T. Cushing, Samuel Adams, John Adams, and Robert T. Paine, Esquires, members of this Colony at the Continental Congress now sitting at Philadelphia, and that the same be signed by the Secretary, in the name of the General Court, and forwarded as soon as may be.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That Mr. Story, Maj. Bliss, and Mr. Morgan, be a Committee to inquire and report to the House the state of the Muster-Rolls, the best method to obtain them completed, and for securing the Colony against any loss on account of Fire-Arms supplied to the Soldiers.

Jabez Fisher, Esq., brought down from the honourable Board the following Order, passed in Council, viz:

"In Council, October 26, 1775.

"Ordered, That James Otis, Benjamin Greenleaf, Walter Spooner, Jedediah Foster, and Joseph Palmer, Esquires, be a Committee to confer with such Committee as may be appointed by the honourable House, in regard to the manner in which an Attorney-General may and ought to be appointed—the Board being entirely disposed to pursue such a measure as will be consistent with the Charter and Constitution of the Government, and most conducive to the welfare and safety of the people."

Read, and thereupon Ordered, That Mr. Speaker, Major Hawley, Colonel Bowers, Mr. Gerry, and Colonel Orne, be a Committee from the House, for the purpose proposed by the honourable Board.

The Committee for considering the proper method for bringing Dr. Church to the bar of the House reported as follows:

Whereas it appears, by sundry papers transmitted to this House, agreeable to their desire, and by order of his Excellency George Washington, Esq., that Benjamin Church, Jun., Esq., lately a Surgeon-General in the American Army, has been convicted by the judgment of a Council of War, at which his Excellency presided, of having carried on a criminal correspondence with the enemy, and is accordingly ordered to be closely confined until special directions relative to this matter shall be received from the honourable the Continental Congress:

And whereas the said Benjamin Church is also a Member of this House, and the charge brought against him is of so criminal a nature, that it is the duty of the House to make strict inquiry into the fact, and, upon proof of the same, to manifest their utter abhorrence thereof: Therefore,

Resolved, That Mr. William Howe, the Messenger of this House, be, and he hereby is directed, on Friday, the 27th of October instant, to apply to his Excellency George Washington, Esq., for a sufficient guard safely to conduct the said Benjamin Church to and from the bar of this House; and, being furnished therewith, to take the body of the said Church, and bring him to the bar of the House accordingly, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of the same day.

Ordered, That an authenticated copy of the foregoing Resolve be immediately laid before his Excellency General Washington.

On the Petition of Jerathmeel Bowers, Esq., in behalf of one John Shardon,* the Committee reported. Read and accepted.

* Petition of Jerathmeel Bowers most humbly sheweth: That one John Shardon, of Swanzy, is now a prisoner on board of Captain Wallace's ship; has been there near two months; has a wife and four children in want of his care. The said Wallace has offered him a dollar per day, if he will undertake to be a pilot; but the poor man has had virtue enough, hitherto, to refuse the offer. Wallace has consented to accept another man in his stead; and as there is danger of his finally complying, through necessity, and, as he is acquainted with the coast, might be the cause of bringing the men of war into the rivers and harbours on the south shore, your petitioner most humbly prays that he may be redeemed, by sending a man from Taunton jail; and your petitioner will undertake to procure the said Shardon, or return the prisoner to Taunton, as your Honours shall direct. And, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

Resolved, That Henry Bowers be allowed to receive of the Prison-Keeper in Taunton one person who hath been taken from the Navy under the command of Admiral Graves; he giving his Bond to the Sheriff of the County of Bristol, to the use of this Colony, in the penal sum of one hundred Pounds; condition, that in case he shall not exchange the Prisoner whom he shall receive for the said John, he will return the said Prisoner to the Prison in Taunton aforesaid, within fourteen days from the time he shall receive the Prisoner. And the Keeper of said Prison is hereby directed to conform himself to this order, provided the said Henry Bowers shall give security as above directed.

In Council, October 27, 1775: Read and concurred.

A Petition from Josiah Nottage, Jun., in behalf of himself and others, Mariners, who were on board the Schooner Industry, on a voyage from New-Providance, bound to Boston, lately carried into Marblehead, setting forth that they are deprived of the common mode of obtaining their just demands, and praying relief. Read, and committed to Colonel Otis, Captain Adams, and Mr. Durfee.

A Petition of Caleb Clark, Agent from the Town of Belchertown, setting forth, that their Representative was not duly chosen; and that said Town had voted he should not attend the General Court, but with the leave of the Committee of Correspondence. Read, and Ordered, That said Petition be dismissed.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That Major Hawley go to the honourable Board, and inquire whether they have passed on an order sent up by the House, proposing a Conference on the subject of appointing Officers in the Militia. Who reported, that he had delivered the message.

Jedediah Foster, Esq., came down from the Board, and informed that the order of the House proposing a Conference was then under consideration before the Board.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That Mr. Story, Colonel Thayer, and Mr. Goodwin, be a Committee to examine the Muster-Rolls as they shall be brought in.

Samuel Holten, Esq., came down from the honourable Board, and said that the Board had concurred the order of the House proposing a Committee of Conference on the method of appointing Military Officers.

A Petition of William Davis, praying a Permit for the Sloop Reliance, now at Dartmouth, to sail in ballast, with Cash, for some of the French West-India Islands, under the restriction, for Powder. Read and committed.

Samuel Holten, Esq., brought down a Bill to encourage the fitting out Armed Vessels, passed in Council, viz:

"In Council, October 27, 1775: Read a second time, and passed to be engrossed, with the amendments."

Read and concurred, with the amendments proposed.

The Committee on the Petition of the Selectmen of Salem* reported as follows; which was read and accepted.

Whereas the particular situation of the Town of Salem, with regard to its being exposed to desolation by the enemy, the smallness of the quantity of their Ammunition, * Petition of the Selectmen of Salem, beg leave to show: That it now appearing to be the determination of the enemy to ravage and destroy the sea-ports of the Province, the Town of Salem thought it their duty to represent their defenceless state; and, at a meeting held this day, directed us to inform your Honours that five half barrels and a small quantity in cartridges constitute our whole Town stock of powder, and request relief in regard to ammunition, and what else your Honours judge our condition requires. This request we now present, and earnestly request that it may be granted. The cannon we have mounted (besides field-pieces) are one eighteen-pounder, one twelve, three seven, and one nine-pounder, for which, if we are so happy as to obtain powder, a proportionable quantity of shot will be wanting.

the method they are taking for their defence, and the probability of their being able to save the place, provided they could be furnished with a sufficient stock of Powder and Ball, having been represented to this Court; and being desirous that a place of so great importance as Salem is, might, if possible, be saved from destruction; this Court earnestly recommend to the Towns hereafter named, that they would furnish the forementioned place with the several quantities of Powder proposed in this list, upon their application to them for it; which quantity shall either be returned to them again in Powder, or paid for in Money, not exceeding five Shillings a pound, by the Selectmen or Committee of Safety of the Town of Salem, as the Selectmen of the several Towns from where it is taken shall choose. The names of the Towns to be draughted from: Danvers, 50 pounds; Rowley, 50; Andover, 50; Haverhill, 50; Topsfield, 25; Boxford, 25; Bradford, 50; Middletown, 25; Methuen, 25—350 pounds.

JOSEPH WHEELER, per order.

In Council, October 28, 1775: Read and concurred.

Doctor Holten brought down a Petition of Joseph P. Palmer, in behalf of the Committee of Correspondence of Braintree. Also, a Petition of James Hayward.

Notice was given that Dr. Church was at the door.*

Ordered, That Dr. Church be admitted to the bar of the House, and that the Committee to order provision for the Guards give directions that the Guards be placed at the several doors of the House.

* Account of the examination of Dr. BENJAMIN CHURCH, written while he was in Prison at CAMBRIDGE.

On Friday, October 27, the High Sheriff Howe, a messenger of the House of Representatives, at ten o'clock A. M., came to my prison, accompanied by Adjutant-General Gates and the several officers of the guard, with a summons from the honourable House, commanding my immediate attendance at the bar of the House. I requested to be indulged with an opportunity to change my linen, which was indulged me, while the guard was parading, and the officer of my escort waited upon the General for his directions. By the time I had put myself in decent apparel, I received orders to proceed. I had procured, in this interim, a chaise from a friend, into which the messenger entered with me; in which manner we proceeded,* in the centre of a guard of twenty men, with drum and fife, from my prison in Cambridge to Watertown, being three miles. When arrived at the Meeting-House in Watertown, where the Assembly then sat, the messenger of the House announced my arrival; upon which we received orders to tarry at the door till called for; after waiting a few minutes, the door-keeper, opening the door, directed the messenger to bring in the prisoner. I was then ushered into the House, and advancing up to the bar, which was placed about midway of the broad alley, I made my obeisance to the honourable Speaker of the House, James Warren, Esq., and to the members of the honourable House of Representatives there assembled. The galleries, being opened upon this occasion, were thronged with a numerous collection of people of all ranks, to attend so novel and so important a trial.

The honourable Speaker then began, by informing me that the honourable House of Representatives having been informed that I, a member of that House, was put under arrest by his Excellency General Washington, and their jealousy for the privileges of the House having been excited thereby, they had appointed a Committee of the honourable House to wait upon and confer with his Excellency upon the subject; to which they had received the following answer. Here his Honour recited a letter from his Excellency General Washington, attested by his Secretary, the Hon. Joseph Reed, Esq., specifying, that at a meeting of a General Court-Martial, held at Cambridge, on October 3, present, his Excellency General George Washington, Esquire, President; all the Major-Generals and Brigadier-Generals of the Army, and Adjutant-General Gates, Benjamin Church, Esq., Director-General of the Hospital, was summoned before them; when a Court of Inquiry being held, it was their unanimous opinion, that said Benjamin Church was convicted of holding a criminal correspondence with the enemy, each member being questioned separatim upon the matter. After the Speaker had read the doings of the Court-Martial, the criminal letter, as deciphered by Mr. West, was produced and read to the House; upon which the honourable Speaker observed, "that the honourable House, from a regard to their own honour and reputation, and to express their abhorrence of such conduct in one of their members, had summoned me to the bar of that House, to make answer to the charges exhibited against me, and to proceed in such manner as to vindicate the reputation of the House." And then holding out the letter, demanded, "if that was a true copy of the letter I wrote in ciphers;" to which I replied, "May it please your Honour and the honourable House, although I am a member of this honourable House, or have been, and have sustained some little part in the struggles of this very respectable body for several months past, yet in the matter now before them, a matter in which I hold some capital consideration, I profess myself to be totally unacquainted respecting the general design, mode of process, and the issue. If I might entreat the indulgence of the honourable House, I would inform them about a month since I was taken by an armed force, and have been confined a close prisoner for twenty-eight days; secluded by my stern jailors from the cheering eye and consoling tongue of friend and acquaintance, unless by a special license from Head-Quarters, which has been sparingly granted; and never indulged with the aid and advice of counsel learned in the

Dr. Church was accordingly admitted; whereupon there was read an order of the House for an application to General Washington, that he would certify to this House the cause of the detention and imprisonment of Benjamin Church, Esq.

There was also read a copy of Dr. Church's Letter, as deciphered by the Rev. Mr. West; and a copy of the Proceedings of the Council of War respecting said Church, which had been transmitted by the General, and are as follows, viz:

"I hope this will reach you. Three attempts have I made without success. In effecting the last, the man was discovered in attempting his escape; but fortunately my letter was sewed in the waistband of his breeches. He was confined a few days, during which time you may guess my feelings; but a little art and a little cash settled the matter. 'Tis a month since my return from Philadelphia; I went by the way of Providence, to visit mother. The Committee for warlike stores made me a formal tender of twelve pieces of cannon, eighteen and twenty-four pounders; they having taken a previous resolution to make the offer to General Ward. To make a merit of my services, I sent them down; and when they received them, they sent them to Stoughton, to be out of danger, even though they had formed the resolution, as I before hinted, of fortifying Bunker's Hill, which, together with the cowardice of the clumsy Colonel Gerrish and Colonel Scammons, was the lucky occasion of their defeat. This affair happened before my return from Philadelphia. We lost one hundred and law; six days retained in the most rigorous confinement. I was then led before a General Court-Martial,* attended by my guards; after a scrutiny, novel and undecisive, which I then apprehended to be a trial, I was remanded back to my prison; but, at my request, and the indulgence of the General, attended only by the officers of the guard. There I have been held in the most cruel imprisonment, at the point of the bayonet, ever since. This morning, may it please your Honours, at the hour of ten o'clock, without any previous intimation of such a design, without any expectation of such an event, I am summoned, ex improviso and immediately, to the bar of this honourable House. Bowled to the dust by infirmity produced by distress, harassed and sickening with painful suspense, aggravated vexations, rigorous imprisonment, and a load of sorrows no longer supportable; am I called upon to make my defence. Though in a situation to wound the bosom of compassion, and from the eye of humanity to steal a tear, relying on conscious integrity, that trial I wish not to evade: only let me be determined, Sir, whether the jurisdiction of this House extends to the whole enormity of the transaction of which I stand accused; whether, may it please your Honour, this trial shall be final and decisive." To which his Honour the Speaker made answer, "that the honourable House had determined to examine this matter no further than as it related to a member of that House." To which I rejoined, "sorry am I, Sir, that my plea for justice cannot be heard: I have been led from Caiaphas to Herod, and from Herod to Pontius Pilate. To what tribunal shall I make my final appeal? The House will pardon me; but while they appear so tremblingly alive to preserve their reputation unsullied, they should not forget the sinister influence such precipitation will have at the future trial of perhaps an innocent man; my cause will be prejudged, and my guilt ascertained by the sanction of this important body, before due inquiry is made. I did hear, Sir, that this House had determined on my expulsion; I immediately transmitted to your Honour a formal resignation of my seat as a member of this House, in some measure to prevent the ill consequences which their censure might produce hereafter. This honourable House may possibly remember, when Mr. Wilkes was arraigned, in the language of Lord Chatham, for 'blaspheming his God and libelling his King,' the House of Commons, of which he was then a member, did not evidence a premature distress lest their immaculate honours should be tainted; their generous humanity induced them to take no cognizance of the fact, till by due process of law he was condemned to exile. After which, they expelled him from the House." The Honourable Major Hawley then moved, that the honourable Speaker would put the question to me, whether the letter then read was a true copy of the letter I wrote in ciphers. I replied, it was not an exact copy. Major Hawley then urged, that perhaps there was some trifling literal variations, which made no material difference, but requested that I might be asked whether the letter then read did not contain the true meaning and import of my letter in general. The question was put by the Speaker, to which I answered as follows: "I perceive the honourable House, influenced by a partial purpose, are determined upon an immediate trial. The honourable gentleman from Northampton perfectly mistakes me if he supposes I mean, through chicane or evasion, to interrupt your inquiry; confirmed in assured innocence, I stand prepared for your keenest searchings. I now first learn, may it please your Honours, of my being convicted by a General Court-Martial of a criminal correspondence with the enemy; what leads to such a conviction is perfectly unknown to me; and I presume it is something singular that I should be first acquainted with the

* I was not even then favoured with the assistance of the Advocate-General. They cannot pretend it was not a trial, as they made up their judgment, and determined I was convicted of a criminal correspondence, &c.

† As the General Court-Martial had convicted me without a trial, perhaps the honourable House will think themselves warranted in their sentence of excommunication.

‡ It appears to me a strange perversion of language to assert that I was convicted of a criminal correspondence with the enemy, when there was no single circumstance to lead to such a conviction beyond the letter itself, which carried in it such evident marks of falshood as to destroy its own testimony; add to this, it savours not a little of Hibernianism to construe the bare writing a letter (which was never conveyed to the person for whom it was wrote) a conviction of an actual criminal correspondence. The most severe construction that common understanding could affix to this writing, were it indisputably calculated to betray the interest of the community, would be "an attempt sixty-five killed then, and since dead of their wounds; one hundred and twenty now lie wounded; the chief will recover. They boast you have fourteen hundred killed and wounded in that action. You say the Rebels lost fifteen hundred, I suppose with equal truth. The people of Connecticut are raving in the cause of liberty. A number from this Colony, from the Town of Stamford, robbed the King's stores at New-York, with some small assistance the New-Yorkers lent them; these were growing turbulent. I counted two hundred and eighty pieces of cannon, from twenty-four to three-pounders, at Kingsbridge, which the Committee had secured for the use of the Colonies. The Jerseys are not a whit behind Connecticut in zeal. The Philadelphians exceed them both. I saw twenty-two hundred men in review there by General Lee, consisting of Quakers and other inhabitants, in uniform, with one thousand Riflemen and forty Horse, who, together, made a most warlike appearance. I mingled freely and frequently with the members of the Continental Congress; they were united, determined in opposition, and appeared assured of success. Now, to come home. The opposition is become formidable. Eighteen thousand men, brave and determined, with Washington and Lee at their head, are no contemptible enemy. Adjutant Gen. Gates is indefatigable in arranging the Army. Provisions are very plenty; clothes are manufacturing in almost every Town for the soldiers. Twenty tons of powder lately arrived at Philadelphia, Connecticut, and Providence; upwards of twenty tons are now in camp. Saltpetre is made in every Colony. Powder Mills are erect-judgment of that Court in my attendance upon this. It has been frequently objected to us by our adversaries, that we were struggling to establish a tyranny much more intolerable than that we meant to oppose. Shall we justify the prediction of our enemies? Will it be for the honour or interest of the community that one of your friends and partisans is reduced to deprecate that power which, by his constant exertions, he has been in some measure instrumental in supporting? You profess you are contending for the rights and liberties of British subjects. Why then deny appeal to common law? Am I impertinent in claiming the rights of Magna Charta and Bill of Rights? Have I no title to a trial by jurors, or the benefit of the Habeas Corpus Act? But if by a forced construction I am deemed amenable to martial law for matters transacted before my appointment to the hospital, and before the promulgation of those laws, why are the rules and articles framed by the Continental Congress, for the government of the Army, violated in every letter, to accumulate distresses upon me?

"I have suffered already the utmost penalty annexed to the breach of that law, for which I now stand committed. Am I to be the victim of the insatiable rage of my enemies? Am I perpetually to be subjected to the successive pains and penalties of every capricious power? It is a maxim in that Government which I claim as my inheritance, Sir, and for which you have expressed the highest veneration, "Miseram equidem est servitus ubi jus est vagum et incertum." Miserable indeed is that state of slavery where the right of the subject is vague and uncertain. But I will not engross the time of this honourable Court. I did say, Sir, the letter, as now read, is not a literal construction of that I wrote in ciphers, as far as my memory serves, for the letter was written in great haste. I never have been favoured with a copy since, to consider of it, and have never seen it till to-day, except the very cursory reading I gave it when before the General Court-Martial, at which time the perturbation of mind incidental to such a situation naturally prevented such a close attention as to enable me to recollect the contents. I believe, in general, the sense is preserved; in some instances it is perverted. It has been proposed, that the letter be read in paragraphs, and that I be questioned in order. If it will be agreeable to the honourable House, I will read the letter in paragraphs: I will candidly and faithfully execute my intention in the course of my reading; and, to convince the honourable House that I mean not to cavil at trifling inaccuracies, I will correct the erroneous passages as I proceed, and restore the true reading on a different sheet."

This motion was acceded to by the honourable House, and the copy of the letter being handed to me by John Pitts, Esq., I began: "Previous to any remarks upon the substance of this reprobated letter in my hand, by your Honour's leave, and the indulgence of the honourable House, I will repeat the circumstance which led to, and my motives for writing the letter: sometime after my return from Philadelphia, I was passing in my chaise towards Mistick, I met with a team conveying household furniture towards Cambridge. In the team, seated on a bed was a woman with two children; the woman accosted me by name, asking me if I did not know her; her countenance was familiar to me; I answered yes, and inquired when she left Boston; she informed me, the day before, and told me, she had a letter for me from Boston, from my brother; she took a small bundle out of her pocket, and, opening it, handed the letter to the carman, who delivered it to me; it was directed to me; upon breaking the seal I found it written in ciphers and signed I. F. I put it in my pocket, and rode a few rods; curiosity induced me to return back and repair to my lodgings, to decipher the letter, and acquaint myself with the contents. This is the letter. Here I handed the letter to the Speaker, who read it to the honourable House, as follows:

"DEAR DOCTOR: I have often told you what the dreams of your high to correspond with the enemy;" but the person for whom the letter was designed was not in office, was not a soldier; he was my friend and brother. I have a great veneration for several of the respectable personages who composed this Court, but, abstracted from the consideration of self, I lament that those worthy characters should have been betrayed into so injurious, so unjustifiable a construction of an innocent piece of artifice to serve the common cause. If I was then convicted, I suppose my continued imprisonment is the penalty awarded for my transgression; if so, the month is up, and I ought to be discharged; but of this more hereafter.

ed, and constantly employed, in Philadelphia and New-York. Volunteers, of the first fortunes, are daily flocking to the camp; one thousand Riflemen in two or three days. Recruits are now levying, to augment the Army to twenty-two thousand men. Ten thousand Militia are appointed in this Province, to appear on the first summons. The bills of all the Colonies circulate freely, and are readily exchanged for cash; add to this, that unless some plan of accommodation takes place immediately, these harbours will swarm with privateers; an army will be raised in the Middle Provinces, to take possession of Canada. For the sake of the miserable convulsed Empire, solicit peace, repeal the acts, or Britain is undone. This advice is the result of warm affection to my King and to the Realm. Remember I never deceived you; every article here sent you is sacredly true. The papers will announce to you that I am again a member for Boston; you will there see our motley Council. A general arrangement of officers will take place, except the chief, which will be suspended but for a little while, to see what part Britain takes in consequence of the late Continental petition. A view to independence grows more and more general. Should Britain declare war against the Colonies, they are lost forever. Should Spain declare against England, the Colonies will declare a neutrality, which will doubtless produce an offensive and defensive league between them. For God's sake, prevent it by a speedy accommodation. Writing this has employed a day. I have been to Salem to reconnoitre, but I could not escape the geese of the capitol. To-mor-flaming sons would come to; do you forget my repeated cautions not to make yourself too obnoxious to Government? What says the psalm-singer and Johnny Dupe to fighting British Troops now? They are at Philadelphia, I suppose, plotting more mischief, where, I hear, your high mightiness has been ambassador extraordinary; take care of your nob, Mr. Doctor—remember your old friend, the orator; he will preach no more sedition. Ally joins me in begging you to come to Boston. You may depend upon it, Government is determined to crush this rebellion; a large re-enforcement of troops is hourly expected, when they are determined to penetrate the country; for God's sake, Doctor, come to Town directly. I'll engage to procure your pardon; your sister is unhappy, under the apprehension of your being taken and hanged for a rebel, which God grant may not be the case. You may rely upon it, the Yankees will never be a match for the troops of Great Britain. The Yorckers have behaved like damned fools in robbing the King's stores, as Government intended to have granted them some exclusive privileges in trade had they continued loyal. It will now be a rendezvous for British Troops. We know well enough that you are divided; your people are discouraged; that you want discipline, artillery, ammunition; and Government has taken effectual care that you shall not be supplied by other Powers. I have wondered that we have not heard from you; difference of politics has not cancelled my friendship for you. Let me entreat you not to take up arms against your rightful King, as your friend Warren did, for which he has paid dearly. I cannot send your sulky and other matters you sent for; you may thank your own people for that, who first set the example, by preventing any thing from being brought to Town. I think you might have sent us a bit of fresh pork now and then. You see Hancock and Adams are attainted already. If you cannot pass the lines, you may come in Captain Wallace, via Rhode-Island; and if you do not come immediately, write me in this character, and direct your letter to Major Cane, on His Majesty's service, and deliver it to Captain Wallace, and it will come safe. We have often heard your people intend to attack the Town. By God, I believe they had such a dose on Bunker's Hill as to cool their courage. Your sister has been for running away; Kitty has been very sick; we wished you to see her; she is now picking up.

"I remain your sincere friend and brother,

I. F.

"P. S. Don't fail to write me soon."

This letter being read, I proceeded: "Your Honour well knows what was our situation after the action of Bunker's Hill; inasmuch that it was generally believed, had the British troops been in a condition to pursue their success, they might have reached Cambridge with very little opposition. Not many days after this, we had a report circulated very generally, and as generally credited, of the arrival of a re-enforcement of five thousand British troops in Boston. This honourable House have not forgot the general anxiety excited thereby, together with the consideration of our not being in a capacity to make any tolerable resistance, from the reduced state of our magazines. Was there a man, who regarded his Country, who would not have sacrificed his life to effect a tolerable accommodation? My fears, I must confess, were greatly excited. At this interval (a week, perhaps, or ten days after I had received this letter) I was confined to my lodgings by a stormy day, contemplating our disagreeable situation. I pulled the letter out of my pocket, and, reading it, the idea of writing an answer to my brother started into my mind. Imagining I could improve the opportunity to effect a happy purpose, I immediately set about it. One circumstance which was an inducement to writing at that time was, that a young woman in the same house was to set off for Newport the next morning. I will now proceed to consider the letter by paragraphs, after premising that I have endeavoured to adopt the air and language of a Tory throughout, for the purpose of securing confidence, and obtaining the intelligence I wanted.

"Three attempts have I made to write you; the last, the man was discovered, but fortunately my letter, &c. May it please your Honour, had I written or attempted to write into Boston, is it not very extraordinary that, during my long confinement, when the very antipodes have been alarmed at the transaction, and every row I set out for Newport, on purpose to send you this. I write you fully, it being scarcely possible to escape discovery. I am out of place here, by choice, and therefore out of pay, and determined so to be unless something is offered in my way. I wish you could contrive to write me freely in cipher, by the way of Newport, addressed to Thomas Richards, merchant. Enclose it in a cover to me, intimating that I am a perfect stranger to you; but being recommended to you as a gentleman of honour, you took the liberty of enclosing that letter, entreating me to deliver it as directed; the person, as you are informed, being at Cambridge. Sign some fictitious name. This you may send to some confidential friend at Newport, to be delivered to me at Watertown. Make use of every precaution, or I perish."

"This is a true copy of Dr. Church's letter, as deciphered by the Rev. Mr. West, and acknowledged by the Doctor to be truly deciphered.

"JOSEPH REED, Secretary."

"At a Council of War held at Head-Quarters, Cambridge, October 3, 1775, present:

"His Excellency General Washington; Major-Generals Ward, Lee, and Putnam; Brigadier-Generals Spencer, Heath, Sullivan, Greene, and Thomas; Adjutant-General Gates.

"The General communicated to the Board a discovery of a correspondence carried on with the enemy by Dr. Church, by Letter in characters, which was deciphered by the tongue has been clamorous against me; is it not strange, Sir, that no proof has been exhibited against me of such correspondence, but in this very letter, which is crowded with fallacy, and obviously designed to deceive? The idea of the man being discovered, but escaped, 'the letter being,' &c., was suggested by the affair of Doctor —, who was taken, as reported, going into Boston; was searched, but no letter found. I heard of the matter upon my return from Philadelphia, and that the letter was so concealed; which was idly reported to be the reason of its not being detected. The other two attempts are mentioned in a subsequent paragraph: 'Twice have I been to Salem,' &c. This idea was started by the following incident: About a week before I set out on my journey, Major Bigelow informed me he had received intelligence that provisions and other matters were conveyed into Boston, by the Custom-House boat, from Salem; which ought to be immediately prevented. I instantly laid the matter before the Committee of Safety, and they determined to take measures immediately to prevent her passing into Boston. I solemnly declare, Sir, I never wrote one letter into Boston since I left it. I solemnly declare, I have never been to the Town of Salem these seven years past."

"I went by the way of Providence, to visit mother." This passage, I think, Sir, confirms my declaration that the letter was designed for my brother, and not for Major Cane. I should hardly have acquainted the Major of my going to visit my mother, and surely I should not have neglected to affix the relative my to the substantive, were not the letter addressed to a relative character. The next paragraph is, 'the Committee for warlike stores,' ending at 'Bunker's Hill.' Here, may it please your Honour, is a capital omission, which leads to a suspicion of my having written before. In the original copy, I remember perfectly well, after the words 'having taken a previous resolution to make the offer to General Ward,' were added 'for the purpose of fortifying Bunker's Hill.' This part of the sentence was either inadvertently left out by myself in copying the letter into ciphers, or omitted by the person who deciphered the letter; this accounts for the reference below, 'as I before hinted,' and reconciles this passage with the first paragraph, that 'I had made three attempts to write him without success.' The true state of the fact is as follows: The taking and fortifying Dorchester-Hill was the first object in contemplation when I left the camp. I was sensible we had not heavy artillery. When at Providence, being informed that they had a considerable number there, I applied to the Hon. Mr. Ward, who resided then at Providence, and was a member of the Committee of War, for such of them as they could spare. Mr. Ward called the Committee together, when they generously granted them, and they were sent down. The application was made spontaneously by me, and I wrote a letter of apology to General Ward for my officiousness in this matter. The reason of my covering this transaction in my letter must be obvious. There was a constant communication between Newport and Boston. There was no doubt but they would have accounts of this transaction. Did I not account for it in a way to conceal my being active in the matter, I should have been defeated in my intentions in writing."

Here I was interrupted, and the House voted to adjourn to three o'clock. I was ordered to make such corrections in the interim as to make it correspond with the original draught. I was then, by the order of the honourable House, conducted by my guard, under custody of the messenger of the House, to Coolidge's Tavern, where, at the publick expense, I was regaled with half a mug of flip and the wing of a chicken, and was then reconveyed to the House, in the manner I came from thence. When arrived at the door of the House, the messenger communicated my arrival. He was directed to detain the prisoner at the door till called for. I was continued in the cold, on a bleak eminence, for the space of half an hour—which, after a month's close confinement, was not very eligible—and during the whole time surrounded by my guards, with additional mobility, digito monstrari et dicier hic est; during which time a solemn vote was passed to invite the honourable His Majesty's Council for this Colony, and sundry military gentlemen, to be present at the trial; and when their Honours had taken their seats, orders were given to admit the prisoner. I was then introduced to the bar of the House, The Speaker, addressing himself

Rev. Mr. West, and laid the said Letter before the Members of this Council.

"After considering and discussing the matter, it was determined to adjourn till to-morrow, and then that Dr. Church be examined.

"October 4.—The Council of War met. Present as before.

"Dr. Church being sent for, and shown the Letter in characters, was asked, whether the said Letter was written by him; to which he answered, he believed it was. He was then shown the explanation of said Letter, as deciphered, and asked whether it was a true one; to which he answered in the affirmative. Dr. Church then explained his intention in writing said Letter, as calculated to impress the enemy with a strong idea of our strength and situation, in order to prevent an attack at a time when the Continental Army was in a great want of ammunition, and in hopes of effecting some speedy accommodation of the present dispute, and concluded with solemn asseverations of his innocence.

"The General then asked the opinion of the Council, severally, whether it did not appear that Dr. Church had carried on a criminal correspondence with the enemy; to which they unanimously answered in the affirmative.

"The question was then proposed, and discussed, what were the proper steps to be taken with respect to him; and, after examining the regulations of the Continental Army, and particularly the articles twenty-eight and fifty-one, it was determined, from the enormity of the crime, and the to me, informed me the House were ready to hear me, and ordered me to proceed. I began as follows: "May it please your Honour, to the patient attention, the apparent candour, and generous humanity of the honourable House, I feel myself deeply indebted. I shall now proceed, by their continued indulgence, to some further observations on the letter; not doubting, from the approved justice and benignity of this honourable Assembly, a full acquittance from the groundless charges levelled against me."

"The next paragraph is, 'which, together with the cowardice of the clumsy Colonel Gerrish,' &c. to 'defeat.' There is a mistake in the word lucky in this sentence; the original was unlucky, the negative being marked by an additional stroke in the l. Here I cannot but observe, Sir, that, notwithstanding the apparent labour and design, throughout the whole, to maintain the character of a tory, yet, in this paragraph, I have inadvertently betrayed myself; having mentioned Colonel Gerrish and Colonel Scammons in terms of reproach and indignation, for not engaging the King's troops. After giving an account, in the next paragraph, of the number of our killed and wounded in the battle of Bunker's Hill, which greatly falls short of truth, and an oblique sarcasm upon them for their extravagant calculation in this matter, I proceed, in several succeeding paragraphs, in the most exaggerated terms possible, to alarm him with a very formidable account of the spirit, supplies, resources, industry, union, and resolution of the Colonies, all confirmed by ocular demonstration, beginning with 'the people of Connecticut,' and continued as far as 'are readily exchanged for cash.' As far as my contracted reading and observation extends, may it please your Honour, it has been the policy of those we heretofore deemed our enemies to speak in contemptuous terms of the courage, strength, union, and resources of these Colonies; they have, I apprehend, Sir, constantly endeavoured to discourage us, and encourage the enemy, by remonstrating, in the warmest manner, the impossibility of our making any effectual resistance against them. If I am condemned for a representation perfectly the reverse of this, I would ask, Sir, who are your friends? Is it criminal and injurious to you to say we are able and determined to withstand the power of Britain? Is it criminal, Sir, to alarm them with a parade of our strength and preparation? Is it bad policy, or a proof of enmity, when under the most alarming apprehensions of instant ruin from their attack, by an innocent stratagem to divert them from such a ruinous enterprise?

"The next matter most strenuously urged and insisted upon, is an immediate accommodation, or the Colonies are disjoined from Britain forever. See from 'add to this' to 'for God's sake, prevent it, by a speedy accommodation.' Here, may it please your Honour, the plot is unravelled; the scope and design of the letter is here fully explained—to effect the reconciliation so vehemently urged, so repeatedly recommended. For what cause have I worn the garb of a friend to Government throughout this letter? For what cause have I repeated fallacy upon fallacy? For what cause have I exaggerated your force, but to effect a union, to disarm a parricide, to restore peace to my distracted Country? If this is the work of an enemy, where are we to look for a friend? There are two or three passages which, from being misunderstood, have been greatly exaggerated, which I shall explain hereafter.

"The next paragraph, beginning at 'writing this' to 'discovery,' is totally futile and apocryphal. The next passage, 'I am not in place here,' &c., is in answer to his request, in his letter, not to take up arms against the King, and to quiet the fears of a sister, as well as to carry on the deception; but even here, through haste and inattention, I have committed a blunder which should have been avoided. I have mentioned a readiness to take up with an appointment in my own way, not considering that in the capacity of a physician or surgeon I should be deemed aiding and assisting, and equally obnoxious with those who were actually in arms. The concluding paragraph contains particular directions for his writing me; from hence, I think, Sir, the following conclusions are fairly deducible: First, my endeavours to appear so zealous a friend to Government, and so seemingly open and communicative, were to engage him to a full and free communication on his part, for purposes very obvious. Again, Sir, I think it is indisputably very inadequate punishment pointed out, that it should be referred to the General Congress, for their special direction; and that in the mean time he be closely confined, and no person visit him but by special direction."

"A true copy of the Minutes of the Council of War on Dr. Church.
JOSEPH REED, Secretary."

The following Letter was exhibited to the House by Dr. Church, to which he said the foregoing was an answer, viz:

"DEAR DOCTOR: I have often told you what the dreams of your high sons would come to; do you forget my repeated caution not to make yourself too obnoxious to Government. What says the psalm singer and Johnny Dupe to fighting British Troops now? They are at Philadelphia, I suppose, plotting more mischief, where I hear your high mightiness has been ambassador extraordinary. Take care of your nob, Mr. Doctor—remember your old friend, the orator; he will preach no more sedition. Ally joins me in begging you will come to Boston; you may depend upon it, Government are determined to crush this rebellion. A large re-enforcement of troops is hourly expected, when they are determined to penetrate the country; for God's sake, Doctor, come to Town directly; I'll engage to procure your pardon; your sister is unhappy, under the apprehension of your being taken and hanged for a rebel, which God grant may not be the case. You may rely upon it, the Yankees will never be a match for the Troops of Great Britain. The Yorkers have behaved proved, from this paragraph, that a previous correspondence never subsisted between us. If this had been the case, Sir, can it be supposed I should be so extremely minute and circumstantial in pointing out a mode and channel of conveyance? or, if we had heretofore communicated, should I not have intimated my reasons for altering the plan? I have urged labour and pains in writing him; I have urged secrecy; I have urged danger, merely to impress his mind with my being zealously attached to his party, to secure full faith and credit, to influence him to an unlimited confidence in his return to me. If in this I have transgressed, the motive will surely absolve me. Here, may it please your Honour, concludes the letter, innocently intended, however indiscreetly executed—a letter which has alarmed the world, wounded me in the esteem of my friends, and glutted the malice of my enemies.

"I shall now, by your Honour's leave, make a few observations on some particular passages, and then conclude. One or two paragraphs have been urged as proofs of my having carried on a correspondence with this person for some time past. The words 'as I hinted before to you' is one. This I have explained already. Another is: 'You know I never deceived you.' The man I wrote to had implicitly swallowed the doctrine of Mr. Hutchinson: that all the opposition arose from a small but busy faction; that the Americans would never dare to fight the British troops. These sentiments I had constantly and warmly opposed; assuring him the Continent was engaged in the opposition to the present measures; and if blood should be drawn, he would be convinced of the spirit and resolution of Americans. These facts he assented to the last time I saw him, and acknowledged I had not deceived him; which fully explains this passage. That the letter is totally fallacious, as far as evidence is admissible, you cannot doubt, Sir. The pains taken to send letters is, in every instance, incontestably false. The matter of sending cannon from Providence, as there related, is equally so, and probably calculated to effect political purposes. Why, then, may it please your Honour, shall unbounded credit be given to that letter, which bears such glaring marks of fallacy and design, and couched in terms totally inconsonant with the conduct of my whole life; against the conviction arising from that conduct; against my solemn asseveration, and against sundry concurring circumstances, to prove that it was meant as a piece of political deceit to serve my Country? If I had intended to commence a spy, Sir, why did I not communicate other matters than those which were of publick notoriety? The affair of robbing the King's stores in New-York is adopting his very language. The expedition against Canada is barely mentioned, and introduced merely because it was published at the same time and in the same papers with the matter mentioned by himself; it was impossible but he should have known it, and therefore had I suppressed it, it might have excited a jealousy no way favourable to my purpose. Were there not sundry important matters then agitating, which I was well acquainted with? If I had been an enemy, why did I not mention those matters, which to communicate would be to defeat? Were I that enemy, may it please your Honour, which the tongue of slander proclaims me to be, should I have made such an ostentatious parade of our strength and resources? Should I not rather have dwelt with a malicious pleasure on our weakness? Should I not rather have advised the enemy where to attack us with assurance of success? Should I not rather have encouraged them to prosecute the war with vigour, than to desist from hostilities, and propose terms of accommodation? Certain I am, Sir, the letter bears the impression of an anxious friend to his Country. I have there expressed a firm loyalty for the King; so has this House, in every publick proceeding. I have told him, and confirmed it with abundant facts, that the Americans were determined vigorously to defend their rights; so have you, Gentlemen, asserted in the strongest terms. I have recommended, with all the warmth of an honest zeal, to put an end to the work of death; is not this the universal wish, Sir? You will say, perhaps, I conversed with him in the language of an enemy. He is a friend to Government, so called, Sir. I wrote ad hominem; I wrote ad captum. Where, may it please your Honour, is the crime, unless it be a crime to pursue indirect measures, at a time of publick danger, to prevent a publick calamity? The manner in which the letter was written, the mode of address and conveyance, have likewise like damned fools, in robbing the King's stores, as Government intended to grant them some exclusive privileges in trade, had they continued loyal; it will now be a rendezvous for British Troops. We know well that you are divided; that your people are discouraged; that you want discipline, artillery, and ammunition; and Government has taken effectual care that you shall not be supplied from other Powers. I have wondered that we have not heard from you; difference in politicks has not cancelled my friendship for you. Let me entreat you not to take up arms against your rightful King, as your friend Warren did, for which he has paid dearly. I cannot send your sulky, and the other matters you sent for; you may thank your own people for that, who first set the example by preventing any thing from being brought to Town. I think you might have sent us a bit of fresh pork now and then. You see Hancock and Adams are attainted already. If you cannot pass the lines, you may come in Captain Wallace, via Rhode-Island. If you do not come immediately, write to me in this character, and direct your letter to Major Cane, on His Majesty's service, and deliver it to Captain Wallace; it will come safe. We have often been informed your people intend to attack the Town. By God, I believe they had such a dose on Bunker's Hill as to cool their courage. Your sister has been for running away; Kitty has been very sick; we wished you to see her; she is now picking up.

"I remain your sincere friend and brother, I. F.

"P. S. Don't fail to write soon."

been much condemned; but if it be considered, Sir, that this was the mode prescribed by the person to whom I wrote; that affected secrecy and an ostensible coincidence in sentiment were indispensable, in order to effect my design, those of candid and liberal sentiments will readily pardon me. I have been used, Sir, to direct the reins in my little theatre of politicks. I had no suspicion of evil, because I meant none. The letter was intrusted to a man I did not know; whom I never saw. Two months it lay where I could easily have obtained it. I never was one moment anxious about it. Surely, may it please your Honour, it will afford a presumption of my innocent intention, at least, when the letter was lodged in the hands of a stranger who resided in the very centre of my friends and relations, that I never was solicitous enough to write to one of those to secure it.

"I will entreat the patience of the honourable House for a moment longer. When I was in Boston, exposed to certain hazard, solicited, persecuted, and personally obnoxious, did I ever recede one moment from the cause of my Country? Though frequently threatened and abused, as I passed the streets, my house assaulted, and my windows broken in the night, was I ever intimidated from pursuing, with my utmost vigour, the interest of the publick? And now, Sir, when the Colonies are united, the opposition general and formidable, my person secure, and no other temptation to revolt but the hopes of pardon, to be thus influenced at this time must betray a versatility bordering upon insanity. Were my small, but sincere services ill requited; were I entirely neglected in the dispensation of publick benefits, I might be suspected of apostacy, from chagrin and disappointment. But the matter is so totally different, that, when the establishment of an hospital was in contemplation, I had every satisfactory encouragement that I should be appointed; and in such a way as to have my utmost wishes gratified.

"The result of this inquiry, may it please your Honour, the determination of this important body, is to me of the last importance. I solicit not life; that I have long held in my hand, a ready, a devoted oblation to my Country. I plead for more than life. I plead, in spite of one act of precipitation, and even that from a virtuous intention, I plead a restoration to your confidence and esteem—to the esteem and confidence of my Country—which I have never forfeited. If I have inadvertently erred, judge my mistakes with candour. The irregularity of a measure which they are unable to account for has alarmed, has startled my friends. Their determination is suspended; it rests upon yours.

"I demand your confidence, gentlemen; the warmest bosom here does not flame with a brighter zeal for the security, happiness, and liberties of America, than mine. Consider, gentlemen, the adopted character sustained through that letter, consider the apparent design, and attend to the concluding urgent recommendation of an immediate accommodation; weigh the labours of an active life against the indiscretion of an hour. Be pleased to consider, Sir, if the letter had arrived, had it not produced the good intended, it could not have produced any mischief; but it never arrived, never produced any ill consequences but to the guiltless though unfortunate author. Consider, gentlemen, what a miserable, what an embarrassed situation I shall be flung into, if so unhappy as to incur your censure; here I shall be wretched indeed—subjected to the sting of invective, pointed with savage asperity—doubly wretched in having no sanctuary from reproach and ruin. The most obstinate and malicious enemy to his country finds a secure asylum in that retreat where I have sacrificed my fortune for you, and which I have effectually barred by my incessant exertions in your service. To your wisdom, gentlemen, to your justice, to your tenderness, I cheerfully submit my fate."

Here I was questioned respecting sundry matters which were uttered during my defence, by sundry members of the honourable House, and was directed to withdraw, under the conduct of the guard. Previous to my departure from the House, I addressed myself to the honourable Speaker, informing the House I desired to be admitted to bail; otherwise, I was fearful of falling a martyr to the severities of my imprisonment; and then withdrew.

From my Prison in CAMBRIDGE, November 1, 1775.

Attest: B. C., JUN.

Then the Speaker asked Dr. Church, whether he gave the Council of War the answers therein contained? He answered, not exactly.

Dr. Church was then asked, whether the Letter which had been read was a true copy of his Letter. He answered, the translation is not literally true.

An adjournment was moved for. Whereupon,

Ordered, That the Committee for providing for the Guards direct them to attend Dr. Church to a proper house, and from thence to return with him to the bar of this House, at three o'clock, P. M.

Afternoon.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That Mr. Gerry go to the honourable Board, and acquaint them that seats will be assigned them in the House, if they would choose to be present at the hearing of Dr. Church. Who returned, that he had delivered the message. Dr. Church was again admitted.

He then presented to the Speaker his Letter, as it had been read, and offered a correction of some errors (on separate paper) which he said were made either in deciphering, or by himself, when he transcribed it in ciphers.

The Speaker asked him, if the Letter with his corrections, was a true copy of that which he attempted to convey to Boston. He answered, I believe it is.

Various questions were put to him, which he answered, and declared that the only motive he had in writing was the publick good; that he took care to exaggerate our strength and firmness, with a view to dishearten and intimidate; that he particularly enlarged his accounts of our ammunition, at a time when an attack might have proved fatal, on account of the scarcity of that article; and that he was induced to the practice of art and dissimulation, which in such cases he thought admissible, by the hopes of obtaining intelligence from his brother Flemming, who was much devoted to Administration, which would serve the general cause—as he had before gained information of importance by such means, which he had employed much to our advantage.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That Dr. Church have leave to retire, under the charge of the Messenger of the House, so far only, as that if there should be occasion he may be again brought to the bar.

Ordered, That the Messenger of the House, under the conduct of the Guard, return Dr. Church to the place from whence he was taken.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That Mr. Speaker, Major Hawley, Colonel Orne, Mr. Gerry, and Mr. Mills, be a Committee to take into consideration the conduct of Benjamin Church, Esquire, and such order as is proper for this House to take thereon, and report.

Saturday, October 28, 1775.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That the Galleries be kept clear for the future, unless in any case the House order otherwise.

James Prescott, Esquire, brought down a Letter, in answer to General Washington's of the 6th instant, reported by a Committee on the same.

Benjamin White, Esq., brought down a Memorial from Jeremiah Powell, Esquire, in behalf of the Committee of Safety of North-Yarmouth, and Isaac Parsons, in behalf of the Committee of Safety of New-Gloucester, expressing their apprehensions of an intention in the enemy to take possession of Falmouth-Neck, and to improve the harbour the approaching winter, for the King's Ships, and the dangerous consequences that would ensue from such a measure; and praying for assistance.

This was accompanied with a Letter from Jeremiah Powell, Esq., informing of Deserters from the fleet that burnt Falmouth.

Afternoon.

The Report of the Committee for considering a more expeditious method of settling Accounts, after debate had thereon, and amendment made, passed as follows:

Whereas an attention to the more important affairs of the Government, in the present times of difficulty and distress, renders it impracticable for this House to receive and examine the numerous Accounts now daily exhibited against the Government, agreeable to the mode heretofore usually practised; and the payment thereof may be greatly delayed, to the detriment of individuals as well as the community:

Therefore, Resolved, That Col. Porter, Nathan Cushing, Esquire, Mr. Wood, Mr. Durfee, Mr. Watson, Major Brooks, and Captain Stone, be, and they hereby are appointed a Committee, until the further order of this House, to receive, examine, and, in behalf of this House, finally pass upon all Accounts, not otherwise committed, which shall be presented to them for payment of services done, and articles bought, by order of Congress or the General Court, and properly vouched; and the doings of said Committee shall be considered as valid as any vote or resolve of the House, touching said Accounts. And said Committee, or any four of them, who are hereby appointed a quorum, are directed to open an office, and advertise the publick thereof, and of this Resolve, that the business may be constantly attended and effectually performed.

And said Committee are further directed to keep in a book a true copy of all Accounts which shall be passed by them, and sent to the Board for concurrence and payment; and to cause the same to be laid before the House, for perusal and inspection, once, or oftener, in each session, as the House shall judge necessary.

Also, Resolved, That the Secretary be, and he hereby is directed to keep such Accounts as shall be passed by such Committee, and in consequence thereof concurred and ordered to be paid by the honourable Board, in separate files.

Also, Resolved, That the honourable Board be, and they hereby are empowered, in the recess of the General Court, to concur and order payment for Accounts which shall have been passed by the Committee aforesaid, as effectually as if the General Court had been then sitting.

Monday, October 30, 1775.

The Committee on the Petition of William Davis* reported as follows, which was read and accepted, viz:

As it is of the utmost importance that this Colony be well provided with Gunpowder, in order to make a proper stand against our merciless enemy: therefore,

Resolved, That the Petition of William Davis be granted; and that the said Davis be, and he hereby is permitted to send the Sloop Reliance to any foreign ports, in order to purchase and bring into this Colony a cargo of Gunpowder, provided that the said Davis, or the Master of said Sloop, shall give his Bond, with sufficient surety or sureties, to the Receiver-General of this Colony, in the penal sum of two thousand Pounds, conditioned, that if the said Sloop shall, bona fide, bring the Powder she shall take on board during said voyage into some port in any of the United Colonies, (Boston and Nantucket excepted,) and shall take on board no other cargo, in order for said voyage, than cash only; and, also, no more provisions than what shall be allowed by a permit, under the hands of the Committee of Correspondence for the Town of Dartmouth, as being absolutely necessary for the prosecution of said voyage, then the said Bond shall be void; or else, to stand and remain in full force, effect, and value.

In Council, October 30, 1775: Read and concurred.

Charles Chauncy, Esq., brought down from the honourable Board an Order for the appointment of a day for a general Thanksgiving, passed in Council viz:

"In Council, October 30, 1775.

"Ordered, That James Otis and Eldad Taylor, Esqs., with such as the honourable House shall join, be a Committee to appoint some day for holding a general Thanks-

* Representation of the Committee of Safety and Correspondence for the Towns of Brunswick, Bowdoinham, and Topsham: Beg leave to inform this honourable Court, that being informed that nine sail of vessels had arrived at Kennebeck, and had dispersed themselves through the various branches of said river, and were collecting fire-wood, butter, and other articles, we, therefore, thinking it our duty to wait on them, and inquire into the legality of their proceeding, have found that they had in no wise followed the direction of the Congresses or General Assembly, but were come here with only clearance from that part of the port of Boston called Nantucket, without consent of any Committee whatever, by them signified, and in direct opposition to a resolve of Congress of the 9th of June last.

We, therefore, being twelve in number, of the Committee of the several Towns above mentioned, having personally and particularly examined into this matter, and find, by the master's own confession, that they brought with them no license from any Committee whatever, and that all their pretensions for carrying out of this place any of the above articles was a permit from one Samuel Goodwin and Samuel Emerson, two of the Committee of Safety from the Town of Pownalborough, to some of said vessels to sail out of said river, which we thought not legal. We, therefore, taking the whole into our serious consideration, have ordered said vessels to be stopped, and hauled up, until the mind of this honourable Court is known; which determination of ours has been put into execution, and waits your Honours' approbation.

The Committee on the Resolves concerning the Poor of Boston, reported. Read, amended, and accepted, as follows, viz:

Whereas, by two resolves of Congress passed the 1st of May and the 1st of July last, the provision made for the reception and support of the poor of the Towns of Boston and Charlestown, who are driven from those Towns by the cruel hand of tyranny and oppression, is confined to a certain number of Towns in this Colony, as appears by a schedule annexed to said resolves; and whereas numbers of said poor, having relations and connexions in other Towns, or in prospect of some employ, are removed or are about removing themselves to other Towns than those mentioned in said schedules:

Therefore, Resolved, That such suffering poor shall be allowed to remove into any Town in this Colony, they producing a certificate from any of the Selectmen, Town Clerk, or the Overseers of the Poor of Boston or Charlestown, that they are of the poor of the Town to which said Selectmen, &c., does or did in March last belong; and it is hereby recommended to the Selectmen of all such Towns, where said poor are or may be removed, to provide for and employ them in the best and most prudent manner till the further order of this Court; and to all the inhabitants of this Colony, that they may be treated with that humanity and tenderness which their merits and sufferings in the common cause of their Country have entitled them to. And every Town in the Colony that shall receive and provide necessary provisions, fuel or clothing, for the support of such suffering poor, shall be allowed and paid therefor; and said sufferers shall not in future be considered as the poor of that Town to which they remove.

And whereas, from the present confusion, some of the poor of Boston and Charlestown have removed, or may remove out of said Towns without a proper certificate, and the Towns to which such persons have removed, or may remove, may refuse to receive and provide for them for want of the same: It is, notwithstanding, recommended to the Selectmen of such Towns, that if, upon careful inquiry, they shall judge any such person or persons to be of the poor of either of said Towns, that such provision be made as is necessary to prevent their sufferings, until such certificate can be procured, and such Towns shall be reimbursed as is before provided.

And whereas some Towns in the Colony may have a larger number of the poor of the Towns of Boston and Charlestown than has been heretofore assigned them, and more than they are willing to retain, the Selectmen of those Towns may cause such poor to be removed to some Town that shall not have the proportion that has been assigned them, or to any other Town said poor may choose, that shall not object to their being sent to them; and the Selectmen or Overseers of the Poor of such Towns are requested to receive and make provision for them, as is before directed; all reasonable charges attending such removal to be paid by this Colony.

And it is further Resolved, That the Selectmen of the several Towns within this Colony, and such Committees as have been appointed by Congress or this Court, who have transported or received and supported any of the poor of the Towns of Boston or Charlestown, according to the resolves of the late Congress of this Colony or of this Court, relative to such poor, be, and hereby are directed to exhibit to this Court fair accounts of the expense of transporting or receiving and supporting any such poor from the time such expense began, to the 1st day of October last, expressing the name and age of each person so received and supported; also, that the Selectmen of the several Towns, who shall still support any of the poor of the Towns aforesaid, be directed, from and after the 1st day of October last, to make up their accounts to the end of every three months, and exhibit them to this Court; and that William Cooper, Esq., cause these resolves to be forthwith printed in handbills, and transmitted to the Selectmen of each Town in this Colony, that the several Towns in this Colony, and the poor sufferers of the Towns of Boston and Charlestown, may have a clear and precise knowledge of what this Court has in their justice and compassion done for the relief and support of those sufferers.

And it is hereby recommended to the Committee of Correspondence and Selectmen of each Town in this Colony, to apply to the manufacturers of Fire-Arms in their respective Towns, and afford them all necessary encouragement, and to post this Resolve, that the inhabitants of each Town may promote this salutary measure.

[Thus far is proposed to be published.]

The Committee for considering the conduct of Benjamin Church, Esq., &c., reported.

Whereas, from certain facts expressly acknowledged and confessed by Benjamin Church, Jun., Esq., a member of the said House, at their bar, on Friday, the 27th day of October last, it manifestly appears that he, the said Benjamin Church, in the month of July last, did endeavour to carry on a secret correspondence with the enemy in Boston, highly criminal and dangerous:

And whereas it also appears, from the said facts so confessed, that there are grounds for a violent presumption, that before that time he had secretly communicated intelligence to the said enemy, most injurious and destructive to this and all the United American Colonies; and as it is of the highest importance to this Colony that this House should not in any degree connive at such wicked and detestable practices, nor afford any protection to such traitorous criminals; but, on the other hand, in every proper way testify to the world their utmost abhorrence of such deceitful conduct, horrible ingratitude, and breach of trust:

It is therefore Resolved, That he, the said Benjamin Church, be expelled this House, and he is accordingly hereby utterly expelled the same, and his seat therein declared vacant; and that this House will not afford to him, the said Benjamin, any of that special privilege and protection which every worthy and honest member of this body is, by the law and Constitution, entitled to, may challenge, and which this House will always grant.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That a Precept issue to the late inhabitants of the Town of Boston, to return a Member, if they see cause, to represent them in the Great and General Court, in the room of Benjamin Church, Jun., Esq., and that Mr. Pitts report a form for the same.

The Committee on the state of the Schooner and Cargo belonging to George Erving and Capt. Wormwell reported. Read and accepted.

Whereas the Committee of Correspondence of the Town of Plymouth did, some time past, take into their possession three fourth parts of the Cargo of said Schooner, consisting of Rum, Sugar, and Molasses, belonging to George Erving, inhabitant of Boston, and have detained the said Schooner, three-fourths of which belong to said Erving, waiting the orders of this Court: therefore,

Resolved, That the said Committee of Correspondence be, and they hereby are ordered to sell and dispose of that part of the Cargo aforesaid to the Commissary-General of the Continental Army, he paying the price usually given for such articles; which money shall be paid to the Treasurer and Receiver-General of this Colony, to be appropriated in such manner as this Court shall hereafter direct.

And be it further Resolved, That the said Committee be directed to have the said Schooner appraised by three men, under oath, and that they make return of said appraisement to this Court, as soon as may be; and that the said Schooner be delivered to his Excellency General Washington's order, for him to improve her as an armed vessel, for defence of the Country, he giving his receipt therefor; a duplicate of which receipt said Committee are directed to lodge in the Treasurer's office aforesaid, as soon as may be.

The Committee on the Memorial of the Selectmen of Newburyport* reported. Read and accepted; and

Resolved, That the Poor of the Town of Boston, that are now in the Town of Newburyport, be destined in the manner following, viz:

To the Town of Groton: Captain Philip Bass, wife, and three children; Widow Bounds and two children; and Peter Meers and wife.

Andover: Christopher Brazer and wife, and five children; Christopher Brazer, Jun., and wife, and one child; James Hinkes and wife, and two children; Lewis Follings and wife.

Leominster: Joannah Trevoy and three children; Ambrose Colby and wife, and three children; Mrs. Patterson and two children; Mary Calef and daughter-in-law, and two children.

Lunenburg: Walter Piper and wife, and five children; Walter Piper, Jun., wife, and mother, and seven children; Jos. Grant, wife, and mother, and four children.

* Memorial of the Town of Newburyport sheweth: That in consequence of a resolve of the late Congress of this Colony, a number of the poor inhabitants of the Town of Boston have taken residence in this Town, viz: thirty-five adults and forty-three children, the greater part of whom have been here for the last three months; and that the supplies they have called for, and have been furnished with, amount nearly to sixty Pounds, lawful money, though all frugality, consistent with their necessities, has been used; now, as little or no provisions are raised in this Town but brought from the country, and as wood, a necessary article the approaching season, must be scarce and dear, from our communication with the eastern country being so impeded, and in the winter season provisions of all kinds will be dearer, and the expense of maintenance will be nearly double, your memorialists apprehend that the beforementioned people may be as well accommodated, and at less expense, in some of the farming Towns back of the sea-coast, and pray your Honours to take orders thereupon; at the same time expressing no dissatisfaction at further supplying said people, if your Honours shall judge it expedient; and they further beg leave of your Honours to give order that what they are already in advance should be refunded, upon authenticated accounts being exhibited, as their Town aforesaid has been at heavy charges in preparation for defence from the enemy, &c., the preceding season.

Littleton: Widow Elizabeth Bescom; Widow Johnson; Widow Mary York.

And the Selectmen of the Towns of Groton, Andover, Leominster, Lunenburg, and Littleton, are directed to apply to the Selectmen of Newburyport, for their proportion of said Poor; and by receiving a certificate that they are of the Poor of Boston, and their names, age, and the time when they came out of Boston; and they are to transport them to their several Towns, according to their destination; and to be paid, out of the publick Treasury, for their cost in procuring and transporting said Poor of Boston to their respective Towns. And the Secretary is hereby directed to furnish each of the Towns of Groton, Andover, Leominster, Lunenburg, and Littleton, with an attested copy of this Resolve, as soon as may be.

In Council, November 3, 1775: Read and concurred.

Benjamin Lincoln, Esq., brought down from the honourable Board the Resolve for completing the Muster-Rolls.

Colonel Prescott brought down from the Council Board the Resolve relative to the disposition of the Poor of Boston.

A Message from the major part of the honourable Council, by the Secretary:

"Gentlemen of the House of Representatives:

"The Council view with the deepest concern the unhappy dissension between them and the honourable House of Representatives, relative to the right of appointing the military officers in this Colony, and the growing ill consequences which necessarily result from such disunion.

"The Council have no desire unduly to extend and exercise the powers vested in them, and are far from having a disposition to altercate with the honourable House; they wish a coalition of sentiment with them in every point. No motive short of what appears to them to be their indispensable duty would be sufficient to induce them to claim an exclusive right of appointing such officers. Could they give it up consistent with the obligations they feel themselves under to adhere strictly to the Charter, as recommended by the honourable the American Congress, they would do it with pleasure.

"In order, therefore, to put an end to this dispute, and have it ascertained with whom is the right of appointing such officers, the Council propose and offer it for the consideration of the honourable House, that they immediately make a joint application to the honourable the American Congress, by whose advice and countenance this Colony have set up and now exercise the powers of Government, and to whose counsels it is necessary we should conform, for their determination thereon.

"Council Chamber, November 3, 1775."

Read, and Ordered, That Mr. Speaker, Major Hawley, Mr. Gerry, Colonel Grout, and Colonel Orne, with such as the honourable Board shall join, be a Committee to consider and report a method of appointing Officers in the Militia, that shall be agreeable to a Resolve of the Continental Congress, and best calculated to promote the interests of the Colony.

In Council, November 4, 1775: Read, and unanimously non-concurred.

Resolved, That his Excellency the General be desired to direct Major Mason to proceed to the Towns of Concord, Worcester, Lancaster, and Leicester, there to view the Cannon now in those Towns, and such and so many of them, being the property of this Colony, as he shall judge fit for use, and necessary for the defence of said harbour, the Town of Gloucester have leave to remove to that place; and that it be earnestly recommended to the Selectmen or Committee of the Towns aforesaid, in whose care any Cannon, not the property of this Colony, may be, and viewed as aforesaid, that they deliver them to the Town of Gloucester, on this important occasion, if needed. And that Major Mason, or the Selectmen of the Town of Gloucester, have liberty, on the credit of this Colony, to procure, from any Town or person who may have it to spare, two barrels of Powder, to be replaced as soon as the state of this Colony will admit of it, and if not replaced, such Town or person to receive pay therefor out of the Colony Treasury, at a rate not exceeding five Shillings per pound; and said Gloucester to be accountable therefor to this Court. Whereas this Court are informed that the Hon. General Sullivan, upon information of the arrival of Captain William Johnson, of the Schooner Britannia, has sent an express to the said Johnson, with directions to send to him, at Portsmouth, part or the whole of the Powder which should be imported in said Vessel for the defence of said place, under its present apprehensions and distresses, from a supposition that the said Vessel was fitted out by this Colony, at the expense of the Continent: And whereas this Government hath not fitted out said Vessel at the expense of the Continent, and have not charged any disbursements for such purpose; and having draughted from the Towns of this Colony considerable quantities of Powder, for the Continental Army, are not in a situation to spare Ammunition, under its present circumstances, to their sister Colony, or its capital as aforesaid; and also are in want of said article for the immediate defence of our sea-port Towns, as well as to answer the demands of the Penobscot Truckmaster's supplying the Indians of said place; therefore,

Resolved, That Doctor Russell, of North-Yarmouth, be, and hereby is empowered forthwith to repair to the Hon. General Sullivan aforesaid, for such part of the said Powder as he shall have received, and convey four half-barrels thereof to Jedediah Preble, Esq., Truckmaster of Penobscot, and take the residue thereof, and one hundred of the Arms brought in the same Vessel, under his own charge, for the defence of Falmouth, to be deposited as he shall judge best till the further order of this Court; and the residue thereof, if the said Powder and Arms have not arrived at Portsmouth, that then the said Doctor Russell proceed to Boothbay, and apply to Mr. Nathaniel Craft, who was sent for said Powder by the Committee of Supplies of this Colony, or to Captain Johnson aforesaid, if he hath not yet delivered the same, and receive and cause to be distributed the said Powder and Arms, as before provided in this Resolve; and the said Nathaniel Craft, or William Johnson, is directed to deliver the same accordingly.

Samuel Holt, Esq., brought down from the honourable Board a Proclamation for a general Thanksgiving. Read and concurred.

"In Council, November 4, 1775.

"Although, in consequence of the unnatural, cruel, and barbarous measures adopted and pursued by the British Administration, great and distressing calamities are brought upon our oppressed Country, and on this Colony in particular; we feel the dreadful effects of civil war, by which America is stained with the blood of her valiant sons, who have bravely fallen in the laudable defence of our rights and privileges: Our capital, once the seat of justice, opulence, and virtue, is unjustly wrested from its proper owners, who are obliged to flee from the iron hand of tyranny, or are held in the unrelenting arms of oppression; our sea-ports greatly distressed, and Towns burnt by the foes, who have acted the parts of barbarous incendiaries: And although the wise and holy Governour of the world has, in his righteous providence, sent drought into this Colony, and wasting sickness into many of our Towns, yet we have the greatest reason to adore and praise the supreme Disposer of Events, who deals infinitely better with us than we deserve, and, amidst all his judgments, hath remembered mercy, by causing the voice of health again to be heard amongst us; instead of famine, affording to an ungrateful people a competency of the necessaries and comforts of life; in remarkably preserving and protecting our troops, when in apparent danger, while our enemies, with all their boasted skill and strength, have met with loss, disappointment, and defeat; and, in the course of his good providence, the Father of Mercies hath bestowed upon us many other favours, which call for our grateful acknowledgments: Therefore,

"We have thought fit, with the advice of Council and the House of Representatives, to appoint Thursday, the twenty-third day of November instant, to be observed as a day of publick Thanksgiving throughout this Colony; hereby calling upon Ministers and People to meet for religious worship on said day, and devoutly to offer up their unfeigned praises to Almighty God, the source and benevolent bestower of all good, for his affording the necessary means of subsistence, though our commerce has been prevented, and the supplies from the fishery denied us: That such a measure of health is enjoyed among us; that the lives of our officers and soldiers have been so remarkably preserved, while our enemies have fell before them: That the vigorous efforts which have been used to excite the savage vengeance of the wilderness, and rouse the Indians to arms, that unavoidable destruction might come upon our frontiers, have been almost miraculously defeated: That our unnatural enemies, instead of ravaging the Country with uncontrolled sway, are confined within such narrow limits, to their own mortification and distress, environed by an American Army, brave and determined: That such a band of union, founded upon the best principles, unites the American Colonies: That our rights and privileges, both civil and religious, are so far preserved to us, notwithstanding all the attempts of our barbarous enemies to deprive us of them. And to offer up fervent and humble prayers to Almighty God, for the whole British Empire, especially for the United American Colonies: That he would bless our civil rulers, and lead them into wise and prudent measures in this dark and difficult day: That he would endow our General Court with all that wisdom which is profitable to direct: That he would graciously smile upon our endeavours to restore peace, preserve our rights and privileges, and hand them down to posterity: That he would give wisdom to the American Congress, equal to their important station: That he would direct the Generals and the American Armies, wherever employed, and give them success and victory: That he would preserve and strengthen the harmony of the United Colonies: That he would graciously pour out his spirit upon all orders of men through the land; bring us to a hearty repentance and reformation; purify and sanctify all his churches: That he would make ours Emanuel's land: That he would spread the knowledge of the Redeemer through the whole earth, and fill the world with his glory.

"And all servile labour is forbidden on said day.

"God save the People."

"Read and accepted; and thereupon,

"Ordered, That the foregoing Proclamation be signed by the major part of the Council, and that a printed copy thereof be transmitted to each Religious Society through this Colony."

Upon a motion, Ordered, That Major Hawley go with a message to the honourable Board, and desire that they would not adjourn for the present, as the House had a matter of importance to lay before them. Who reported that he had delivered the message.

Major Moody, Mr. Mills, and Mr. Story, were appointed to sort and count the votes; who, having attended the service, reported that General Joseph Frye was chosen.

Whereupon, the House passed the following Resolve:

Whereas it appears indispensably necessary that immediate assistance should be granted to the County of Cumberland, and particularly to the Town of Falmouth, in said County, at this time of distress: therefore,

Resolved, That General Joseph Frye be, and he hereby is appointed to take the command of the whole of the men stationed in the said County of Cumberland, for the defence of the sea-coast, till the further order of this Court; and that he be empowered to order such intrenchments or fortifications to be erected at Falmouth, for their defence and protection, as he shall think absolutely necessary; and that he retain two of the said Companies generally at Falmouth, and, in case of any emergency, that he cause the Militia of said County, or any part thereof, to be alarmed and mustered, and, when mustered, to be under his command and direction, and to be by him discharged as soon as the service will admit.

And it is further Resolved, That Doctor Edward Russell deliver to the said General Frye the Powder and Arms he shall receive in consequence of the orders of this Court, to be by him used in defending and protecting the said County of Cumberland and Town of Falmouth, and annoying the enemy; he to be accountable to this Court for the same.

Should such an event take place, and the enemy, by a near approach to the Town, be able to cannonade and burn the same, a great proportion of its inhabitants would be instantly reduced to a situation which your petitioners beg leave to be excused from describing. 'Tis with reluctance that your petitioners apply, on any occasion, to this honourable Court, when so pressed with the most important concerns; but the duty which they owe to their constituents obliges them, in their behalf, to pray your Honours that the wages and billeting money due to the established soldiers, posted in said Town, may be forthwith ordered to be paid them; that some supply of ammunition, if the circumstances of the Government will admit thereof, be sent to the inhabitants, to enable them, with advantage, to improve a fortification which, at a considerable expense and labour, they have lately began, and have now nearly erected; and that such provision for receiving into the country and supporting those inhabitants of said Town who, in case of the destruction of their habitations, would be destitute of the means of subsistence, may be made, as to your Honours shall seem meet. And no direction is given in the said Act, what preliminary steps are necessary to be taken by Innholders, Retailers, or common Victuallers, in order to qualify them for the said employments:

"It is therefore Resolved, That before any such Licenses be granted to Innholders, Retailers, or common Victuallers, every person applying to the several Sessions as aforesaid, before they are licensed, shall produce a Certificate from the major part of the Selectmen of the Town where they dwell, recommending them to be persons of sober conversation, suitably qualified and provided for the exercise of such an employment, and, particularly, that they be firmly attached to the rights and interests of their Country; and that this Resolve be published in handbills, and sent into each Town in this Colony."

"Council Chamber, November 7, 1775.

"Gentlemen of the House of Representatives:

"We have taken into consideration the two letters herewith sent, dated at Falmouth, the 2d of November, current; one from the Honourable Colonel Freeman, and the other from the Committee of that Town, purporting the distressed state of the inhabitants thereof, and the relief they need. For the special defence and safety of the Town of Falmouth, and that vicinity, we have appointed Gen. Joseph Frye to take the command of the men stationed in the County of Cumberland who were raised for the defence of the Sea-Coasts, until our further orders; and have empowered him, upon any emergency, to alarm and call together the Militia of the said County, or such part thereof as their safety may require, and them to discharge as soon as the service will admit; and to lead and conduct them and the other forces, and with them to resist, encounter, and repel, by force of arms, all and every person or persons who shall attempt the enterprise, destruction, invasion, or annoyance of the said Town and County; and to cause such fortifications to be erected at Falmouth aforesaid, and elsewhere, as he shall judge necessary for their defence.

"We earnestly recommend to you, gentlemen, to take into consideration, immediately, the very peculiar and distressing circumstances of the Town of Falmouth and the County aforesaid, and grant them such further relief as their necessities so evidently demand."

Who reported, that he had delivered the message.

Joseph Palmer, Esquire, came down from the Council Board, and said that the Board had unanimously non-concurred the Resolve of the House of the 4th of this instant, appointing General Joseph Frye to take the command of the whole of the men stationed in the County of Cumberland.

Colonel Prescott brought down from the honourable Board a Letter from the Committee of the Continental Congress, for collecting an account of the hostilities committed by the Ministerial Troops and Navy in America, since March last, the number and value of the Buildings destroyed and Vessels seized.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. III.

"In Council, November 7, 1775.

"Read, and Ordered, That Joseph Palmer, Esq., with such as the honourable House shall join, be a Committee to collect a true account of all the hostilities committed by the Ministerial Troops and Navy within this Colony, and the evidences of the truth of such account, agreeable to the above Resolve of the General Congress; and that the Committee sit in the recess of the Court for the above purpose."

Colonel Prescott brought down from the honourable Board a Letter from a Gentleman at the Continental Congress to Joseph Palmer, Esq. Read, and ordered to lie.

The Committee for considering a Resolve for the payment of the Militia and Minute-Men who mustered on and about the 19th of April, reported. Read and accepted.

Resolved, That each person, whether in the American Army or not, who, on or after the 19th of April last, being then a Captain or other Officer of this Colony, did, in consequence of the alarm made on that day, march from home, with the command of any Company or party of Minute-Men, or others, for the defence of this Colony, against the Ministerial Troops, be, and he hereby is directed to make up a Roll of the travel and service of himself and the said men under his command who did not enlist into the Colony Army, and therein exhibit the number of miles which each man travelled from and to his home, at one penny per mile for the expense of travelling; and also the time which each man was in service, computing from the time he left home to the time he left the place of rendezvous, and also allowing one day for each twenty miles from said place of rendezvous to his home. And with regard to such men as marched as aforesaid and enlisted into the Army, each Captain or other Officer, as aforesaid, is respectively directed to exhibit in his Roll the time of such men's service, computing from the time they left their respective homes to the time they enlisted into said Army, without exhibiting their travel, as that is already ordered to be inserted in the Rolls which the Officers under whom such men enlisted are directed to make up and return.

And it is further Ordered, That the sums of the Pay which shall be inserted in such Rolls, for the service of the Officers and Privates, shall be such as the time of their respective service will amount to, at the rates following, that is to say: Captains at six Pounds per month; First Lieutenants at four Pounds; Second Lieutenants at three Pounds, ten Shillings; Sergeants at two Pounds, eight Shillings; Corporals, Fifers, and Drummers, at two Pounds, four Shillings; and Privates at two Pounds each per month, counting twenty-eight days for a month; and that the said Rolls shall be authenticated by the oaths of the Officers who shall make them up, and a column left therein to insert proper deductions for entertainment received from Innholders and others, as hereafter provided.

Also Resolved, That the Captains and other Officers aforesaid be, and they hereby are respectively directed to make up said Rolls, as soon as may be, and lodge them in the Secretary's Office, for the consideration of this Court; and the payment of the contents of all the said Rolls shall be stayed, until the Accounts of the Innholders and others, who afforded entertainment or money, to bear their expenses, to the men borne on said Rolls, in their march to and from the place or places of rendezvous, shall be preferred and considered by this Court; and all persons having such demands are directed to exhibit their Accounts to this Court, on or before the 20th day of December next, and such sums as by this Court shall be allowed on such Accounts, for the entertainment of such men, respectively, shall be stopped on such Rolls, and deducted out of the sums which shall appear to be due to the men borne on such Rolls for the discharging such Accounts; and all the Accounts of Innholders or others who afforded entertainment to the said Soldiers, on their march or on their return home, shall be vouched by the receipts of such Soldiers, or of the Officers under whom they marched.

And it is further Ordered, That all such persons as marched upon the aforesaid occasion, and continued any time in the service of this Colony, in the character of Field-Officers, whether of the Militia or Minute-Men, and who did not enlist into the Army, be allowed and directed to make up the Accounts or Rolls of their service, from the time they severally marched from home to the time they arrived at their respective homes, at the rates following, viz: Colonels, twelve Pounds; Lieutenant-Colonels, nine Pounds, twelve Shillings; Majors, eight Pounds; and Adjutants, three Pounds, twelve Shillings, each, per month; and lodge them in the Secretary's Office, for the consideration of the Court.

And whereas some of the men who marched on the alarm aforesaid to the places of rendezvous did from thence return to their homes, without leave of their respective Officers:

It is further Resolved, That this Court highly disapprove of such unjustifiable conduct, whereby not only the lives of their worthy friends and fellow-countrymen left in the field, but also the rights and liberties of their Country, were greatly endangered. And while the Court, from an aversion to censure those persons, have forbore to order them to be discriminated in the Muster-Rolls, it is expected that such conduct in future be wholly avoided in this Colony; that the Officers and Privates of the Militia faithfully attend their duty, when properly called thereto; and that, on all alarms, each person repair to his place of parade, observe orders, and never quit his post, until regularly dismissed; and all persons who in future shall disobey this Resolve, will make it indispensably necessary for this Court, as well as Colony, to exercise their utmost resentment against them therefor.

Ordered, That a copy of the foregoing Resolves be attested by the Secretary, and that Mr. Pitts procure it to be printed in the Cambridge, Watertown, and Worcester Papers.

In Council, November 9, 1775: Read and concurred.

Wednesday, November 8, 1775.

A Petition of John Worth and Enoch Coffin, in behalf of Edgartown, on the Island of Martha's Vineyard, setting forth their exposed situation, and praying advice and direction. Read, and committed to Mr. Whitney, Mr. Carpenter, and Major Ely.

Major Brooks was excused from serving on the Committee for procuring Wood for the Army.

The Committee to whom was recommitted a Resolve for the more expeditious method of settling Accounts reported. Read and accepted.

Whereas a necessary attention to the more important affairs of the Government, in the present extraordinary times of difficulty and distress, renders it impracticable for this House to receive and examine the numerous Accounts now daily exhibited against the Government, agreeable to the mode heretofore usually practised, and the payment thereof has been greatly delayed, to the detriment of individuals, as well as to the injury of the credit of the Government:

Therefore, Resolved, That Nathan Cushing, Esq., Mr. Wood, Mr. Durfee, Mr. Watson, Major Brooks, Mr. Webster, and Captain Lock, be, and they hereby are appointed a Committee, until the further order of this House, to receive, examine, and, in behalf of this House, finally to pass upon all Accounts, not otherwise committed, which shall be presented to them for payment of services done and articles supplied, by order of Congress or the General Court, and properly vouched, and the doings of said Committee shall be considered as valid as any Vote or Resolve of the House touching said Accounts, as well in the recess of the Court as during the sitting of the same; and said Committee, or any four of them, who are hereby appointed a quorum, are directed to open an Office, and advertise the publick thereof and of this Resolve, that the business may be constantly attended and effectually performed. And said Committee are further directed to keep in a book a true copy of all Accounts which shall be passed by them and sent to the Board for concurrence and payment, and an alphabet thereto, and to cause the same to be laid before the House, for perusal and inspection, once or oftener in each session, as the House shall order.

Also Resolved, That the Secretary be, and he hereby is directed to keep such Accounts as shall be passed by said Committee, and, in consequence thereof, concurred and ordered to be paid by the honourable Board, in separate files.

Also Resolved, That the honourable Council, or such

Committee of Council as they shall appoint, be, and they hereby are empowered, both in the sitting and recess of the Court, to concur such Accounts as shall have been passed by the Committee aforesaid; and the payment of said Accounts thus passed and concurred shall be ordered in the manner the Charter directs: Provided, always, That the foregoing method of allowing Accounts shall be taken to be adopted merely from the necessity of the present times, and not considered as a precedent for the future.

In Council, November 10, 1775: Read and concurred; and Benjamin Lincoln, John Taylor, and Benjamin White, Esqs, are a Committee, on the part of the Board, to transact the business assigned the Committee of the Board in the foregoing Resolve.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That the Committee on the Rolls for the Soldiers on the Sea-Coasts prepare a Resolve for making up said Rolls to the 1st of November.

Resolved, That the Captains of those Companies on the sea-coast service who are desirous of receiving their Wages before the term of their enlistments is expired, have liberty to make up the Muster-Rolls of their respective Companies to the 1st of November, instant, expressing each man's name, rank, time of enlistment, time in the service, pay received, balance due, each in separate columns; which Muster-Rolls, being attested before a Justice of the Peace, shall be lodged in the Secretary's Office, for inspection and payment. And, also, that the Selectmen and others who have had the care of billeting said Soldiers, by order of Congress, have liberty to exhibit their Accounts for said billeting to the 1st of November, and lodge the same in the Office aforesaid for payment; and that Mr. Hopkins procure this Resolve to be printed in the Cambridge Paper.

Read, and the further consideration of it referred to ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

Thursday, November 9, 1775.

The Committee on the Message from the major part of the honourable Council, of the 7th instant, reported an Answer to the same, as follows:

May it please your Honours:

This House having received and duly considered your message of the 7th instant, relative to the full and ample powers with which you have attempted to vest General Joseph Frye, for the special defence of the Town of Falmouth and that vicinity, beg leave to observe to your Honours, that this House have before taken into their consideration the very peculiar and distressing circumstances of the Town of Falmouth, and the County of Cumberland, therein recommended, and made such provision, on our part, for their relief, as their necessities demanded, in the resolves passed and sent to your Honours for concurrence on the 4th instant. We shall be at all times ready to take such further measures, on our part, as shall appear necessary to succour and defend any part of this Colony, in such a way as is consistent with the present Constitution of this Colony, the security of the rights of our constituents, and the dignity of their Representatives.

Ordered, That Mr. Gerry, Major Hawley, Colonel Orne, Colonel Sayer, Mr. Hopkins, Mr. Partridge, and Colonel Thompson, be a Committee to wait on the major part of the honourable Board with the following Message, viz:

May it please your Honours:

This House have considered your message of the 3d instant, with equal candour and concern. When they observe, that in the same message wherein your Honours intimate that you judge it to be your indispensable duty to maintain a claim of an exclusive right of appointing military officers in this Colony, you expressly acknowledge, that it is by the advice and countenance of the honourable the American Congress that this Colony have set up and now exercise the powers of Government, and to whose counsels it is necessary we should conform; when they also consider the clearness and precision of the resolutions of the said honourable the American Congress, of the 18th of July last, touching the method of appointing military officers "in all the United English Colonies in North-America," and, at the same time, recollect that this Colony has hitherto considered herself as one of them, ever since that union took place, they are constrained to be of opinion that the aforesaid exclusive claim of the honourable Council is altogether indefensible, in any consistency with the above said resolutions; and that it cannot fail to infer dishonour and disgrace, both on your Honours and this House, either jointly or severally to make an application to the honourable Congress for their determination on the meaning of their resolves, and the justness and propriety of your Honours' claim above mentioned, as will imply an imputation on that honourable body, of obscurity, want of correctness and precision in so important resolutions, made for all the said Colonies, which appear to this House so plain that he who runs may read.

The Committee on the Petition of John Worth and Enoch Coffin, in behalf of the Town of Edgartown, reported.

Read, and Ordered, That the Petitioners have leave to withdraw their Petition.

The Committee for considering the best method of procuring Sulphur reported.

Read and accepted; and Resolved, That Major Cross and Captain Greenleaf, with such as the honourable Board shall join, be, and they hereby are appointed a Committee to procure thirty tons of Sulphur, in such way as they shall judge proper; and if that quantity cannot be procured in this Colony, to hire and fix out a small vessel, at the expense of this Government, for the purpose of obtaining the deficiency; and the former Committee appointed to collect Sulphur are directed to deliver the same to the persons aforesaid, and to cause said article, as they shall procure it, to be transported to such Town or Towns as the said Committee shall think proper, and there stored for the purpose of being manufactured into powder; and they are further directed to apply to this Court for a sufficient sum of money to answer the purposes aforesaid.

In Council, November 10, 1775: Read and concurred.

A Petition of Samuel Freeman, in behalf of the Inhabitants of the Town of Falmouth, representing their distresses, in consequence of the destruction of that Town by the enemy; and also a Letter from Mr. Dean, of the same place, on the same subject. Read, and committed to Colonel Carpenter, Captain Stone, Colonel Lovell, Mr. Caldwell, and Deacon Rawson.

Mr. Speaker communicated to the House a Letter from General Washington, concerning one Smithwick.*

Whereupon, Ordered, That Major Hawley carry the same, together with sundry papers, and some money therewith sent, to the Board. Who returned, that he had delivered the message.

Afternoon.

Notice being given to the House, that one Mr. Lewis, lately out of Boston, was come up by request of General Washington, and now at the door.†

Ordered, That Mr. Gerry, Major Hawley, and Captain Batchelder, be a Committee to make such inquiries of him as they think proper, and report to this House.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That Colonel Orne, Captain Vose, and Mr. Putnam, be a Committee to consider of a proper place for erecting a Powder-Mill, and to make inquiry for some suitable person to build the same; and also for some suitable person to be employed as a manufacturer of the article of Gunpowder, and to consider in what way the business may be most advantageously conducted, and report.

* Colonel WARREN:

Sir: A Mr. Smithwick, now at Watertown, is a person who attempted to get letters and a boat into Boston. His trunk, at Mistick, has a guard over it. 'Tis the general desire he should be sent to Head-Quarters, under the Sergeant and men who are now with Mr. Cox.

By his Excellency's command, ROBERT H. HARRISON, Aid-de-Camp to his Excellency.

In Council, November 9, 1775: Read; and Ordered, That the said Smithwick be immediately apprehended and sent to Head-Quarters, in Cambridge, to wait the order of his Excellency General Washington. PEREZ MORTON, Deputy Secretary.

† CAMBRIDGE, November 9, 1775.

Sir: A Mr. Lewis, who left Boston yesterday afternoon, informs me that, on account of the scarcity of wood and provisions in that place, General Howe has issued a proclamation, desiring such of the inhabitants as are inclined to leave the Town to give in their names, and a list of their effects, before twelve o'clock this day.

As the caution necessary to be used with these people, to prevent a communication of the small-pox, and the proper care of them when out, are objects of exceeding great importance, I submit them to the consideration of your honourable body before its recess; and if the honourable Council should likewise adjourn, I must also recommend to your attention the necessity there is of constituting some court, before whom all persons inimical, or suspected to be inimical, to America, should be brought for examination. My time is so much taken up with military affairs, that it is impossible for me to pay a proper attention to these matters. There will be sent to you, amongst others, a James Smithwick, who, from an intercepted letter, appears to have resolved to get into Boston. There is a small trunk belonging to him now in my possession, which contains in gold and silver about fifty Pounds lawful money, which it is probable he intended to carry in with him. The owner and Captain of a small coaster, put into Beverly, in distress, bound from Boston to Nova-Scotia, will appear before you. They have carried on a trade of supplying Boston with provisions, &c., for some time. I beg leave to refer them to your examination; and I have the honour to be, Sir, your most humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

The Hon. James Warren, Speaker, &c.

P. S. Smithwick's trunk will be sent to you with him.

November 9th, 1775: By the major part of the Council read; and, after consideration of Jonathan Ritchie & Son, the owner and Captain of the small coaster within mentioned, Ordered, That they be immediately sent to the jail in Salem, in the County of Essex, to be held in close confinement, unless they give bonds, with sufficient sureties, for the liberty of the yard; and that a mittimus go to the keeper of said jail accordingly.

PEREZ MORTON, Deputy Secretary.

On the Petition of the Hon. Joseph Hawley, Esq., in behalf of the Selectmen and Committee of Correspondence of Northampton,*

Resolved, That the Selectmen of the Town of Northampton be, and they hereby are empowered and directed to procure, at the expense of this Colony, such clothing as they shall find to be of absolute necessity for the Midshipmen, Officers, and Privates, mentioned in the above Petition, and lay their Accounts of such disbursements before the Court, for allowance and payment.

In Council, November 10, 1775: Read and concurred.

On the Petition of Noah Lee,† Resolved, That there be allowed and paid out of the publick Treasury of this Colony, unto the said Noah Lee, the sum of one hundred and sixty-two Pounds, fourteen Shillings, and one Penny, in full discharge of his Muster-Roll which has been sworn to by him, he having produced and filed in this Court orders from his several men to receive the same for their use, and the Treasurer is hereby ordered to pay the same accordingly.

In Council, November 10, 1775: Read and concurred.

The Committee on the Estates of Refugees reported. Read and accepted, as follows:

Whereas there are a number of persons in the several Towns in this Colony, that have left Estates, both real and personal, and have taken refuge in Boston and elsewhere, and joined themselves to our inveterate and unnatural enemies, and thereby rendered themselves justly odious to all true friends in this Colony: therefore,

Resolved, That the Selectmen and Committees of Correspondence in the several Towns where such Estates may be found, be, and they hereby are empowered to take into their care all such personal Estates, and suffer no waste to be made thereof, and to sell or dispose of all such Stock as cannot be kept on such Estates by reason of the scarcity of fodder; and to take care of all the produce, and dispose of the same to the best advantage, wherever it may be found on such Farms or Estates, except such as are improved for the immediate use of the Colony or Continent; and that the said Selectmen and Committees continue their care of all such personal Estate and produce as they shall not dispose of, and keep an account of their doings thereon, until the further order of this Court, and lay their accounts before them when required; and that Mr. Watson procure this to be printed in the several Newspapers of this Colony.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That the Committee appointed to prepare Accounts for the Continental Congress be excused from further attendance on that service.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That Mr. Gerry, Captain Partridge, Colonel Porter, Mr. Story, and Mr. Lothrop, be a Committee to prepare Accounts as soon as may be, to be laid before the Continental Congress.

The Committee on the Petition of the Inhabitants of the Town of Boston reported. Read and accepted.

Whereas this Court, on the 16th and 24th days of August last, passed two Resolves, empowering Samuel Adams, *Petition of the Selectmen and Committee of Correspondence of the Town of Northampton, in the County of Hampshire, most humbly sheweth: That, in August last, about eleven midshipmen and other officers, and about twenty-eight private men, were sent by order of the honourable Council to the said Town of Northampton, for safe keeping, and by the order under which they were brought to the said Town. May it please your Honours, that as the cold season is now advancing, several of the said officers and privates must suffer extremely, unless they should be provided with some articles of clothing, either at the publick expense or by the charity of individuals. The Selectmen and Committee humbly pray the order of this Court, instructing them what to do for the supply of such clothing to the persons aforesaid, as is absolutely necessary to prevent their extreme sufferings in the approaching cold season; and, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

†Petition of Noah Lee humbly sheweth: That he entered into the service of this Colony, as a Captain under Colonel Arnold, in the late expedition against the garrisons of Ticonderoga and Crown Point; that he was at the taking of them, and remained there in actual service till the 5th day of August last, when, as appears by the annexed paper, which contains the general orders of that day, your memorialist, in common with others on that service, was dismissed. Your memorialist begs leave to refer your Honours to the account of Colonel Arnold, exhibited to this Court, for what is due to him, and which is there credited. He earnestly requests your Honours to pay attention to his petition, and grant him the sum credited in Colonel Arnold's account, as he lives at so great a distance from any communication with the Court, that it would be extremely expensive to your memorialist to make another application; and, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

Joseph Palmer, Moses Gill, Esqs., Captain Thatcher, Colonel Barrett, Mr. Durfee, and Colonel Cutt, a Committee to receive all such Donations as may be sent by the humane and charitable in this or any other Colony, for the benefit of the poor sufferers by means of the Boston Port-Bill, and to distribute the same among the sufferers, according to their best discretion, they to be accountable to this Court. And whereas the major part of the Committee of Donations, chosen by the Town of Boston, for the receiving the Donations aforesaid, and distributing them among the necessitous of that Town, are, since the passing the resolves aforesaid, come out of Boston, and the Donations aforesaid are more likely to be distributed in a just and equitable manner by those who must be better acquainted with the circumstances of the inhabitants of the Town of Boston, than strangers can be: therefore,

Resolved, That the said Samuel Adams, Joseph Palmer, Moses Gill, Esqrs., Captain Thatcher, Colonel Barrett, Mr. Durfee, and Colonel Cutt, pay and deliver into the hands of John Hancock, Samuel Adams, Thomas Cushing, David Jeffries, William Greenleaf, John Brown, Captain William Muckay, Mr. Jonathan Mason, Captain Edward Proctor, Henry Hill, John Avery, Jun., Benjamin Austin, Esquires, Gibbins Sharp, and Thomas Crafts, the major part of the Committee of Donations appointed by the Town of Boston, that are now out of the same Town, or the major part of them, the balance that remains in their hands of all Donations they have received, since their appointment aforesaid, for the benefit of the poor sufferers by means of the Boston Port-Bill, to be by them distributed among such sufferers, according to their best discretion, they to be accountable to this Court.

In Council, November 10, 1775: Read and concurred.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That Major Hawley, Mr. Mills, and Colonel Grout, be a Committee to consider of a meet establishment for those General Officers who have been in the service of this Colony, and report.

The Committee on the Petition of Samuel Freeman reported. Read and accepted.

Resolved, That there be allowed and paid out of the publick Treasury of this Colony, to Mr. Samuel Freeman, the sum of two hundred and fifty Pounds, to be applied for the relief of the poor, indigent, and suffering people of that Town, by the said Freeman, in conjunction with the Selectmen and Overseers of the Poor of said Town, if any there be. In Council, November 10, 1775: Read and concurred.

Walter Spooner, Esq., brought down from the honourable Board a number of Letters, which were found on board a Vessel late from Cork, in Ireland, taken and brought into Beverly; which were read and returned.

The Secretary came into the House, and read the following Message:

“Council Chamber, November 10, 1775.

“Gentlemen of the House of Representatives:

“Your message of yesterday, relative to the appointment of military officers, has been considered by the Council with candour, as they presume, and certainly with a deep concern that a controversy of this nature should be raised and continued at a time of the most imminent danger, when our all is at stake, and when union and stability of counsels and actions are particularly necessary to the preservation of our remaining sea-ports against the depredations of our enemies. The Council are not contending for victory in this case: they would wish to be vanquished, if the honourable American Congress would permit it. They have very high conceptions of the wisdom of that august body, and have never considered them a body of obscurity, nor imputed to them want of correctness and precision; but being composed of fallible men, though wise, it is probable that some of their resolutions may not be so plain to others as to the honourable House, who perhaps can read as they run. The Council have not discernment enough to be apprehensive of dishonour and disgrace by an application in this case to the honourable Congress; if the honourable House have such fears, they may avoid the charge: if they have not, the Council would wish for such a joint application as was proposed in their message of the 3d instant.

“The Council have considered the resolve of the honourable American Congress of June the 9th past, in which it recommended to this Colony to conform, as near as may be, to the spirit and substance of the Charter, to choose Representatives, which Representatives or Assembly should elect Counsellors, which Assembly and Council should exercise the powers of Government until a Governour of His Majesty’s appointment will consent to govern the Colony according to its Charter. They have also considered their resolve of the 18th of July past, wherein it is recommended to the inhabitants of all the United English Colonies, to regulate their Militia in such manner as is therein mentioned; and, among other things, it is therein recommended, that all officers, above the rank of a Captain, be appointed by their respective Provincial Assemblies or Conventions, and that all officers be commissioned by the said Provincial Assemblies or Conventions, or, in their recess, by the Committees of Safety appointed by said Assemblies or Conventions.

“The first of these resolves specially respected this Colony, and this only; the other was a general resolve, and did not mention the Colony. The Council considered themselves bound by the first to exercise the powers of Government as near as might be to the spirit and substance of the Charter; and we presume the honourable House, on the 7th of August past, considered it in the same point of view, or they would not have recommended to the Board to make appointments for military service. The other resolve being general, and this Colony not specially mentioned therein, the Council presume was not intended in the case of appointments and commissioning military officers to affect this Colony, or in this case to repeal the first of said resolves, and the Council have appointed and commissioned as conformable as may be to said first resolve, without any intimation of complaint from the honourable House, in their late sitting, nor till very lately in their present.

“The Council may truly boast a firm attachment to the natural rights of men; and if there is an incompatibility between those rights and the Charter Constitution of this Colony, the Council can only lament their being bound to the observation of such a Constitution; but, considering themselves thus bound, they have religiously observed the same, in order to preserve the union of the Colonies; but as the continuing this controversy will expose to our merciless enemies this distressed Country, especially upon the sea-coast, for want of a well-regulated Militia, the Council do most ardently desire that the honourable House would explicitly order their claim to subside for the present, or point out some other mode of proceeding, by which the Militia may be immediately settled, and our Country saved from impending ruin.”

Upon a motion, Ordered, That Mr. Gerry go to the honourable Board, and propose their sending the Letters, just communicated, to the American Congress, after the General shall have perused them. Who returned, that he had delivered the message.

The Secretary came into the House with the following Message:

“Council Chamber, November 10, 1775.

“Gentlemen of the House of Representatives:

“How far the honourable House can be justified in saying that they have made such provision for the relief of the Town of Falmouth, and County of Cumberland, as their necessities demand, in the resolve which passed and was sent up the 4th instant, when, at the time of passing that resolve, the honourable House must have known that, consistent with your own explanation of the present Constitution of this Colony, the resolve could not be concurred by the Council, and they discharge their duty to the publick; and how far such provision for the relief of the real wants and necessities of our distressed brethren will exceed that of saying to the naked, be ye clothed, and to the hungry, be ye filled, we leave to the suggestions of your own minds.

“While the Council observe with pleasure a resolution now formed by the honourable House, to afford that necessary succour and defence to any part of this Colony, which is within your province to grant, consistent with the present Constitution thereof, they cannot but lament that so salutary a resolution had not been formed and received as the rule of action by the honourable House, previous to your adopting those resolves of the 4th current, in which you have attempted to clothe your substitute with that power, and delegate to him that authority which, by the present Constitution of this Colony, is incontestably lodged in another branch of the General Court, and that you should be led to ask the concurrence of the Board therewith, as another line of conduct more consistent with our present Constitution might have prevented all debate on this subject between the honourable Board and the Council, and that anxiety in the minds of the Council, lest a delay, thus effected, to support our distressed brethren in the Town of Falmouth, and in the neighbourhood thereof, should prove their ruin.

"The Council renew their request that the honourable House would commiserate the distresses of our friends in the County of Cumberland, and grant such further relief to them as their necessities require. You may depend on a due concurrence of the Council in such measures, and that they will, not from a conviction that their exclusive claim of appointing Militia officers is erroneous, but from the apparent necessity that immediate provision should be made for the defence and protection of the Town of Falmouth, and County of Cumberland, in this instance (and that it be not considered as a precedent in future) join with the honourable House in appointing by ballot an officer to take the command of the forces raised for the defence of the sea-coast, and, when necessary, call together and command the Militia when assembled in said County."

The Committee appointed to prepare a Resolve, empowering any persons to make captures of Vessels in certain cases, reported. Read and accepted, as follows:

Whereas, by a law of this Colony, made in the present session of the General Court, entitled "An Act for encouraging the fixing out of Armed Vessels to defend the Sea-Coast of America, and for erecting a Court to try and condemn all Vessels that shall be found infesting the same," it is provided that all Vessels which shall be brought into this Colony, and proved to be the property of, or any ways employed by, the enemies of the United American Colonies, or for supplying the said enemies, shall, with their appurtenances and cargoes, be deemed forfeited, and disposed of as by said act is ordered and directed; and no provision being therein made for captors not legally commissioned therefor, who in certain cases ought to meet with all necessary encouragement,

Resolved, That when and so often as it shall appear to the Judge of any Court by said act provided, that any Vessel or Vessels, which shall be by such Court condemned, have been taken by any inhabitants of the United American Colonies within thirty leagues of the American shore, in that case it shall be lawful, and such Judge is hereby authorized and directed to award to the captors the amount of what such Vessel or Vessels, with their cargoes and appurtenances, shall produce, after deducting the charges of trial and condemnation, and also the Sheriff's fees for sale at publick auction, in the same manner as would have been done had such captors been commissioned with letters of marque and reprisal by any of the Colonies aforesaid.

In Council, November 11, 1775: Read and concurred.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That Mr. Speaker, Major Hawley, Colonel Porter, Mr. Gerry, and Mr. Cushing, be a Committee to take into consideration the two Messages brought this day from the honourable Council.

The Committee for considering of a meet establishment for those General Officers who have been in the service of this Colony reported. Read, and not accepted.

Saturday, November 11, 1775.

Samuel Holt, Esq., brought down a Memorial from James Lyon, Chairman of the Committee of Safety of Machias, setting forth their exertions in the common cause, their expectations of an attack from the enemy, and praying the Court to grant them some Powder for their defence. Read, and committed to Mr. Story, Colonel Smith, and Mr. Hubbard.

The Committee appointed to consider what is proper to be done relative to the Poor of Boston, expected from thence, and to prevent the spreading of the Small-Pox, reported. Read and accepted.

Whereas the Inhabitants of the Town of Boston, who, with their effects, have been hitherto detained by General Gage and his successor, contrary to agreement and the most solemn engagement, are now expected out of said Town: therefore,

Resolved, That Mr. Thomas Crafts, Captain Edward Proctor, and Mr. Isaac Pierce, be, and hereby are appointed a Committee of this Court, with full power to procure, upon the credit of this Colony, sufficient teams to carry those persons who are not able to remove themselves and their effects to such Towns as they apprehend to be most suitable and convenient to receive them, in the County of Hampshire or elsewhere, which have not as yet received the proportion of those sufferers assigned them by a Resolve of Congress passed the 1st of May last, allowing for the hire of these teams at the rate of twelve Pence a ton per mile; and that said Committee also provide necessary support for said Poor, to the places of destination. And if it should be found difficult to remove those Poor to the respective Towns to which they shall be assigned, the Committee are in such case to recommend to the Selectmen of the Towns they may be sent to, that they assist in removing said Poor to the place of their destination, unless it should be convenient for them to remain in such Town.

And whereas this Court is informed that the Small-Pox is now in Boston,

It is further Resolved, That the Committee aforesaid be, and hereby are strictly enjoined to make use of every precaution, by smoking, cleansing, airing, and detaining persons or effects, as they may judge necessary to prevent a communication of that distemper to the Army and Inhabitants of this Colony, at so important a crisis as the present; and that the sum of one hundred Pounds be paid, out of the Colony Treasury, by Henry Gardner, Esq., Receiver-General, to said Committee, to enable them to defray the necessary expenses aforesaid, they to be accountable to this Court.

In Council, November 11, 1775: Read and concurred.

The Committee on the Message from the honourable Board reported. Read and accepted.

Resolved, That Colonel Grout, Deacon Rawson, and Mr. Story, be a Committee to wait on the honourable Council, with the following Message:

May it please your Honours:

The House propose to the honourable Board, at twelve o'clock, this day, by joint ballot with them, to come to the choice of some suitable person to such service and command in the County of Cumberland, as is expressed in a message from the honourable Council to this House of the 7th instant; which person, when chosen, shall be accordingly commissioned by the honourable Council.

The Committee on Colonel Arnold's Accounts have examined Captain Noble's Pay-Roll, and find that the said Arnold has charged this Colony with said Noble's Pay-Roll, and has received the whole thereof. It further appears, that the balance due to said Noble, which the said Arnold has received, amounts to thirty-six Pounds, five Shillings, and five Pence. And as it appears that the said Noble and his men are in great want of their money, and the said Arnold is now in the Continental service, and cannot at present be come at, to pay the sum he received for the use of the said Noble and his Company: therefore,

Resolved, That there be allowed and paid, by the Treasurer of this Colony, to the said Captain Noble, the sum of thirty-six Pounds, five Shillings, and five Pence, being the full balance of his Muster-Roll; he giving security to pay the several men made up in his Muster-Roll the several sums due to them.

And it is further Resolved, That this Court prefer to General Washington a charge of the sum aforesaid against the said Arnold, that a stoppage of so much as is before ordered to be paid to said Noble may be made, for the benefit of the Continent.

Moses Gill, Esq., brought down, with amendments, the Resolve of the House on a Letter from the Committee of Congress, for collecting an account of depredations made by the Ministerial Troops.

Read and non-concurred; and the House adhere to their own vote.

The Committee on the Message from the honourable Board reported again. Read and accepted.

The multiplicity of important publick affairs which have been under the consideration of this Court, during this session, having unavoidably prevented a new appointment of Military Officers within this Colony; and it being of the utmost importance to the safety of the Colony, that the Militia thereof should be well equipped and disciplined, and in the best posture of defence:

Resolved, That the several Military Officers who have been chosen by the people of this Colony, agreeable to the Resolves and recommendation of the late Provincial Congress, be, and hereby are ordered to remain and continue in the several stations to which they were appointed as aforesaid, until the further order of this Court; and all such Officers are directed to use their utmost exertions in putting the Militia under their respective commands in the best posture for defence they are able.

The Secretary came down with the following Message from the major part of the Council:

"Gentlemen of the House of Representatives:

"The Council accede to the proposals made by the honourable House in their message, this day received by the Council, relative to appointing one officer to command in the County of Cumberland, by joint ballot, at twelve o'clock, this day, saving that it be not improved for the future as a precedency, as expressed in our second message to the honourable House of the 10th instant.

"Council Chamber, November 11, 1775."

Ordered, That Mr. Gerry go to the honourable Board, and acquaint them that the House is now ready to proceed to the choice of some person to command in the County of Cumberland, agreeable to the foregoing Message.

The House then appointed Mr. Mills, Capt. Batchelder, and Mr. Watson, to sort and count the votes of the House. Who, having carried up the same, reported, that General Joseph Frye was chosen.

The Committee appointed to take into consideration a Letter from Joseph Greenleaf, Esq., one of the Committee for establishing a Post-Office in this Colony, reported. Read and accepted.

Resolved, That the said Joseph Greenleaf be, and he hereby is directed to settle with the several Postmasters and Post-Riders, to the 5th of October last, and discharge their several Bonds; provided, nevertheless, that if the Postmaster-General should choose to undertake (by himself or his Agent) to settle the whole matter from the beginning, in such case,

It is further Resolved, That the said Joseph Greenleaf be, and he hereby is directed to put over said settlement into the hands of the Postmaster-General, or his Agent, and to empower either of them to receive the moneys now due to said Colony, from the several Postmasters, for said purpose.

In Council, November 11, 1775: Read and concurred.

Mr. Gerry brought in the following Resolve, which was read and accepted.

Resolved, That the honourable Council be, and they hereby are empowered, any time before their recess, to order the Treasurer to deliver to the Committee of Council for concurring Accounts which shall be preferred against the Government, and previously examined and passed by a Committee of the House, provided for that purpose, such a sum as the honourable Board shall think sufficient to pay and discharge Accounts which may be so concurred during their recess; said Committee of Council to be accountable to this Court for said sum.

In Council, November 11, 1775: Read and concurred.

The Committee appointed to take into consideration the case of Dr. Church reported. Read and accepted, as follows:

Whereas it appears to this House that Dr. Benjamin Church, late a Member thereof, by his past conduct has discovered himself to be inimical to the United American Colonies, and has laid himself open, in their opinion, to a criminal prosecution for his past conduct, in holding a traitorous correspondence with our enemies: And whereas the Court-Martial, in whose custody he now is, from the want of a suitable provision in the Continental Articles of War, may be unable to bring the said Church to condign punishment, and the setting him at liberty may be attended with dangerous consequences to the cause of America: therefore,

Resolved, That the honourable the Council of this Colony be, and they hereby are desired to take suitable measures for causing the said Benjamin Church, in case of his being liberated from his present confinement, to be apprehended and secured, that such further measures, with respect to him, may be pursued, as the security of this people loudly demands, and the laws of this Colony will justify.

In Council, November 11, 1775: Read and concurred.

Afternoon.

The Committee on the Memorial of James Lyon reported. Read and accepted.

Resolved, That it be recommended to the several Towns in this Colony, to supply the people at Machias with such a part of their Town stock of Powder as they can spare, to relieve them in this time of great danger; and the said Towns are desired to deliver the same to the said Lyon, or such person or persons as the inhabitants of Machias shall appoint, so as the whole do not amount to more than three barrels, they to be accountable to this Court for the same; and this Court will replace such Powder as shall be so supplied them by such Town or Towns, as soon as may be, or pay them for the same, not less than five Shillings per pound.

In Council, November 11, 1775: Read and concurred.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That Mr. Story be appointed, in the room of Mr. Perry, to deliver to the Adjutant-General the Blanks for the Muster-Rolls when printed.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That Mr. Watson acquaint General Washington with a proposal of Mr. Hobart's, for running Cannon.

The Committee directed to prepare a Resolve for protracting the Commissions of the Delegates of this Colony, at the Continental Congress, reported. Read and accepted, as follows, viz:

Whereas the Hon. John Hancock, Thomas Cushing, Samuel Adams, John Adams, and Robert Treat Paine, Esquires, have been duly appointed to represent this Colony at the American Congress, now held at Philadelphia, and by their commission are appointed to represent this Colony in said Congress, until the last day of December next; and whereas the important business of the Colony has hitherto prevented this Court from proceeding to a choice of Delegates to represent this Colony in the said American Congress, after the said last day of December; and whereas this Court is near adjourning for a short space: therefore,

Resolved, That the time limited in the said commission of the present Delegates of this Colony, now attending the American Congress, for their representing this Colony therein, be further extended unto the last day of January next; and the said John Hancock, Thomas Cushing, Samuel Adams, John Adams, and Robert Treat Paine, Esquires, are hereby fully empowered to act for and represent this Colony in the said American Congress, agreeable to their former commission, until the last day of January next.

In Council, November 11, 1775: Read and concurred.

In Council, November 11, 1775: Read and concurred, with amendments.

Read, and non-concurred in the amendments proposed, and the House adhere to their own vote.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That Major Hawley go with a message to the honourable Board, informing them that the House have passed on all important publick matters that have come before them, and inquire if the Board have done the same. Who returned, that he had delivered the message.

John Taylor, Esq., came down and said that the Board had passed on all publick business that had come before them from the honourable House.

Upon a motion, Ordered, That Colonel Porter go to the major part of the honourable Council, and desire a recess of the Court till the 29th of this month, if agreeable to their Honours.

Whereupon the Secretary came into the House and delivered the following Message, viz:

"Mr. Speaker: I am directed by the major part of the Council to inform the House that they have consented to the enacting the following Bills, viz: A Bill for assessing a Tax of Forty-Six Thousand Pounds, for defraying publick charges for support of Government; a Bill to grant license to Innholders and Retailers in certain cases; a Bill for fixing out Armed Vessels to defend the Sea-Coast of America, and for erecting a Court of Justice to try and condemn all Vessels that should be found infesting the same. And it is their Honours' pleasure that this Great and General Court or Assembly be adjourned to Wednesday, the 29th instant, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, then to meet at the Meeting-House in Watertown; and this Court is accordingly adjourned to that time and place."

ADDRESS OF THE MERCHANTS, ETC., OF THE TOWN OF NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.

Address of the Merchants, Gentlemen, Traders, and Inhabitants of the Town and County of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, presented to His Majesty by Sir Walter Blackett and Sir Matthew White Ridley, Barons, their Representatives in Parliament.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

We, your Majesty's most faithful and loyal subjects, Merchants, Gentlemen, Traders, and Inhabitants of the Town and County of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, truly sensible of the blessings derived to this Kingdom by your Majesty's mild and gracious Government, humbly beg leave to assure your Majesty of our abhorrence and detestation of the conduct and behaviour of some of our fellow-subjects in America.

Fully convinced that the authority of the Legislature of this Country doth and ought to extend over every part of the British Dominions, we sincerely lament that an unjustifiable spirit of resistance to the legislative power of Great Britain should by any means have taken place in the minds of any of your Majesty's subjects in the American Colonies.

The clemency of your Majesty's Government leaves us no room to doubt that all endeavours will be used to bring back our deluded fellow-subjects to the obedience which they owe to the Constitution of this Country; a Constitution which every honest Briton must be ready, at the hazard of his life and fortune, to support, maintain, and defend. And we trust that, upon proper submission being made, such wholesome laws will be enacted as may do honour to the Mother Country, and put the Colonies upon a firm and lasting establishment.

That the Almighty Being, under whom Kings reign, may so direct your Majesty's Councils and measures, that you may long reign over an united, happy, and free people, is the earnest prayer of, may it please your Majesty, your most faithful and loyal subjects.

PETITION OF THE PRINCIPAL GENTLEMEN, ETC., OF THE CITY OF WORCESTER.

Petition of the principal Gentlemen, Merchants, Freemen, and Inhabitants of the City of Worcester, presented to His Majesty by Lord Viscount Mahon and Sir Watkin Lewes.

May it please your Majesty:

At a time when a part of your Majesty's subjects and a few of our fellow-citizens are approaching your royal presence with Addresses, which are supposed to convey to your Majesty the genuine sentiments of the people of Great Britain, will your Majesty permit your dutiful and loyal subjects of one, not the most inconsiderable cities in your Majesty's Dominions, with unfeigned assurance of attachment to your royal person and the illustrious House of Hanover, thus publicly to bear testimony against them, as we hold ourselves bound by every tie of duty to your Majesty, to ourselves, and to our Country.

We think ourselves more particularly called upon, lest the same delusive arts of misrepresentation should be practised here with the same success as in America, which have involved that Country in a civil war; nor are we without apprehensions, that should the same unfortunate measures be pursued, when this Kingdom is drained of its forces, some Powers in Europe (our natural enemies) may avail themselves of the opportunity, and transfer the seat of war into this Country.

We desire likewise to represent to your Majesty the melancholy decline of our trade and manufactures, (owing, in a great measure, as we apprehend, to the unhappy disputes with America,) and the gloomy situation of our artificers and their families.

We should be far from wishing to wound your royal ear with the lamentations of distress, but truth obliges us to approach your throne, and humbly to beseech your Majesty to adopt such measures, as in your royal wisdom shall seem most expedient, for putting a stop to the further effusion of blood, for reconciling Great Britain and her Colonies, for reuniting the affections of your now divided people, and for establishing, on a permanent foundation, the peace, commerce, and prosperity of all your Majesty's Dominions.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN AMERICAN IN LONDON TO HIS FRIEND IN WILLIAMSBURGH, VIRGINIA, DATED NOVEMBER 11, 1775.

I have just returned from one of the first assemblies in Europe, deliberating upon the most important cause that perhaps ever engaged the attention of any people. But you will not think the result of their deliberations any proof of their vast superiority over every other assembly, or at least that it arises from their wisdom and love of justice. Their power, probably, can be less disputed. You can conceive the impatience with which I expected, in the House of Lords, their determination upon the Duke of Richmond's motion, that the Petition of the Congress should be admitted as ground for a reconciliation. But even this has been rejected. It was urged as beneath the dignity of Parliament to treat with a people in actual rebellion; that it came from an illegal body; that it was improperly presented; that not peace, but independency, was the aim of the Colonies.

Upon these, or such like reasons, the door of peace seems no longer to be open. I fear it is the last struggle of the minority. Much was expected from the motion; much from the information which Governour Penn would afford. He is certainly warmly attached to the American cause.

There is still a conciliatory motion to be made in the House of Commons, by Mr. Burke, but I fear it will have a similar issue. The King's speech leaves no room to doubt of the measures which will be pursued; for the minority, though gaining some ground, are too weak to do any thing effectual. Your fine flourishing Towns, the fair hopes of America, will, I suppose, be laid in ashes; but it is to be hoped that, like the phoenix, they will soon rise again with new vigour and beauty.

It is astonishing to find the little effect the Association has had; what strange events have counteracted its effects. It has made many enemies, but not one friend.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Ticonderoga, November 11, 1775.

SIR: I did myself the honour to address you on the 7th instant, since which I have received no advices from General Montgomery. I believe he left St. John's on the 6th, with the whole Army, in order to attempt Montreal; and from what I have been able to learn from the prisoners, he has the greatest prospect of reaping fresh laurels.

Colonel Arnold was not arrived at the St. Lawrence on the 30th ultimo. I am apprehensive that he suffers much from the length of his march, unforeseen difficulties, and bad weather.

We have already had snow here, and I fear that the earth in Canada is covered with it; a very trying situation for an Army so very deficient in clothing as ours is. I feel so much for them in their unhappy situation—destitute of every necessary to guard against the inclemency of the season—that I have ventured to desire General Montgomery to purchase clothing for all those who will remain in the service. When I gave this order, I had not forgot that you had conveyed me the resolution of Congress, “that they would endeavour to attend to the clothing of the troops;” but the necessity was so pressing that a delay might have proved fatal to us, and which, I hope, will be a sufficient excuse for my presumption.

Enclose you a return of the officers that were made prisoners at St. John's; that of the men is mislaid, but I think they exceed four hundred, exclusive of the Canadians.

The Seventh and Twenty-Sixth are on their march to Connecticut. The Canadian officers wait the arrival of their baggage, and I propose sending them to Trenton. I am much at a loss what to do with the Canadian privates; they are almost naked, and beg hard to return to their families. I have wrote to General Montgomery on the subject. If they are to be kept, there will be a necessity of clothing them.

The officers of the Seventh and Twenty-Sixth applied to me for blankets and shoes for their men, who are almost barefooted. I have no such articles here; and if I had, I should not have thought myself justifiable in giving them, as we are in great want ourselves. They then asked money, and I have ventured to give Major Preston one hundred and seventy-two Pounds six Shillings, New-York currency; as much to Captain Kinnear, who commanded the Seventh; to Capt. Godwin, of the Artillery, forty Pounds; and to the officers with Maj. Stopford, about eighty Pounds. I thought it best they should supply themselves, especially as they consider themselves accountable to me for the money.

General Washington has honoured me with a letter of the 26th ultimo, which I received on the 5th instant; in a paragraph of which he says: “Dr. Franklin, Mr. Lynch, and Colonel Harrison, Delegates from the Congress, have been in the camp for several days, in order to settle the plan of continuing and supporting the Army. Their commission extended to your department; but, upon consideration, it appeared so difficult to form any rational plan, that nothing was done upon that head. If your time and health will admit, I should think it highly proper to turn your thoughts to this subject, and communicate the result to Congress as early as possible.”

What little I can say upon this subject must be an extract of my letter in answer to General Washington's, dated the 6th inst., in which I say: “I have long since signified to Congress the necessity of a delegation from them to this place; and in their last to me, of the 12th ult., they (unfortunately for me) say that it did not appear necessary then. I took the liberty to lament that they were not in sentiment with me on the subject, and to add that I thought it absolutely necessary that one should be sent; so that I hope soon to see some of the gentlemen here.

“A variety of regulations are necessary to be made in this quarter; a task to which I feel myself greatly inadequate, but which, if I had even judgment enough to arrange with propriety, the shattered condition of my constitution is such that matters so momentous as these should not be left to so precarious an event as that of my being able to support the fatigue; for General Montgomery, though endowed with shining abilities, will have his time so totally engrossed with other matters, that he will not be able to attend to these.

“Should success crown our endeavours at St. John's, of which there seems to be little doubt, the entire reduction of Canada will, in all probability, be the consequence; an event which will open new scenes. An Army to be formed and properly disposed of in that quarter; provisions, ammunition, and every necessary to be procured for it; preparations to be made for the next campaign; proper places to be determined on, and fortifications to be erected to defend that Province against attacks that may be made on it in the ensuing year; small craft to be constructed here, that a re-enforcement may be speedily sent into Canada in case it should be found necessary to support what troops may be stationed there; galleys carrying heavy artillery, to prevent vessels of force from coming up the St. Law- rence; a mode of government to be adopted, in a country where all will be anarchy and confusion without it; and probably a variety of other interesting regulations to take place, that do not just now occur to me.”

In the above extract, Congress will perceive that I have treated matters pretty general. The account of the reduction of St. John's is come to hand since, and our affairs wear so favourable an aspect in Canada, that if Colonel Arnold should penetrate to Quebeck, the whole country will, in all probability, be in our hands soon; an event that will doubtless be attended with the most salutary consequences to the Colonies, provided we can keep our ground in that Province the ensuing campaign. I shall therefore venture to descend a little more into particulars, and to give my opinion of what may be necessary in this quarter; but I assure you, Sir, that I do this with the greatest diffidence and deference to the better judgment of Congress.

Three thousand men, I conceive, would not be too many to remain in Canada this winter: one of these at Quebeck, another at Montreal, five hundred at Trois Rivières, as being the principal places in that country; the remaining five hundred at Chambly and St. John's. But the season is so far advanced that necessity will oblige Congress to be content with such numbers, out of the Army now there, as can be prevailed upon to stay. But why so large a body of troops, when nothing is to be dreaded this winter? It will confirm the Canadians of the opinion they begin to entertain of the strength of the Colonies; an opinion which should be carefully cultivated, that they may act with vigour and spirit, next year, against the attacks which will, in all probability, take place early in the spring, as the regular troops, which will then be in America, can be easily conveyed to Quebeck. And they ought also to be on the spot, in order to repair the fortifications, (which, I am informed, want it much,) as soon as the winter gives way.

The command in Canada should be given to a prudent and active officer, and one that has talents to conciliate the affections of that people. None more equal to the task than the gentleman who now commands the Army there, if he will remain.

But as three thousand men may not be sufficient, even with the aid of the Canadians, on whom it may be prudent not to place too much dependance, to resist a vigorous attack, a number of batteaus should be constructed here, in addition to those we have, sufficient to convey a large body of men into Canada, whenever it may be found necessary. I believe one hundred will be sufficient. Every thing should be prepared this winter for building these batteaus. A quantity of provisions and stores should be carried to Fort George.

The proper places for erecting batteries on the St. Lawrence, above Quebeck, should be determined on, and such craft constructed as will prevent armed vessels from coming up, should the garrison of Quebeck be unable to resist the force that may be brought against it.

Every military department, in this quarter, should be put on a proper footing (and widely different from what it is at present) at once, to save expense, and that the service may be carried on with that order, the want of which, in this campaign, the country will feel in the extra expense, and your commanders have experienced with pain; nor will their successors have fewer difficulties to encounter, unless such regulations are adopted as have a tendency to promote good order, subordination, discipline, and economy; for the bulk of mankind, whatever their principles may be, forget to act up to them when it is most necessary that they should not deviate from them. A mode of doing this, I dare not presume to attempt, standing already too much in need of the pardon of Congress for what I have said.

The oxen which I had purchased, in the beginning of the campaign, are nearly worn out for want of proper sustenance, as the hay which I had cut, together with that of the inhabitants in this vicinity, has been carried off by the excessive floods we have had here. I shall therefore dispose of them to the best advantage I can, and others must be bought, in the spring, for it is too expensive to have hired carriages on the carrying place.

Forage is an article that distresses me much; at any rate it cannot be got nearer than Saratoga, and I fear not even there, unless I can fall upon some method of getting the farmers to send their cattle down the country. This will be expensive; but if any works are to go on, as I think there will, we must have it.

I am building ten sleds, to be employed at the saw-mills in drawing oak timber for the bottoms and garboard streaks of batteaus, or in conveying the cannon from hence to Canada or Hudson's River, or in drawing fire-wood for the garrisons. The season is so far advanced that I could not wait for the sanction of Congress, and have therefore sent to Canada for twenty horses, which are much cheaper there than with us.

At each of the lower ferries on Hudson's River, above Albany, there are two boats; the two uppermost have only one, and they are small and worn out, so that the detention of the provisions and baggage causes not only a very considerable expense, but retards the service. This evil might be guarded against by building four good scows, like those on Schuylkill, and have them managed by soldiers picked for that purpose; and I believe the expense will hardly exceed that of the ferriage we now pay. Should Congress approve of building these, they will please to order two shipwrights up, who know the construction, the soonest possible, that the timber may be procured, and the boats, if possible, built in the winter.

I had ordered six carriages, for field-pieces, to be constructed at Albany; but they could not be got ready in time for the service I intended them for. I will cause them to be finished.

Dr. Stringer has wrote me a letter, copy of which I enclose. His observations appear to me just.

Conscious that Congress must have a variety of important matters which claim their attention, I am loth to trouble them with complaints; but Mr. Phelps's conduct has been so extraordinary that I beg leave to lay before Congress copy of two letters I have written on the occasion to the Committee of Albany, together with copy of one to him. Copies of the various others alluded to, and copies of the accounts, I have not thought it necessary to trouble you with. The money he received from the Deputy Paymaster-General, or so much as remained in his hands, I have ordered him to pay to Mr. Livingston, as I durst no longer confide in him. In perusing these letters you will perceive an overcharge in the account, of seven hundred and ninety-three pounds, seventeen shillings, and eleven pence half-penny; and in another, one of four hundred and five pounds, five shillings, and seven pence, being the difference between one thousand six hundred and thirty-eight pounds, fifteen shillings, and eight pence, and one thousand two hundred and thirty three pounds, ten shillings, and one penny. The perquisites of office, by contract, when the publick is not charged more than what it would have paid to others, I have taken no notice of, because they are fair.

I am, Sir, with the most cordial sentiments of esteem and respect, your most obedient humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., &c., &c.

Fort George, October 25, 1775.

SIR: I acknowledged the receipt of your favour of 20th instant, enclosing the resolve of Congress respecting the General Hospital, in my last, in which I took the liberty to point out a material deficiency of officers who are indispensably necessary in that department, viz: Senior Surgeons and Apothecaries, a Clerk and Steward. I would make a few more observations, and then beg you will please represent the matter to Congress, who certainly will make provision for such officers, and confirm Mr. Wimple, who I employed as a Senior Surgeon, as well as the Clerk and Steward.

The Surgeons, Apothecaries, and respective Mates, as well as myself, would no doubt, if agreeable to Congress, choose to have commissions—the Clerks and Stewards are officers at pleasure.

Two Seniors and four Mates (exclusive of myself) are as small an hospital as the Army under your command should take the field with; and should there be an engagement it would scarcely be sufficient.

In the resolution of Congress I am limited to four Mates only; and suppose the necessity for more ever so great, I cannot employ them; and even those four are to be dismissed as the numbers of sick and wounded decrease, so as not to require the attendance of the whole, founded, probably on a supposition that the hospital was to be confined to Albany, where Mates of an inferior class might be more readily procured in an emergency; for no gentleman of merit would, on such conditions, enter into the service. We had supernumerary Mates in the King's Hospital during the late war; but they were for the most part continued, though not on the establishment, whether there was a multiplicity of business or not; the reason of which appears to be this: because that they were capable Mates, and already acquainted with the hospital service, and is not known how soon there might be a want for them. I must further add, that the pay being so small will not be an encouragement for gentlemen qualified; and unless they can support themselves as such, they certainly will not enter into it.

I should be glad to know the pay allotted to the Seniors, Clerks, and Steward, as soon as convenient, as those in employ are in want of subsistence. The Seniors (Surgeons and Apothecaries) were last war on a footing; so were their Mates, and, as occasion required, did duty indifferently in either capacity.

The foregoing, Sir, with what further explanation you are capable of giving, from your general knowledge of every military branch, and the readiness I am convinced the Congress are possessed of to make ample provision for the sick of their Armies, will, I hope, place the hospital on the footing required.

I am, Sir, with unfeigned sincerity, your most obedient and very humble servant,

SAMUEL STRINGER.

To Major-General Philip Schuyler.

Ticonderoga, November 2, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I did myself the honour to address you on the 26th ultimo; since which, I am informed that the virulent tongue of scandal has been sporting with my reputation, and that my character is attempted to be injured by imputations equally groundless and wicked, or frivolous: that I have refused to pay persons employed in the public service by the direction of Mr. Phelps and others. As your respectable body is composed of gentlemen from every part of the County of Albany, I cannot state matters to any others with so much propriety as to you, and therefore entreat your attention.

I might have been justified, if I had refused to pay Mr. Phelps for any expenses incurred by him since the appointment of Mr. Livingston, as after that I could not consider Mr. Phelps any longer in the character in which he had acted until then; but as the honest creditors of the publick ought to be paid, although not employed by the proper officer, I scorned the distinction, acting upon principles which I have the conscious happiness to approve, and which, when known, I trust, will entitle me to the good opinion of you, and all honest men; and such only I wish to stand well with.

On Sunday, the 17th September, I met Mr. Trumbull, the Paymaster-General, on Lake Champlain, on his way to St. John's. In the same boat was Mr. French, the younger, who, as his business lay only with me, stepped into my boat. Mr. French delivered me a letter from Mr. Phelps, copy of which, (No. 1.) and a copy of an account which enclosed No. 2, I herewith transmit you. On the 18th, in the afternoon, I arrived at this place. On the 19th, Mr. French called on me for an answer. Sick, and deeply engaged in answering letters from Congress, General Washington, and Governour Trumbull, &c., I begged him to wait a day or two. On the 20th, at night, I completed my despatches, and on the 21st I delivered him a letter to Mr. Phelps, of which No. 3 is a copy, and verbally recommended to Mr. French to draw out the particulars of his brother's account, as I could not pay it on so general a charge, which you will perceive, in No. 2, is in one round sum, £1,638 15s. 8d.

About the last day of September or first of October, Mr. Trumbull returned here. He remained here indisposed, and crossed Lake George on the 5th October; and on the 6th I sent Mr. Phelps a warrant for ten thousand Dollars, enclosed in a letter of which No. 4 is a copy, which went by express, together with letters to the Congress, &c., and which reached Albany on the 9th, Mr. Phelps being then here, or on his way to this place. Hence it is evident, that had Mr. Phelps been at Albany, he would have received the money as early as it had ever been in my power to have paid it, even if I had not had any objections to his account; and I ordered this money to be paid to him, although I was by no means satisfied with his accounts, as I hint in my letter No. 4, but merely for the reasons given in the same letter, to wit: "lest the service should suffer, through the uneasiness of the publick creditors."

About the 9th or 10th ultimo, Mr. Phelps arrived here, and delivered me his accounts, which, as they required only copying from his own book, I might with great ease have had on the 1st ultimo.

I now found that the dissatisfaction which I had expressed at his account, and which arose from a comparison of it with some returns I had in my possession, was well grounded; and that I had with great propriety declared to him, in my letter No. 3, "that the abstract which you have sent me will not justify me to pay so large a sum upon; you must, therefore, send me a very particular account of what is due to every person whom you have employed, or from whom you have purchased any article for the publick service, and then I shall give a warrant to have the publick creditors satisfied." But having said that I had acted with great propriety in making that declaration to Mr. Phelps, and that my dissatisfaction was well grounded, it is incumbent on me, gentlemen, now to demonstrate this to you, which I hope to effect with so much perspicuity and clearness as not to leave a doubt on your minds, if, unfortunately, any should be entertained on account of this business, and therefore I entreat your further attention.

You will see by Mr. Phelps's account, marked No. 2, which I beg you will particularly observe to be dated the 11th of September, that it amounts to £5,535 3s. 5½d. You will also please to observe that his account marked No. 5 is dated on the 5th October, and the charges made up to the 29th September, amounts to only £3,560 5s. 2d.; to which add Mr. French's account, marked No. 6, amounts to £1,612 0s. 11d., and the whole will make, together, only £5,172 6s. 1d. The last account, therefore, less than the first, by £362 17s. 4½d.

Here, gentlemen, it is clearly demonstrated that his last account is £362 17s. 4½d. less than what he charged the publick with in his first; and yet, what is very remarkable, that between the 11th September and the 29th of the same month, inclusive, the article for transportation to Fort George, as charged Mr. Phelps in his last account, and by me marked A in the copy, amounts to £309 15s.; besides several additional charges, made in other parts of the account, for sick, &c., and by me marked M in the copy, amounting to £121 5s. 7d.—making £793 17s. 11½d. (See abstract D.) So that it is here proved, to a demonstration, that the first account was overcharged in the sum of £793 17s. 11½d.; and yet, in his letter to me marked No. 1, he asks me for the additional sum of five or six hundred Pounds.

You will please to observe that none of the baggage carriages are charged in either the first or last accounts, as he had not received the certificates, which he acknowledges in the note at the bottom of his last account, by me marked X; consequently, they have no influence on this state, the one way or the other.

Whence, then, it may be asked, does this amazing difference arise? An attention to what has been observed will point it out; but, for the greater perspicuity, I will state and particularize it another way:

In his first account, of the 11th September, he charges six hundred and five wagon loads carried to Fort George, as per receipts, amounting to £2,117 10s.; seventy-four ox-cart loads, as above, amounting to £518—making £2,635 10s.

By his last account, which I beg you will please to examine, you will find that all the wagon loads carried to Fort George, to the 11th September, inclusive, as charged in his last account, were only four hundred and sixty-seven and a half, which, with one omitted on the 28th August, noted as such in the foot of his account, amounts to £1,638

14s.; and the cart loads were only fifty-two and seven-tenths, amounting to £366 9s.—making £2,005 3s. The last account of carriages (to the 11th September, inclusive) less than the first, by £630 7s.; to which, if there be added the aggregate of the sundry other articles in his first account, which in the copy are marked with the letter L, many of which in the last account are charged less than in the first, and some totally omitted, for what reason I do not pretend to say, and which amount to £166 7s. 11d., (see abstract E,) the whole will be £796 7s. 11d.; which is only 56s. 11½d. more than what I made it by the first state, and occasioned, probably, by mistakes in summing up the accounts.

It is worthy of observation, that although so much wagonage and cartage was performed between the date of Mr. Phelps's first account and the day to which his last is made up, yet the sum of the whole does not amount to his first charge, by £318 3s. How, then, Mr. Phelps could say, as he has done, that these charges in his first account were made from receipts, I leave him to reconcile.

But perhaps it may be said, that Mr. Phelps gave Mr. French a considerable quantity of stores to carry to Fort George, and that he charged these in the first accounts. Should this subterfuge be attempted to be taken, it will not by any means do; for the transportation of all these articles is fully charged in Mr. French's account, as I can most clearly evince, and as you may see by recurring to it. And indeed, gentlemen, I have now in my possession the most indubitable proof that Mr. Phelps, or his clerks, knew that these articles were charged by Mr. French, and included in the £1,638 15s. 8d. charged the publick. This proof, gentlemen, I do not now transmit you, but shall lay them before you on some future day, should Mr. Phelps contest what I have asserted.

But I am charged with refusing to pay seventy shillings for carrying a load to Fort George. No part of my letter of the 21st September, to Mr. Phelps, could ever authorize such an assertion. I was willing to allow what the Crown had, and no more; and although I am still in doubt whether that was sixty or seventy shillings, yet, when Mr. Phelps was here, I told him that, at any rate, if he had promised seventy shillings, they must have it, however it might go with him. He said he had not, but that he had been informed that that allowance had been made them heretofore. I replied, if it was so, they should have it now,* but that I was not certain what had been given. He then asked me if the Committee of Albany would advise the payment of that sum, if I would allow it; to which I answered, positively, yes; and the like answer with respect to those who had kept sick soldiers, which I conceived were charged too high.

Mr. Phelps asked me what allowance he should make those wagoners that had carried baggage. I replied, twelve shillings per day. He said he had intended them only ten. I then gave the following reason why they should have twelve: because, with troops, they were obliged to halt whenever the troops did, and could not carry a sufficiency of forage, which they often were obliged to purchase; that when they had no troops they stopped when and where they liked, and took the advantage of places where they could get provisions and forage cheap.

I am informed he says he has no money for those that carried baggage. He has no money from me to discharge any particular account. What he has is on account, and to pay every creditor of the publick, as far as it goes; and when I get the remainder of his account, which he promised immediately to send, and which I have not yet got, (although he has been gone about twenty days from here,) I shall pay what is due.

Reports have prevailed, that I refused to pay the carpenters employed in the publick service. When the first carpenters were discharged, I had not sufficiency of money to pay them all, and some returned without their pay; those that were paid had their accounts made up from the day of my arrival at Fort George, and I certified it so on the back of their accounts or discharges. But it is asked why they were not paid from the time they entered into the service. For this most evident reason: because they were engaged by the Committee of Albany, previous to my taking the command; and I could not, without the spirit of divination, know what money, or whether any, had been advanced them by that respectable body, as I was not possessed of their accounts.

A considerable number of Mr. Bratt's party were discharged in my absence; these, therefore, I could not possibly pay. When Mr. Bratt left this, I gave him, unasked, £150; because, as I observe to him, killing time was approaching, and the carpenters might want some money before I could reach Albany. I dare say Mr. Bratt will do me the justice to acknowledge this.

I am also charged with refusing to let some of them return home when they applied for it, and that I kept them contrary to their inclinations. This charge I frankly avow to be well founded; but, gentlemen, if the Army had not been able to proceed, or if, after having proceeded, it had been under the necessity of returning for want of provisions, which could only be carried in boats, would you or any other of my judicious countrymen have allowed it as a sufficient excuse, if I had said the carpenters wanted to go home, and I would not prevent them, lest I should give offence. I have the fullest confidence, gentlemen, that no such excuse would be taken; and, consequently, I shall be justified in this. And indeed, gentlemen, that I have had a hard, a very hard task to procure a sufficiency of craft for both purposes, I can bring a variety of gentlemen to attest.

I am also charged with giving them but barely time to eat their victuals, and setting them to work at sunrise, and obliging them to work till sunset. Here, too, so far as it relates to that period previous to my departure hence with the Army, I also plead guilty. I reached this the 18th July, and, except thirteen or fourteen batteaus that were built at Fort George, not one earthly thing was prepared. I had saw-mills to repair, timber and every other individual thing to procure, gun-carriages to build, vessels of force to construct—the season far advanced, and had orders to penetrate into Canada with an Army. In this situation, under the sanguine expectations of all the Continent, let those that find fault with my conduct in this instance conceive themselves in my situation, and reflect coolly on what would have been their duty in such a case, as I trust that they would justify me without the least hesitation.

I am not so totally ignorant of mankind as not to know that the character of every man sustaining a publick office becomes the subject of general animadversion. In a free Country it ought not to be otherwise. It is, however, a duty every man owes to himself to justify his conduct, that the envious, whose food is venom and detraction, and who are continually spewing out poison, may not mislead the honest, the ignorant, and the unwary. I hope I have succeeded in this.

I have, gentlemen, detained you long, and trespassed much upon your patience, for which I have to entreat your pardon. I hope I have made good my assertion, that the imputations were “equally groundless and wicked, or frivolous.” If you are of the same opinion, you will be so good as to do me the justice to contradict the reports in any manner you may think proper. If your opinion should not coincide with mine, your justice and your candour will induce you to let me know in what particulars; and if I cannot gainsay it, I shall penitentially kiss the rod, being ever willing to abide by the judgments of so respectable a body.

I am, Gentlemen, with sentiments of esteem and respect, your most obedient humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Committee of Albany.

P. S. As I mean to be frank with all men, I write Mr. Phelps by this opportunity. I have taken the liberty to enclose him a copy of this letter.

Ticonderoga, November 7, 1775.

SIR: Your letter of the 31st October, with the accounts it enclosed, was delivered me on the 5th instant, by Mr. French.

You say you have examined Mr. French's account, which you now send me, and find nothing in it but what is fair and reasonable. I have also examined it, and believe it to be just; and in the enclosed state you will perceive that, after every charge is made, with the addition of £27 for transporting baggage for the troops under Colonel Ritzema, his whole account, up to the 11th September, inclusive, amounts to no more than £1,233 10s. 1d. Why, then, did you charge in your account Mr. French's bill for provisions, boating, and wagons, £1,638 15s. 8d., the particulars of which were then in your possession, as Mr. French has here frankly acknowledged, in the presence of three gentlemen; and, indeed, that you knew the exact quantity of provisions he had forwarded, I had sufficient proof of before, from under your own hand, of which I have convinced Mr. French.

I know that it is difficult to ascertain the loads of baggage that have been rid; it is not even necessary, except in the accounts; but why, out of the money which I have given you, have you not paid such wagoners as produced their certificates? Does my warrant express that it was for any particular payments? Had I any more than your first general account when I gave that warrant? Did not that warrant reach Albany about the very time, or even before you arrived at this place with the particulars of your account; and did not I tell you here, that the baggage wagons should have twelve shillings per day? You know I did, and in the presence of gentlemen who recollect it.

You say, when you drew up the first stating of your accounts, they were in a manner incorrect and uncertain. It is as evident as that two and two is four, from the very face of the first account, that you had the bills for the articles purchased, as also those for freight, and those for keeping the sick. I have already observed that you had Mr. French's, and that I can prove it; and I have it from under your own hand, that you knew, at the very time you made that account, the exact number of carriages that had carried provisions to Fort George, as well those charged in Mr. French's account as part of the £1,638 15s. 8d., as those charged in your account to the amount of £2,635 10s.; and the remaining articles were of trifling amount.

You go on, Sir, and say “you made an accurate cast of the wagons and ox teams employed to carry provisions to the lake, which, if you remember right, was about three hundred wagons and fifty ox teams; and, from the best accounts you had, you thought the baggage wagons might amount to as much more, and about twenty ox teams,” for which reason you included them; this is not only a curious, but a very extraordinary assertion. You made an accurate cast. Here you confess that you had it in your power to know exactly what provisions went, and you thought the baggage wagons might amount to about three hundred, and about twenty ox carts. This would be a round sum, nothing less than £1190, if they had not been detained one day. But you knew, Sir, that Mr. French had charged for carrying up Colonel Waterbury's corps, which consisted of one thousand men, complete, and that it amounted only to £106 2s., including £33 18s. for carrying the provisions Colonel Waterbury had with him. You are then, Sir, a most wretched calculator to suppose that the other troops that were sent up previous to the 11th September, and which you will find, on examination, not to exceed fifteen hundred men, at most, should have amounted to such a sum.

But, Sir, the assertion is not true, that you made a charge of baggage wagons in the first six hundred and five, for these reasons:

First. Because you confess you have no account of them, and these six hundred and five wagons were charged as per receipts.

Secondly. Because I can prove, from under your own hand, by your own returns, that you had forwarded provisions to that amount, including what you delivered to Mr. French; and that you included all that in your account, although you knew that Mr. French had charged it in his.

And lastly. Because you here confessed, in the presence of Mr. Bedford, the Muster-Master General, Captain Buell, and Captain Varick, that you were convinced there was an overcharge, but did not know how it happened; protesting then that you were innocent of any intentional fraud, which, for your sake, I hope that you will fix on the persons that were.

The other trifling charges which you mention to have made by mistake, I can conceive to be very possible: they are to be rectified.

The baggage of General Wooster's Regiment is upon a footing with all the other, and to be paid as those of the New-York Regiments, without any discrimination, for which I shall give order.

You have, Sir, by this time received the copy of my letter to the Committee of Albany. I enclose this to that respectable body, and beg them, after reading it, to deliver it to you.

I have found you, Sir, to say the least I can, incompetent to the charge that was conferred on you. I dare not give you a warrant for any more money; and you are, therefore, to observe the enclosed orders, which I expect you will not make the least delay in complying with, that the publick creditors may be immediately paid, and the service not suffer; and that I may in future have no complaints that the people remain unpaid, who have become the honest creditors of the publick.

I am, Sir, your humble servant, PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To Mr. Elisha Phelps, Deputy Commissary.

Ticonderoga, November 7, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I again presume to trouble you on the same disagreeable subject which occasioned my last, and therefore entreat you to read the enclosed letter, of which I beg you to order a copy to be made, as also of the order it encloses. This is a trouble I can only apologize for by want of time. Pray be so good as to cause Mr. Phelps's letter to be delivered unsealed, and by a proper person, that has compared it with your copy; I wish the day may be noted.

I shall by this conveyance send orders to Mr. Livingston to pay off every person whom Mr. Phelps has employed, his clerks excepted, or from whom he has purchased any article for the publick service; but this cannot be done until he gets Mr. Phelps's accounts, as he will not be able to know what money has been advanced. Mr. Phelps need not to be above two days in doing this with great accuracy.

Be pleased to let Mr. Livingston have a copy of the order to Mr. Phelps, and, if he should have occasion, a copy of the accounts which I have transmitted you in my last, and which is marked No. 5.

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Committee of Albany.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read November 20, 1775.]

Lebanon, Connecticut, November 11, 1775.

SIR: I am desired by the General Assembly of this Colony to write to the Continental Congress, and state the matters relative to the prisoners here. Enclosed is the resolution of our Assembly, with the copies of the letters and papers therein desired to be transmitted.

Captain Delaplace and family are at Hartford; the soldiers taken with him at Ticonderoga and Crown Point are removed, and employed in several Towns near that. Ensign Morland, who belonged to that garrison, and afterwards sent here, was ordered into a good family in Windsor; he is unwilling to stay at the place of his destination. Governour Skene, with his son, are in a society belonging to Hartford. Major French, with his companions, are at present in that Town; the enclosures will show their circumstances and requests; also, the motion of Captain Delaplace. The situation and circumstances of Middletown render that an improper place for the officers. There is an Episcopal missionary at Simsbury; I have no objection to that place, if desirable to them; it is not much odds in its distance from Boston. There is one prisoner at Windham, who was taken with three negro men, two of which negroes were taken by Captain Wallace, of the Rose, man-of-war, from Governour Cooke, of Providence, on board his packet laden with rum, which was seized; the other from Mr. Collins, of Newport. This man and negroes were put on board a sloop taken by Captain Wallace at the time he cannonaded Stonington. The sloop by a gale of wind was driven into New-London harbour, and was retaken there; the negroes and sloop restored to the owners; the man, a small officer on board the ship, is retained. Major-General Schuyler hath lately sent hither the prisoners taken at La Prairie or thereabout; and, by his letter of the 27th of October, ult., informs me that he intendeth to order the officers and soldiers, with the women and children, in all near two hundred, taken at Chambly, into this Colony, under my direction. I have given orders to the Committee appointed to take care of, provide for, and inspect the prisoners sent into this Colony, to send to Great Barrington and Canaan, to stay them at the latter; that one or more of the Committee meet them immediately after the knowledge of their arrival, to make necessary provision, and give directions for their reception and entertainment in several Towns in the County of Litchfield, so as persons of the same family be not separated; that being the nearest part of the Colony to the place of their dwelling. At the same time that the United Colonies lament the necessity of taking up arms for the safety and defence of their rights and liberty, they may thankfully rejoice in the success of those arms, and in hope of future prosperity: I do therefore congratulate you on the success at Chambly, on the hope of a speedy reduction of St. John's, of the security of the Province of Quebeck, in their own and our interest, and thereby of preventing the Indians taking up the hatchet against these Colonies.

Please, Sir, to lay the resolve of our Assembly, with the papers enclosed, before the honourable Congress, for their consideration and answer.

I have been informed that disturbances have happened at Westmoreland, on the Susquehannah River—some of the Connecticut people going to the west branch; whether prudently or not, it was done without direction of Government, and, I believe, without any from the Company. They were attacked by claimers under Mr. Penn, fired upon, their effects taken from them, and some imprisoned. This Colony have asserted their claim to those lands, the case is carried to England, and properly pursued there; and from a letter from our agents, lately received, there appears a probability that Commissioners will be appointed in this Country, to hear and determine the case, with liberty to either party to appeal. I lament that interested individuals, joined with the enemies of the rights of the Colonies, have at this time such an handle to cause division and mischief between these two Colonies on that head. It is far from our design to take any advantage in the case from the present unhappy difference with Great Britain. Our desire is that no advantage be taken on either side; but at a proper time, and before competent judges, to have the different claims to those lands litigated, settled, and determined; in the mean time, to have this lie dormant, until the other all important controversy is brought to a close. The wisdom of the Congress, I trust, will find means to put a stop to all altercations between this Colony and Mr. Penn, and the settlers under each, until a calm and peaceable day. The gun and bayonet are not the constitutional instruments to adjust and settle real claims; neither will insidious methods turn to account, for such as make them their pursuit.

I am, with great truth and regard, Sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

At a General Assembly of the Governour and Company of the Colony of Connecticut, holden at New-Haven, on the second Thursday of October, 1775:

Resolved by this Assembly, That his Honour the Governour be desired to write to the Continental Congress, and state the several matters relative to the prisoners of war who now are or hereafter shall be brought into this Colony, and request the direction of said Congress in what manner the officers and soldiers who are prisoners as aforesaid shall be provided for and supported, and how and in what manner the expense incurred thereby shall be defrayed; and that his Honour transmit therewith a copy of General Washington's letters to the Committee of Inspection at Hartford, respecting Major French and his companions; also, said French's request, contained in his billet to Mr. Paine; and Captain William Delaplace's memorial, preferred to this Assembly.

A true copy of record, examined by,

GEORGE WYLLYS, Secretary.

Hartford, October 23, 1775.

Your memorialist, in behalf of himself and brother officers, now prisoners in Hartford, being deprived of every means whereby to get money, do request that your Honour and the honourable the General Assembly, now convened at New-Haven, will take their case into your most serious consideration, and that they may be supplied with cash, at least as much as their subsistence amounts to since their being here; they giving an order on their agent or Paymaster for their acceptance. This granted, shall esteem as a great favour done to your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM DELAPLACE.

To His Excellency Governour Trumbull, and the Honourable the General Assembly, now convened at New-Haven.

Hartford, June 27, 1775.

Whereas the Committee appointed by your Excellency and the honourable Assembly have come to a resolution to allow us, your memorialists, two dollars per week for our board, we beg leave to address your Honour, and the Committee of War, to take the matter into your serious consideration, as it is by no means adequate to our rank in the Army, nor can we, in the present situation of affairs, receive any assistance from our friends.

WILLIAM DELAPLACE,
ANDREW PHILIP SKENE,
JOSEPH MORLAND.

COUNCIL OF MASSACHUSETTS TO THEIR DELEGATES IN THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Watertown, November 11, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: The manifest militation between the resolve which passed the honourable the American Congress on the 9th of June last, relative to establishing civil Government in this Colony, and the resolve which passed the Congress on the 18th last July, pointing to a method how the Militia should be regulated in the several United American Colonies, hath caused some altercation between the honourable House of Representatives and the Council. The House have claimed, by virtue of the last resolve, a right to a voice in the choice (with the Council) of the Militia Officers in this Colony. The Council have considered themselves bound to act in conformity to the last-mentioned resolve; but such is the prevailing sentiment of the House that they have a right to join in the election of military officers, that it will be difficult for the Council longer to stem the torrent of a measure so popular, unless absolutely directed thereto by the honourable Congress. The Council hope an order of that kind will not take place. They rather wish the representatives of the people may be gratified in this claim, as we think it will promote the peace of the Colony and the publick cause. You will think of the matter, and give us your advice, either with or without consulting your brethren of the Congress, as you shall judge best.

JAMES OTIS, President.

To the Massachusetts Delegates in Continental Congress.

COUNCIL OF MASSACHUSETTS TO JOHN HANCOCK.

GENTLEMEN: Captain Robbins, from Ireland, bound to Boston, was taken, on Tuesday last, by one of our boats, and carried into Beverly. This vessel is loaded with provisions. He brought a number of letters for the officers in the Army and others.* We sent them to General Wash-

* WATERTOWN, November 13, 1775.—Wednesday last Captain Robbins, bound from Ireland for Boston, in a schooner laden with beef, tongues, butter, potatoes, and eggs, (all much wanted for the butchering assassins there,) was taken by a privateer from Beverly, and carried in there. Captain Robbins, who has been brought to Town, informs us that he left Ireland the 24th of September; at which time five Regiments were embarking on board seven ships and one brig for Boston, and it was said that those were all the troops destined hence this fall, though a large re-enforcement was to be sent in the spring, to make up an army of twenty-two thousand five hundred men. Captain Robbins brought papers to the 16th of September, which are not come to hand. He likewise says the common people of Ireland were almost unanimous in favour of the Americans, and that only those in the service of Government appeared against us.

In the name and by order of the Council:

JAMES OTIS, President.

Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Cambridge, November 11, 1775.

SIR: I had the honour to address myself to you the 8th instant, by Captain Macpherson; since which, I have an account of a schooner, laden chiefly with fire-wood, being brought into Marblehead by the armed Schooner Lee, Captain Manly. She had on board the master, a Midshipman, two marines, and four sailors, from the Cerberus, man-of-war, who had made prize of this schooner a few days before, and was sending her into Boston.

Enclosed you have a copy of an act passed this session by the honourable Council and House of Representatives of this Province. It respects such captures as may be made by vessels fitted out by the Province or by individuals thereof. As the armed vessels fitted out at the Continental expense do not come under this law, I would have it submitted to the consideration of Congress to point out a more summary way of proceeding to determine the property and mode of condemnation of such prizes as have been or hereafter may be made, than is specified in this act. Should not a Court be established, by authority of Congress, to take cognizance of prizes made by the Continental vessels? Whatever the mode is which they are pleased to adopt, there is an absolute necessity of its being speedily determined on; for I cannot spare time, from military affairs, to give proper attention to these matters.

The inhabitants of Plymouth have taken a sloop, laden with provisions, &c., from Halifax, bound to Boston; and the inhabitants of Beverly have, under cover of one of the armed schooners, taken a vessel from Ireland, laden with beef, pork, butter, &c., for same place. The latter brings papers and letters of a very interesting nature, which are in the hands of the honourable Council, who informed me they will transmit them to you by this conveyance. To the contents of these letters and papers I must beg leave to refer you and the honourable Congress, who will now see the absolute necessity there is of exerting all their wisdom to withstand the mighty efforts of our enemies.

The trouble I have, in the arrangement of the Army, is really inconceivable. Many of the officers sent in their names to serve, in expectation of promotion; others stood aloof, to see what advantage they could make for themselves; whilst a number, who had declined, have again sent in their names to serve. So great has the confusion arising from these and many other perplexing circumstances been, that I found it absolutely impossible to fix this very interesting business exactly on the plan resolved on in conference, though I have kept up to the spirit, as near as the nature and necessity of the case would admit of. The difficulty with the soldiers is as great, indeed more so, if possible, than with the officers. They will not enlist, until they know their Colonel, Lieutenant-Colonel, Major, Captain, &c., so that it was necessary to fix the officers the first thing; which is, at last, in some manner done, and I have given out enlisting orders. You, Sir, can much easier judge than I can express the anxiety of mind I must labour under on this occasion, especially at this time, when we may expect the enemy will begin to act, on the arrival of their re-enforcement, part of which is already come, and the remainder daily dropping in. I have other distresses, of a very alarming nature. The arms of our soldiery are so exceeding bad, that I assure you, Sir, I cannot place a proper confidence in them. Our powder is wasting fast, notwithstanding the strictest care, economy, and attention, is paid to it. The long series of wet weather we have had renders the greater part of what has been served out to the men of no use; yesterday I had a proof of it, as a party of the enemy, about four or five hundred, taking the advantage of a high tide, landed at Lechmere's Point, which, at that time, was in effect an island. We were alarmed, and, of course, ordered every man to examine his cartouch-box; when the melancholy truth appeared, and we were obliged to furnish the greater part of them with fresh ammunition. The damage done at the point was the taking of a man who watched a few horses and cows; ten of the latter they carried off. Colonel Thompson marched down with his Regiment of Riflemen, and was joined by Colonel Woodbridge, with a part of his and a part of Patterson's Regiment, who gallantly waded through the water, and soon obliged the enemy to embark, under cover of a man-of-war, a floating battery, and the fire of a battery on Charlestown Neck. We have two of our men dangerously wounded by grape-shot from the man-of-war; and, by a flag out this day, we are informed the enemy lost two of their men.

I have the honour to be, with my best respects to the Congress, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,
 Hon. John Hancock.
 GEORGE WASHINGTON.

ORDERS BY GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 9, 1775.

(Parole, Andover.)

(Countersign, Bedford.)

To prevent any false alarm, notice is hereby given that the Rifle Battalion will discharge their arms to-morrow at twelve, noon.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 10, 1775.

(Parole, Cumberland.)

(Countersign, Durham.)

The General thanks Colonel Thompson, and the other gallant officers and soldiers, (as well of other Regiments as the Riflers,) for their alacrity yesterday, in pushing through the water to get to the enemy on Lechmere's Point. He is informed that there were some (names as yet unknown) who discovered a backwardness in crossing the causeway; these will be marked, if they can be discovered. The General was much surprised and concerned to see the order in which many of the arms, in several of the Regiments, appeared; he had not time to inquire the names of the particular officers to whose Companies they belonged, but desires that this hint may be received, as an admonition, by such officers as are conscious of their neglect of this duty, as other methods will be fallen upon, if it is not.

In the sixteenth year of the reign of GEORGE the Third, King, &c.

An Act for encouraging the fixing out of Armed Vessels to defend the Sea-Coast of AMERICA, and for erecting a Court to try and condemn all Vessels that shall be found infesting the same.

Whereas the present Administration of Great Britain, being divested of justice and humanity, and strangers to that magnanimity and sacred regard for liberty which inspired their venerable predecessors, have been endeavouring, through a series of years, to establish a system of despotism over the American Colonies, and, by their venal and corrupt measures, have so extended their influence over the British Parliament, that, by a prostituted majority, it is now become a political engine of slavery; and whereas the military tools of these our unnatural enemies, while restrained by the united forces of the American Colonies from proceeding in their sanguinary career of devastation and slaughter, are infesting the sea-coasts with armed vessels, and daily endeavouring to distress the inhabitants, by burning their Towns, and destroying their dwellings with their substance, plundering live stock, and making captures of provision and other vessels, being the property of said inhabitants; And whereas their Majesties, King William and Queen Mary, by the royal Charter of this Colony, "for themselves, their heirs, and successors, did grant, establish, and ordain, that in the absence of the Governour and Lieutenant-Governour of the Colony, a majority of the Council shall have full power, by themselves, or by any chief commander, or other officer or officers, to be appointed by them from time to time for the special defence of their said Province or Territory, to assemble in martial array and put in warlike posture the inhabitants of their said Province or Territory, and to lead and conduct them, and with them to encounter, expulse, resist, and pursue by force of arms, as well by sea as by land, within or without the limits of their said Province or Territory; and also to kill, slay, destroy, and conquer, by all fitting ways, enterprises, and means, whatsoever, all and every such person and persons as should at any time thereafter attempt or enterprise the destruction, invasion, detriment, or annoyance of their said Province or Territory, and to take and surprise, by all ways and means whatsoever, all and every person and persons, with their ships, arms, ammunition, and other goods, as should, in a hostile manner, invade or attempt the invading, conquering, or annoying of their said Province or Territory:" And whereas it is expressly resolved by the Grand Congress of America, "that each Colony, at their own expense, make such provision, by armed vessels or otherwise, as their respective Assemblies, Conventions, or Committees of Safety, shall judge expedient and suitable to their circumstances and situations, for the protection of their harbours and navigation on the sea-coasts against all unlawful invasion, attacks, and depredations, from cutters and ships of war;" and it is the duty and interest of this Colony to exert itself, as well for the purpose of keeping supplies from the enemy, as for those mentioned in the paragraphs of the Charter and Resolve now recited:

Therefore, for the more effectually carrying into execution the purposes aforesaid, Be it enacted by the Council and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, That all armed and other vessels which shall be brought into this Colony, and have been found making unlawful invasions, attacks, or depredations on the sea-coasts or navigation of any part of America, or improved in supplying the Fleet and Army which have been or shall at any time be employed against the United Colonies, or employed by the said enemy in any respect whatsoever; and also all vessels, whose masters or supercargoes shall have had designs of carrying supplies of any kind to the enemy, or that shall be returning from the enemy after having carried such supplies, and shall be convicted thereof, as is herein provided, such vessel or vessels, with their appurtenances and cargoes, shall be deemed forfeited, and shall be disposed of as is by this act hereafter ordered and directed.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Council of this Colony, or the major part of them, shall be fully empowered to commission, with letters of marque and reprisal, any person or persons, within this Colony, who shall at his or their own expense fix out and equip for the defence of America any vessel, as also any person who shall, by the owner of such vessel, be recommended therefor: and that all such persons, so commissioned as aforesaid, shall have full power, with such other persons as they shall engage to their assistance, to sail on the seas, attack, take, and bring into any port in this Colony, all vessels offending or employed by the enemy as aforesaid; and also to retake, and bring in as aforesaid, any vessel or vessels that may be taken from any person or persons by said enemy.

Provided always, and be it further enacted, That the master or owner of such vessel shall, at the time he receives such commission, enter into bond, with one sufficient surety at least, for the faithful discharge of his office, and observing the law of this Colony relating to armed vessels; which bond shall be in the form following, viz:

"Know all men by these presents, that we, A B and C D, of —, &c., are holden and stand firmly bound and obliged unto the Treasurer and Receiver-General of the Colony aforesaid, in the full and just sum of —, to be paid unto the said Treasurer and Receiver-General, or to his successor in said office; to the true payment whereof we bind ourselves, our heirs, executors, and administrators, jointly and severally, firmly by these presents. Sealed with our seals, the — day of —, Anno Domini 17—. The condition of the aforewritten obligation is such, that whereas the said A B hath, on the day of the date hereof, received a commission to command an armed vessel called the —, burden about — tons, — to make reprisals of all armed and other vessels that shall be found supplying the enemy or acting counter to a law of this Colony, entitled 'An Act for encouraging the fixing out of Armed Vessels to defend the Sea-Coast of America, and for erecting a Court to try and condemn all Vessels that shall be found infesting the same.' If, therefore, the said A B shall and do in and by all things, well and truly observe and fulfil such instructions as he shall receive from the Council of this Colony, and shall in all respects conform himself to the directions given in and by the act aforesaid, then the aforewritten obligation to be void, otherwise to remain in full force."

And be it further enacted, That there shall be erected and constantly held in the Town of Plymouth, in the County of Plymouth, a Court of Justice, by such able and discreet person as shall be appointed and commissioned by the major part of the Council for that purpose, whose business it shall be to take cognizance of and try the justice of any capture or captures of any vessel or vessels, that may or shall be taken by any person or persons whomsoever, and brought into either of the Counties of Plymouth, Barnstable, Bristol, Nantucket, or Dukes County; and the judge so commissioned, to hold said Court as aforesaid, shall have power at all times to issue his warrant or warrants to the constable or constables of any Town or Towns, within the said Counties of Plymouth, Barnstable, Bristol, Dukes County, or Nantucket, or either of them, directing the said constable or constables to warn a meeting of the inhabitants of their Towns, respectively, and to draw out of the box in such manner as is provided by the laws of this Colony for returning jurors to serve in the Inferior Court of Common Pleas, so many good and lawful men, for jurors, as said judge shall, in his said warrant, order and direct, not exceeding the number of twelve; and the said constables shall immediately, as soon as may be, give notice, in writing, to such persons, so drawn, of the time and place which in the said warrant shall be set for their appearance, and shall return said warrant, with his doings thereon, to said judge, at or before the time set therein for the appearance of said jurors.

And be it further enacted, That if any constable, within said Counties, shall neglect or refuse to obey the warrant of the judge for returning said jurors as aforesaid, he shall pay such fine as the said judge shall order, not exceeding the sum of forty shillings; and if any juror, so drawn, and having notice as aforesaid, shall not appear at the time and place directed in such warrant, or shall refuse, without reasonable excuse, to serve on such jury, he shall pay such fine as the judge shall order, not exceeding the sum of forty shillings; but before such fine shall be awarded, the said judge shall summon such jurymen to appear before him, to show forth the reasons of his neglect; and if such reasons shall not be satisfactory to the said judge, then he, the said judge, shall issue his warrant of distress for such fine, in manner as is directed for recovery of fines of jurors, who shall neglect or refuse to serve in the Inferior Court of Common Pleas; which fines, so recovered, shall be paid into the Treasury of this Colony.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That there shall be held in like manner, in the Town of Ipswich, in the County of Essex, one other Court of Justice, by such able and discreet person as the major part of the Council shall appoint and commission thereto, which judge shall have full cognizance of, and power to try the justice of the capture of any vessel or vessels, that shall be taken as aforesaid, and brought into any port in the Counties of Suffolk, Middlesex, or Essex, and shall have the like power to issue his warrant or warrants, for jurors in said Counties, as is before provided for the judge of the County first mentioned; and every constable and juror, within the said Counties of Suffolk, Middlesex, and Essex, who shall neglect to pay due obedience to said warrants, shall be liable to the same penalties as are provided by this act against those, in like manner offending, in the Counties of Plymouth, Barnstable, Bristol, Nantucket, and Dukes County.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That there shall be held in like manner, in North-Yarmouth, in the County of Cumberland, one other Court of Justice, by such person as the major part of the Council shall commissionate to be judge thereof, which judge shall have full cognizance of, and power to try the justice of all captures of vessels that shall be taken as aforesaid, and brought into any port in either of the Counties of York, Cumberland, or Lincoln; and shall have such power to issue a warrant or warrants, in said Counties, as is provided in this act for the other judges aforementioned, in the Counties of their respective jurisdiction: and the constables and jurors in the said Counties of York, Cumberland, and Lincoln, are to pay strict obedience to said warrants, under the penalties before in this act provided for like offences in the other Counties aforementioned.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That when any person or persons shall take and bring into any port in this Colony any vessel or vessels that have been offending or employed by the enemy as aforesaid, such person or persons, so taking and bringing in such vessel, shall immediately make out a bill, in writing, therein giving a full and ample account of the time and manner of the capture of such vessel, and the employment she was in when so taken, and of the persons who were aiding and assisting in taking her; and a schedule of the cargo on board her, to the best of his knowledge, at the time of her capture; and shall deliver the same to the judge who shall have jurisdiction of the port where such vessel is brought, with all the papers that may be found on board such vessel, to the intent that the jury may have the benefit of evidence therefrom arising; and the judge, to whom said bill shall be delivered, shall immediately issue his warrant, or warrants, as aforesaid, to any constable or constables, within the Counties of his jurisdiction, commanding them, or either of them in manner aforesaid, to return twelve good and lawful men, to try the truth of any facts alleged in such bill; and if seven of said jurors, so returned by said constable or constables, shall appear, and there shall not be enough to complete a panel of twelve, or if there shall be a legal challenge to any of them, so that there shall be seven, and not a panel, to try such cause; then in such case it shall be lawful for said judge to order the sheriff, or other proper officer, attending on said Court, to fill up the jury with other good and lawful men present; which jury shall be sworn to return a true verdict upon the said bill, according to law and evidence; and if it shall appear to said judge, by said verdict, that such vessel had been employed or offending as aforesaid, he shall condemn said vessel and cargo, and appurtenances, and order them to be sold at public vendue, and shall order the charges of said trial and condemnation to be paid out of the money such vessel and cargo shall sell for, unto the Treasury of this Colony, and shall order the residue thereof to be delivered to the captors, their agents or attorneys, for the use and benefit of such captors, and others concerned therein. And if two or more vessels, the commanders whereof shall be properly commissioned, shall jointly take such vessel, the money she and her cargo and appurtenances shall sell for, after payment of charges as aforesaid, shall be divided between the captors, in proportion to their men. And the said judge, before whom any such trial and condemnation as is aforementioned may be, shall be authorized to make out his precept, under his hand and seal, to either of the sheriffs within his jurisdiction, to sell such vessel and appurtenances, and cargo, and pay thereout the charges of trial and condemnation, into the Treasury of this Colony, and to pay his own fees, and deliver the residue to the captors and persons concerned as aforesaid.

And be it further enacted, That there shall be paid to the justice, jurors, and sheriffs, out of the publick Treasury, such fees as are or shall hereafter be established by law, to each and every the officers of the said Court.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That when any such bill shall be delivered to such judge, he shall cause notification thereof, and the name (if known) and description of the vessel so brought in, with the day set for the trial thereon, to be advertised in the several papers printed at Watertown and Cambridge, fifteen days before the time set for the trial, that the owner of such vessel, or any person concerned, may appear and show cause, if any they have, why such vessel, with her cargo and appurtenances, should not be condemned and sold as aforesaid.

And be it further enacted, That the process and proceeding upon any vessel that shall be retaken from the enemy, by any person or persons, shall be in the same manner as is herein provided for other vessels; and if, by verdict of the jury, it shall appear to the judge that such vessel was taken by the enemy, and was retaken by such person or persons, before condemnation by the said enemy thereon had, the said judge shall order such vessel, with her cargo and appurtenances, to be sold in manner aforesaid, and shall order not more than one-third, nor less than one-quarter, of what she shall sell for, (after paying charges of trial and sale,) to be delivered to the captors, as is before provided for other vessels, and the residue to be delivered to the owner or owners of such vessel. And if such vessel, so retaken, shall have been condemned by the enemy, then the money she and her cargo and appurtenances may sell for shall be delivered to the captors, as is above provided for vessels belonging to the said enemy.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That each judge of such Courts shall appoint an able clerk, who shall keep a true and fair record of all the proceedings of said Court, and shall be duly sworn to act in said office with truth and fidelity, and his attestations shall be received as evidence in all courts of law.

STEPHEN MOYLAN TO WILLIAM BARTLETT.

Cambridge, November 11, 1775.

SIR: Your favour of the 9th instant, to his Excellency, came this morning to hand. As the people object to your taking charge of the schooner from Ireland, and as having any thing to do with vessels brought in as the North-Briton was will give both you and the General trouble, it is his advice that you have nothing to do with such, by any authority under his Excellency. By what Colonel Glover informs us, Captain Manly has a claim on this schooner. In this case you have an undoubted right to take possession of her. You must be a better judge of this matter, being on the spot, than we possibly can. If it is clear to you that Manly's claim is a just one, it must be prosecuted. If it is not very apparent, don't you trouble yourself or the General with a litigious dispute. I wish you could get rid of the trouble you must have with the cargo by the North-Briton. Suppose you were to give it, vessel, &c., up to the Committee of Safety? In short, get rid of the trouble in the best manner you can, and let us hear nothing further thereon. I hope some good captures by the armed schooner will pay you for the plague you must have had. That the agency for the Continental vessels may be very beneficial to you, is the sincere wish of, Sir, your most humble servant,

STEPHEN MOYLAN, Sec. pro tem.

William Bartlett, Esq., Beverly.

STEPHEN MOYLAN TO JONATHAN GLOVER.

Cambridge, November 11, 1775.

SIR: Your favour of yesterday came to hand by Capt. James. Captain Manly is not to blame for taking the schooner, as she was in a suspicious place. It however appears to his Excellency that she was bound to Newbury. You will therefore discharge her, giving the Captain a pass. A pilot seems necessary. I wish you would put one on board in whom you can confide, that no tricks may be played. I hope Manly will soon send in some prize that will be of more consequence to you and to the publick.

I am, Sir, your most obedient servant,

STEPHEN MOYLAN, Sec. pro tem.

WILLIAM WATSON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Plymouth, November 11, 1775.

SIR: Immediately on receipt of your Excellency's orders of the 6th instant, relative to my taking charge of the wine cast on shore at the Cape, I despatched Major Soper, a gentleman employed in the publick service, to Cape Cod, with directions, which the Major will show your Excellency, and which, I hope, will meet your approbation. I believe the business is well done, and that Major Soper has conducted with integrity as well as with great despatch. It gives me pleasure that so much of this cargo is secured for its proper owners, and that the whole was not suffered to be embezzled by the mean curses of that place, which would very soon have been the case, had not your Excellency interposed in the matter.

Major Soper informs me that there are six negroes on their way to Plymouth, which, when delivered to me, I shall take care of, and will forward them to Head-Quarters as soon as possible.

The bearer will deliver your Excellency a packet containing the papers, &c., relating to this unfortunate vessel, and will acquaint your Excellency that it was impossible for me to go myself on this business, as I am much engaged in publick business at home, and could not leave it with any tolerable degree of prudence.

I am your Excellency's very obedient much obliged humble servant,

WILLIAM WATSON.

His Excellency George Washington, Esquire.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SULLIVAN.

Cambridge, November 12, 1775.

SIR: At a time when some of our sea-port Towns are cruelly and wantonly laid in ashes, and ruin and devastation denounced against others; when the arms are demanded of the inhabitants, and hostages required, in effect, to surrender their liberties; when General Howe, by proclamation, under the threat of military execution, has forbid the inhabitants of Boston to leave the Town, without his permission first had and obtained in writing; when, by another proclamation, he strictly forbids any person's bringing out of that place more than five Pounds sterling of their property, in specie, because, truly, the Ministerial Army under his command may be injured by it; and when, by a third proclamation, (after leaving the inhabitants no alternative,) he calls upon them to take arms, under officers of his appointing—it is evident that the most tyrannical and cruel system is adopted, for the destruction of the rights and liberties of this Continent, that ever disgraced the most despotick Ministry, and ought to be opposed by every means in our power.

I therefore desire that you will delay no time in causing the seizure of every officer of Government at Portsmouth who have given pregnant proofs of their unfriendly disposition to the cause we are engaged in; and when you have seized them, take the opinion of the Provincial Congress or Committee of Safety in what manner to dispose of them in that Government. I do not mean that they should be kept in close confinement. If either of those bodies should incline to send them to any of the interior Towns, upon their parole not to leave them till released, it will meet with my concurrence.

For the present I shall avoid giving you the like order in respect to the Tories in Portsmouth; but the day is not far off when they will meet with this or a worse fate, if there is not considerable reformation in their conduct. Of this they may be assured.

Sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To General Sullivan.

[Same to Governour Cooke, Rhode-Island.]

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO COL. LOAMMI BALDWIN.

Cambridge, November 12, 1775.

SIR: I am commanded by his Excellency General Washington to inform you that he has no objection to your letting each family have a pair of oxen and a milch cow or two; but he would have them take the utmost care that they do not fall into the enemy's hands; for should they, the publick will make them no compensation for the loss. As to their killing and disposing of such of the cattle, &c., as may be fit for use, to the troops, that is a matter that must be referred to the Commissary-General, it coming properly under his department. If he and they can agree, his Excellency has no objection.

I am, &c.,

ROBERT H. HARRISON.

To Colonel Loammi Baldwin, Chelsea.

ADDRESS OF THE NOBLEMEN, ETC., OF THE COUNTY OF FORFAR.

Address of the Noblemen, Gentlemen, and Freeholders of the County of Forfar, transmitted to the Right Honourable Lord Viscount Weymouth, one of His Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, and presented to His Majesty.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Noblemen, Gentlemen, and Freeholders of the County of FORFAR.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

The Noblemen, Gentlemen, and Freeholders of the County of Forfar, filled with sentiments of duty to your Majesty, beg leave to lament the unhappy disputes which have arisen between the Parent State and those subjects whom they have always wished to consider as her friends.

Sensible of the freedom of every subject of Great Britain, and grateful for the happiness we enjoy under your Majesty's auspicious Government, we see with indignation those insidious arts by which the American Colonies have been deluded into an unlawful and unjust desire of independency.

But while we view with abhorrence those seditious individuals who, from a violent and restless temper, or the impulses of ambition, have seduced their brethren into rebellion, we compassionate the unhappy people who, by partial or unjust representations, have been involved in scenes of distress. We flatter ourselves they have already become sensible of their errors, and that they will gladly embrace the earliest opportunity of returning to their duty and allegiance. Should they perversely continue in arms, however anxiously we may wish for their friendship, we must entreat your Majesty to adopt such measures as shall appear necessary to enforce a due obedience to the laws and Constitution of Great Britain.

We beg leave to assure your Majesty that we shall readily contribute, with our lives and fortunes, to suppress the rebellion in your Colonies. To bring about so desirable an event, is one of the most ardent wishes of our hearts, and is only secondary to our ambition to testify, on every occasion, our duty and attachment to your Majesty.

Signed by order and in presence of the meeting, by Sir John Ogilvy, Baronet, Præses, at Forfar, the 13th day of November, 1775.

JOHN OGILVY.

ADDRESS OF THE TOWN OF LOCHMABEN.

Address of the Provost, Magistrates, and Common Council of the Town of Lochmaben, in Council assembled, presented to His Majesty by William Douglas, Esq., their Representative in Parliament.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Provost, Magistrates, and Common Council of the Town of LOCHMABEN, in Council assembled.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's loyal and dutiful subjects, warmed with a grateful sense of the many blessings we enjoy under your benign reign, humbly beg leave to assure your Majesty of the just sense which we, and the Burgesses and Inhabitants of this Town, whom we represent, have of them, and of our firm attachment to your Majesty's person and Government.

Permit us, at the same time, to assure your Majesty that we highly disapprove of and detest the seditious and rebellious conduct of some of your Majesty's Colonies in North-America, who, by the arts of designing men, have been seduced to resist the just authority of the British Legislature, and are aiming to throw off their dependance on the Mother Country.

Persuaded that the commercial interests of this Kingdom, as well as the liberty, security of property, and all other inestimable blessings we enjoy under the British Constitution, can only be preserved unto us and continued to posterity by firmly maintaining and supporting the supremacy of the British Legislature over every part of the British Dominions, we highly approve both the prudent and spirited measures taken by your Majesty and your Parliament for bringing back the deluded Colonies to their duty, and preserving unimpaired the constitutional rights of Great Britain over them; sorry that the mild measures taken with them at first failed to effectuate so desirable an event.

We therefore wish and humbly request your Majesty would still pursue such further vigorous measures as you and the wisdom of your Parliament may judge necessary to bring it about, and secure, in future, upon a permanent establishment, their dependance on the Parent State; assuring your Majesty that nothing in our power, as loyal and dutiful subjects, shall be wanting, on our part, to aid and assist your Majesty in so great a national concern.

That your Majesty may be long preserved to continue the blessings of a just and mild Government, over a free and undivided people, is our sincere and ardent wish.

Signed in name and by appointment of the Magistrates and Common Council of Lochmaben, the 13th day of November, 1775.

WILLIAM HOGGAN, Provost.

ADDRESS OF THE GENTLEMEN, ETC., OF THE TOWN AND BOROUGH OF SOUTHWARK.

Address of the Gentlemen, Merchants, and Traders of the Town and Borough of Southwark, presented to His Majesty by Henry Thrall, Esq., one of their Representatives in Parliament.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Gentlemen, Merchants, and Traders of the Town and Borough of SOUTHWARK, whose names are hereunto subscribed.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

At a time when every art is industriously employed to diffuse false and unconstitutional principles, we, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Gentlemen, Merchants, and Traders of the Town and Borough of Southwark, beg leave to approach your royal presence, and entreat a favourable acceptance of our warmest acknowledgments for those civil and religious blessings which our feelings tell us we enjoy, in the amplest and most substantial manner, under the benignity of your Majesty's Government.

The disaffectionate behaviour of some of your Majesty's Colonies fills us with the deepest concern; and although we are prompted, by humanity, to pity a misguided and infatuated people, we hold in the utmost abhorrence those inflammatory spirits by whose suggestions they have been urged to commit the most daring offences.

Convinced, however, that resistance, in any part of your Majesty's Dominions, to the legal power and pre-eminence of Great Britain, is not only a flagrant breach of duty in the offenders, but also an invasion of her indisputable rights, we humbly trust, from repeated experience of your Majesty's watchful care, that every effort will be exerted to restore obedience in America, and to establish the supremacy of British legislation over every part of your Majesty's wide-extended Empire. And we desire permission to affirm, that we consider it to be the duty of all real lovers of their Country, and are therefore ourselves ready to give every furtherance and support which our abilities and respective situations will admit of, to whatever may contribute to preserve or promote the honour of your Majesty's Crown, and, what are inseparable from it, the peace, good order, and prosperity of our fellow-subjects.

May the wisdom of the Supreme Disposer of events guide all your Majesty's Councils; may the enemies of freedom and mild government see and correct their fatal error; and may the crown, with undiminished splendour, flourish upon your Majesty, and in your illustrious House, till all human empire shall be no more.

BALTIMORE COUNTY COMMITTEE.

In Committee, November 13, 1775.

It appearing that the price of Salt has been extended beyond the limits formerly fixed by this Committee, and that much uneasiness has been thereby occasioned among the people; the Committee therefore are induced to take the same under consideration, and, after allowing a storage and loss of measure equal to so bulky and wasting a commodity, do recommend it to the venders not to sell the same above the rate of four Shillings per bushel; and if any higher price has hitherto been given, the purchasers are desired to call on those from whom they bought it for the overplus; and if any sellers refuse to refund, then to complain to the Committee, who do resolve, that if any sellers refuse to comply with the requisition, that then they shall be immediately published as enemies to their Country.

The Continental Congress having recommended that adventures be made for procuring Arms and Ammunition, and it being necessary that a particular Committee be appointed to superintend the loading:

Resolved, That Messrs. Samuel Purviance, John Smith, William Buchanan, Benjamin Griffith, Isaac Griest, Thomas Gist, Sen., and Darby Lux, be a Committee for that purpose, and that they be on oath to keep their proceedings secret.

The following Letter was laid before the Committee:

"Monday, November 13, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: This day I came down to give my answer (agreeable to my promise) why I don't choose to act as a Committee-Man. My first reason is, that my appointment was only by fifty or sixty; secondly, the polls were not closed agreeable to the Resolve of the Convention; thirdly, as I am well convinced the former Committee broke the Convention Resolve in regard to the purchase of powder, and some of them sold their goods for more than resolved by the Convention; and as some of those gentlemen are now on the Committee, and whenever I attended I always found a majority of the Committee, then attending, for looking over the advantages taken of nine-tenths of the inhabitants of this County. If ever I was to be appointed as a Committee-Man, I should choose to act on oath, and that every one should who acted with me.

"I am, Gentlemen, yours, &c.,

"CHARLES RIDGELY.

"N. B. I desire my reasons may be recorded.

"To the Gentlemen sitting as Committee-Men for Baltimore County."

In Committee, November 20, 1775.

It is the opinion of this Committee, that such persons as have quantities of Salt by them, ought to retail the same immediately, notwithstanding any verbal contract or other agreement before made for it. It is further the opinion of the Committee, that all persons holding quantities of Salt, and refusing to retail the same as aforesaid, ought to be published and looked upon as enemies to the liberties of America.

Ordered, That the same be published.

GEORGE LUX, Secretary,

RICHARD HENRY LEE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, November 13, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I must beg leave, at the beginning of this letter, to apologize for any incorrectness, as I write in great haste. Indeed, the hurry of business is such here, with many of us, that we have little time for the ordinary offices of life. You may be assured that I will do Colonel Reed all the service that I can in the way you desire.

We have a ship here, in six weeks from London, that brought the original letter of which the enclosed is a copy. It is from a well-informed, sensible friend, and may be relied on. All the other letters from London join in confirming it to be the fixed determination of King and Court to leave undone nothing that they can do to compel implicit obedience in America. One very sensible letter, that I have seen, mentions that General Amherst had recommended (and 'twas said it would be executed) to remove the Army this winter from Boston to Long-Island, in order to get amply supplied by ravaging New-Jersey, New-York, and Rhode-Island. Should this be attempted, I suppose you will be furnished with an opportunity of giving them a genteel parting salute; and, besides, I should suppose that a winter favourable for us would expose them to ruin, from a timely, strong attack of superior numbers, on that naked island. It seems that immense stores of Indian goods are sent to Canada, in order to bribe the Indians to an early and vigorous attack on all our frontiers next spring. God grant that Colonel Arnold's success, and Montgomery's, may frustrate this diabolical part of their infernal plan, against the common, natural rights of mankind.

We hoped, here, that the surrender of Chamblly, with the military stores there obtained, would speedily procure the reduction of St John's; but no accounts are yet come of this wished for event. After Lord Dunmore, supported by the North-British Tories, had long committed every outrage at Norfolk, unopposed, (our people not having arms or ammunition until lately,) his banditti at length attempted Hampton, where they met with the chastisement you will see described in the part of Dixon's paper enclosed. The Lieutenant Wright there mentioned has been since found dead on the shore, a bullet having been placed in his body before he jumped overboard. We have not yet heard the consequence of their next intended attack, but it seems a very heavy cannonade was heard there the next day. If the devil inspired them to come on shore, I make no doubt but we shall have a good account of them. I have a very particular reason for entreating that you will inform me, by return of post, what number and what strength of armed vessels could possibly be procured from the ports where you are, to be in Delaware-Bay, if Congress should desire it, by the middle or last of December, at furthest. Two or three vessels, of tolerable force, issuing from hence, may effect a stroke or two of great consequence to us at that season. We have certainly four thousand weight of powder, and a very considerable quantity of osnaburghs arrived in Virginia, from Eustatia, for the use of our little Army, consisting of about two thousand men, now at Williamsburgh and Hampton. Be pleased to let General Lee see the letter from England.

I heartily wish you every happiness, and all the success the goodness of your cause deserves; and I am, with great esteem, dear Sir, your affectionate friend and obedient servant,

RICHARD HENRY LEE.

P. S. Congress has ordered five hundred thousand Dollars to you, as soon as they can be signed. The Continental and Virginia Commissioners have just concluded a treaty of firm friendship with the Ohio Indians,* and those * WILLIAMSBURGH, November 18, 1775.—Dr. Thomas Walker, one of the gentlemen appointed by the Convention to treat with the Indians, is returned to this City, and informs that all the different nations, who attended the treaty, are peaceably disposed, notwithstanding the endeavours of several persons, from Fort Detroit, to set them against this Colony in particular. Mr. Walker has brought with him a young Indian, (son of the famous Bawbee,) to be educated at the college.

The OTTAWA Chief's† Reply to a Speech of the Commissioners, condoling him on the loss of his Father, who was killed some time ago in a war with an INDIAN Nation, (with the TAWAS,) ended not long since with the total extirpation of the Tribe, and thanking him for his kindness to young FIELD.

Fathers: From the information I had of the commandant of Detroit, with distrust I accepted your invitation, and measured my way to this council-fire with trembling feet. Your reception of me convinces me of his falsehood, and the groundlessness of my fears. Truth and he have long been enemies. My father, and many of my chiefs, have lately tasted of death. The remembrance of that misfortune almost unmans me, and fills my eyes with tears. Your kind condolence has lightened my heart of its heavy burden, and shall be transmitted to my latest posterity.—(A string.)

Fathers: I rejoice to hear what I this day have heard, and do assure you it shall be faithfully delivered to my nation. Should you want to

of the Six Nations that inhabit near that quarter. We have taken the most effectual measures, by sending runners, from all the Southern Provinces, into the Indian Nations, through which he proposes to pass, to arrest and secure Lord Dunmore's wicked agent, Connolly.

September 4, 1775.

DEAR SIR: Philosophy and physick are, I presume, silent with you, and nothing discoursed of but war. Our Ministry are up with you. They are arming every hand, Protestant and Catholic, English, Irish, Scotch, Hanoverian, Hessian, Indian, and Canadian, against the devoted Colonies. Arming Roman Catholics is directly contrary to law; but they expect every protection from the politeness of Parliament. The newspapers tell us, and I believe truly, that, both in raising men and recruiting, they meet with little success; such is the general repugnance to this unnatural war. This being the year for supplying the Spanish Flota, the extraordinary demand for that purpose prevents the manufacturers, &c., from feeling as they would have done from the stoppage of American commerce. But that is temporary, and reasoning men foresee, with concern, times of great violence and distress here, in consequence of this unhappy quarrel. Though it is evident to all the world that the Ministry have sought and forced the quarrel, and ought, therefore, to be answerable for all its pernicious consequences, yet, like all other wicked men, they are endeavouring to transfer their own guilt to others, and sacrifice the innocent to save themselves. You will see this plan opened in the late proclamation against holding correspondence, &c., with those among you who are in arms; and it is certain they have intercepted some letters, and mean to persecute some of the active enemies here to their arbitrary proceedings. It is supposed and expected that justice will lead the General Congress to declare, upon their receiving the proclamation, that if any one is proceeded against here, for corresponding with the people of America, or befriending them here, they will immediately seize upon all those in America who correspond with the Ministry. Without such a declaration, their friends, and especially their agents here, will be at the mercy of the most unprincipled Administration that ever disgraced humanity. Vattel, the most respected writer on the Laws of Nations, has this apposite observation: "Le Duc d'Alva condamnoit à mort tous les prisonniers qu'il pouvoit faire sur les confédérés des Pays-Bas; ceux-ci userent de représailles, et les contraignirent enfin à respecter, à leur égard, le droit des gens, et les loix de la guerre." The same check must be held over these men, whose inclinations are equally bloody and unjust. The principle upon which their pensioned writer, Dr. Johnson, defends the Boston Port-Bill—"that where they are satisfied of guilt, there is no occasion for evidence or trial"—is that on which they would punish all those who oppose their tyranny.

The quantity of artillery, arms, and ammunition, shipped against New-England, is greater than ever went from this Country before. These, with an army of twenty-four thousand men, are intended to carry destruction through those Provinces next spring. Fifty ships of war are to ravage the coast and interdict all commerce. Small armies are to be sent to Virginia and South-Carolina. It will behove them, therefore, to prepare against the storm that is intended to pour down destruction upon them.

After a great many days' delay and debate, they have condescended to receive the petition from the General Con-speak to me in future, I shall joyfully attend, and thank you for the present invitation. The particular favour showed me, and the gun you have given me, for the kindness I showed your brother, (young Field), claims my warmest acknowledgments. I am conscious I did but my duty. He who barely does his duty, merits no praise. If any of your people hereafter visit mine, whether through curiosity or business, or both motives, or if unwillingly compelled by the strong hand of the victor, they shall find the entertainment your brother found. You informed me, if my people visits yours, they shall meet an hospitable welcome. My fears are done away. I have not one doubt remaining. I will recommend it to my young men to visit and get acquainted with yours.

Fathers: What has passed this day is too deeply engraven on my heart for time itself ever to erase. I foretell that the sunny rays of this day's peace shall warm and protect our children's children from the storms of misfortune. To confirm it, I present you my right hand—that hand which never yet was given but the heart consented, which never shed human blood in peace, nor ever spared an enemy in war—and I assure you of my friendship with a tongue which has never mocked at truth since I was at age to know falsehood was a crime.—

gress; but have refused to give an answer. It is, indeed, sufficiently answered by the proclamation, which was issued some days after they had a copy of the petition. America will therefore understand that she has nothing but her own virtue and firmness in which she can trust. I understand it is intended to declare your ports open to all Nations, upon coercive measures being continued after the petition. I can only say that is a measure of the last importance, and, leading to consequences of infinite moment, it ought to be well weighed, and not adopted but upon the compulsion of absolute necessity. It would hazard the uniting the Country against America, and unless there is a certainty of its being accepted by other Nations, might be injurious. Parliament will meet next month, when we shall see how the expense of so ruinous a war will be relished.

THOMAS LYNCH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, November 13, 1775.

MY DEAR SIR: In consequence of your favour by Colonel Reed, I applied to the Chief Justice, who tells me the Supreme Courts were lately held, and that it will be some time before their term will return; that he knows of no capital suit now depending; and that it is very easy for Col. Reed to manage matters so as not to let that prevent his return to you. I am sure Mr. Chew is so heartily disposed to oblige you and to serve the cause, that nothing in his power will be wanting. I fear, however, that you will be sometime in want of your Secretary, as I did not find him in haste to return, when I mentioned to him what is just now related; he doubtless has many private affairs to transact: the loss must be greatly increased by Mr. Randolph's absence, who, I hear, came to Town last night.

I am happy to inform you that Congress has agreed to every recommendation of the Committee, and have gone beyond it, in allowing the additional pay to the officers. I rejoice at this, but cannot think with patience that pitiful wretches, who stood cavilling with you when entreated to serve the next campaign, should reap the benefit of this addition. They will now be ready enough, but hope you will be able to refuse them, with the contempt they deserve, and to find better in their room. Could not some of the gentlemen at camp enlist the New-England men who have been persuaded to leave you. Frazier told me he could. It would be a capital point to convince the world that it is not necessary to have bad officers of that country, in order to raise men there. I can scarce bear their tyranny.

I have a letter, from undoubted authority, that assures me that the destruction of the Parliamentary Army in America will certainly produce peace; and by another, that the seizing Quebeck will produce the same effect. I have no doubt America stands now indebted to her General for the one, and will, before the return of spring, for the other. Mistake me not; I have not altered my mind a jot since I left you. I mean not to anticipate your determination, but only to approve your design to hover like an eagle over your prey, always ready to pounce upon it when the proper time comes. I have not forgot your proposition relative to that City; I try to pave the way for it, and wait for the season, as you do.

No appearance of peace, unless produced by necessity on the part of the enemy; every human feeling seems to have forsaken them; fear and interest only are listened to.

We hear seven tons of powder are arrived at Rhode-Island, and as many at Portsmouth. I hope it is true, as it will possess us of advantageous grounds, and begin the enemy's destruction. It is suspected, in England, Howe's Army will give you the slip, and land at Long-Island, which God of his infinite mercy grant. We wait with impatience to hear of the total reduction of Canada.

Your Virginians, we hear, have drubbed Lord Dunmore, killed and took fifty men, and sunk one of his vessels. May all such villains so perish.

A Mr. Richard Hare, brother to the porter brewer, sailed in the transport for Quebeck. As you have or must take him, let me recommend him to your civilities while with you, and to send him to his friends here.

The Articles of War have all the amendments we reported. You will enforce them. You will not now suffer your officers to sweep the parade with the skirts of their coats or bottoms of their trowsers, to cheat or to mess with their men, to skulk in battle or sneak in quarters; in short, being now paid, they must do their duty, and look as well as act like gentlemen. Do not bate them an ace, my dear General, but depend on every support of your friends here. I have strove to keep two Battalions now raising in the Jerseys, and one here, quite disengaged, that they may be ready, on a call to join you, should those you have desert you. I have not been quite unsuccessful. The winter is our own. Boston will not, during that season, be re-enforced; at least, we have reason to think so.

I want the return I desired from Gates exceedingly. Compliments to him, Lee, Putnam, Mifflin, &c. 'Tis so dark I can't read this letter over, or I would save you the trouble of deciphering it.

Dear Sir, your most obedient servant,
To General Washington.
THOMAS LYNCH.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Lebanon, November 13, 1775.

SIR: It is matter for our abundant rejoicing that the Government is in the hand of Him who is possessed of all perfection, and doth all things right; and while his judgments are abroad in this land, may his people be instructed and learn righteousness. At the same time the United Colonies do sincerely lament the unhappy necessity of taking up arms, they may rejoice with thanksgiving for the success of those arms; which, if they do, it is an argument to support our hope of future prosperity; I do therefore re-echo my hearty congratulations on your kind favour of the 7th instant, and in hope of securing and defending the Province of Quebeck, in their own and our interest, and thereby circumventing the mischievous design of rendering that and the savages under its influence a scourge and ruin to the present rightful possessors of these Colonies.

The last accounts from England are unfavourable as to any reconciliation. The petition of Congress, sent per Mr. Penn, lies dormant, and no prospect that it will ever awake. It was known to the King, since which he hath sent out a proclamation, forbidding all correspondence with the American Rebels. Preparations are making for a large Army in the spring. Seven new Regiments, of three hundred and fifty men each, are said to be part arrived, and daily coming into Boston. The enemy from thence landed last Thursday, at Lechmere's Point, but were repulsed with loss. Captain Coit, with a party of our men, in an armed vessel, have taken some provision vessels going into Boston. Another vessel, laden with wine, bound thither, is taken near Marblehead.

Mr. Sherman, in a letter dated at Philadelphia, the 6th instant, says: "We had an account last evening of a successful repulse given to some men of war in Virginia, and the taking of one tender and crew, without any hurt sustained by the Provincials." It appears that our people in the encounters at every place were marvellously preserved.

I hear Lieutenant-Colonel Warner, in a fight of five hours at Longueil, had not one man killed or wounded. We hear nothing from Colonel Arnold. Wishing him success, and you health and future prosperity, I remain, most respectfully, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To the Honourable Major-General Schuyler.

MAJOR FRENCH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Hartford, November 13, 1775.

SIR: I hope you will excuse my beginning this letter in answer to your two favours of the 19th and 25th October, by noticing the last paragraph of the former, as it furnishes me with an apology for intruding on your time, which I am sensible must be much more materially employed.

I flattered myself, from the tenor of that letter and the conversation I had with Dr. Franklin here, (who avowed the liberty of wearing our swords had been granted,) that you would have determined in our favour. Judge therefore, Sir, of my disappointment, to find it the reverse in the latter, and that the words "stipulation and discussion" seem to be the causes that the whole of my argument is set aside; yet I beg to observe, I never made use of either of them throughout the whole of it; but it is your pleasure, and I must obey.

I never was a prisoner of war before, but have been several times at the taking of such, and therefore pledge myself that I never saw that indulgence refused to officers; but, as it is determined, I shall not give you any more trouble on this topick.

In consequence of your consent to our removal, I have wrote to the Governour, and wait his answer.

I have endeavoured to find out in what instance I have treated the respectable citizens of any Town with incivility or contempt; and affirm I cannot, upon the strictest revision of my letters, observe the least trace of it, unless my calling Hartford a little paltry Town can be so interpreted. I am not unacquainted, Sir, that in the military phrase, an attack upon the Town is equally so upon the people; but I own myself at a loss to find out how my saying, that I objected to showing my letters (written to the Commander-in-Chief) to the Committee, &c., can be deemed an attack upon them or the inhabitants, upon whom I have no sort of right to decide, as I have not the honour of their acquaintance.

I thank you, Sir, very sincerely, for your kind wishes and obliging intentions; and I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

CHRISTOPHER FRENCH.

To General Washington.

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Providence, November 13, 1775.

SIR: I some time since informed your Excellency that part of two Companies of men, consisting of about seventy, raised by the Colony, in order to join the Continental Army near Boston, had, upon the arrival of some transports at Neuport, been sent upon Block-Island, for the preservation of the stock there. Agreeable to your directions, they still continue upon the island. I am now, at the request of the General Assembly, to beg the favour of your Excellency to inform me whether, in the new establishment of the Army, you propose taking any measures for engaging the officers and men on that station, in the Continental service, and choose they should march to Cambridge, or whether they may be employed upon Rhode-Island, until the time of their enlistment expires. As they have received no pay since the troops of the Colony have been paid by the Continent, I am also to desire you to direct the Paymaster-General to take order for the discharge of their wages and subsistence.

Having the honour of being appointed Governour of the Colony by the General Assembly, at their session last week, I thought it proper to acquaint your Excellency of it, and to renew my assurances of giving you every assistance in my power.

I am, with great truth and regard, Sir, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

General Washington.

JAMES OTIS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Watertown, November 13, 1775.

SIR: There is a number of men at this place who were taken in attempting to supply our enemies with provisions. The Council think they ought to be confined. They therefore request that your Excellency would send to this Town a guard of about twenty men, to be under the direction of the Board, in order to convey the said persons, and the prisoners which may be taken from time to time, to such place or places of security as they are or shall be assigned by us.

In the name and by order of the Council:

JAMES OTIS, President.

His Excellency General Washington.

JAMES OTIS TO GENERAL LEE.

Council Chamber, November 14, 1775.

SIR: The Council, to their great surprise, last evening were informed that a copy of a letter, lately from Ireland, had been taken, the writer of which mentions the name of

Lee not in the most favourable point of light. It was not transcribed by the Council, nor any member thereof, nor were they privy to its being done. They think it criminal that any should have presumed to do it. They will do all in their power to prevent the spread of any copies and impressions on the minds of the people to the disadvantage of your Honour. The letter produced no one unfavourable idea of you in the minds of the Council. They are sensible that the fairest and the most unblemished character is not a sufficient shield against the attempts of malignant foes, stimulated by malice and a different interest to vilify and traduce. But, so far from that, when we consider the present state of Great Britain, and the servile sentiments of too many of the people there, that you were educated in the highest reverence for the rights of mankind, and the partial regard which you have discovered for the people in America, whose hearts are filled with gratitude, we are at a loss to know which is the highest evidence of your virtues—the greatness and number of your friends, or the malice and envy of your foes.

In the name and by order of the Council:

JAMES OTIS, President.

To General Lee.

WILLIAM BARTLETT TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Beverly, November 13, 1775.

SIR: I hereby acknowledge the receipt of your favours of the 11th and 13th instant, and notice the contents.

With regard to such vessels brought in as the North-Briton, I shall with pleasure comply with your Excellency's orders, as I have had a great deal of trouble, and got the ill will of my neighbours for having any thing to do with her, although I punctually obeyed your orders.

With regard to the claim Captain Manly makes upon the vessel brought in here by our people, from Ireland, from the best information I can get from them, I think is just. As their stories, with regard to her, are different, I advised Captain Manly, together with his officers, to make oath to the truth of the matter; which I now enclose to your Excellency. As I was not an eye-witness to the affair, cannot with propriety judge so well; would refer your Excellency to Colonel Glover and some others who were eye-witnesses to it, and when your Excellency is rightly informed, think you will be the best judge of the matter.

I must beg the favour of troubling your Excellency the last time with regard to the North-Briton, whether to deliver her, with her effects, to the Committee of Safety, before they pay me what charges I have been at, or not.

As to Captain Manly using any violent measures to take possession of the schooner from Ireland, he has not, and shall advise him, by your Excellency's order, not to; and beg leave to subscribe myself your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

WILLIAM BARTLETT.

His Excellency General Washington.

ADDRESS OF THE JUSTICES OF THE PEACE, ETC., OF ORKNEY.

Address of the Justices of the Peace, Commissioners of Supply, and Freeholders of the County of Orkney, presented to His Majesty by Thomas Dundas, Esq., Representative in Parliament for the County of Stirling.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Justices of the Peace, Commissioners of Supply, and Freeholders of the County of Orkney, think it our indispensable duty, at this time, to approach your throne, and to testify our regard and reverence for your Majesty's person and Government, and for the established Constitution of the British Empire.

Deeply impressed with these sentiments, we view with abhorrence the unnatural rebellion which has broke forth among your subjects in America, and the anarchy and confusion into which these once happy people have been so rashly hurried by the artful designs of factious and desperate men. We earnestly hope that the Parliament, the Great Council of this Nation, will give your Majesty such advice and assistance as will enable you not only effectually to crush this civil war, but also to restore and establish, in every part of the British Dominions, that obedience and regard to the supreme power of King and Parliament, which every good subject must clearly perceive can alone continue and ensure to them the innumerable blessings they enjoy from our happy Constitution and your Majesty's most lenient Government.

With unfeigned zeal we assure your Majesty that we will, at all times, concur with others of your faithful subjects, in every step which your Majesty's paternal care and the wisdom of Parliament shall deem necessary to be taken, for repressing the unlawful violence and confusion now existing in America, which is so contrary to the spirit of true liberty, and destructive and dangerous to the peace and happiness of this Empire.

Signed in our name and at our appointment, by our Præses:

PATRICK GRÆME, Præses.

Orkney, November 14, 1775.

ADDRESS OF THE MAYOR, ETC., OF THE TOWN OF RYE.

Address of the Mayor, Jurats, Freemen, and principal Inhabitants of the Town of Rye, presented to His Majesty by Middleton Onslow, Esq., one of their Representatives in Parliament.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Mayor, Jurats, Freemen, and principal Inhabitants of your Majesty's ancient Town of RYE, in the County of SUSSEX.

We, your Majesty's loyal and dutiful subjects, the Mayor, Jurats, Freemen, and principal Inhabitants of the ancient Town of Rye, in the County of Sussex, do humbly entreat that your Majesty will permit us, with the most profound respect, to approach your royal person with our most grateful acknowledgments that your Majesty has fully answered the warmest and utmost hopes and expectations of your loyal subjects. It is with the highest gratitude we are thankful for the great and constant regard your Majesty shows for the lives and fortunes of your good and loyal people, and the more than paternal tenderness for those whom the laws of their Country, though the best and mildest in the world, cannot keep within the bounds of duty to your Majesty or their fellow-subjects.

It is our sincere wish, great Sire, that a speedy and honourable end may be put to the rebellion of your Majesty's subjects in America; and we beg your Majesty to accept of our assurances that we will most cordially and cheerfully contribute our proportion, with your Majesty's other good subjects, to enable your Majesty to bring that event to pass, by such measures as shall be thought most proper to be pursued by your Majesty's wisdom and the advice of your Parliament; and that we will be ready, at all times, and on every occasion, to manifest to the world our unshaken loyalty to your Majesty.

Rye, November 14, 1775.

ADDRESS OF THE CORPORATION OF MAIDENHEAD.

Address of the Mayor, High Steward, Steward, Bridgemen, and Burgesses of the Corporation of Maidenhead, in the County of Berks, presented to His Majesty by Pennyston Powney, Esq.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Mayor, High Steward, Steward, Bridgemen, and Burgesses of the Corporation of MAIDENHEAD, in the County of BERKS.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, beg leave to approach your Majesty with those sentiments of regard which are due to the best of Sovereigns, and with that freedom which we are entitled to as Englishmen.

We see, with infinite concern, that our fellow-subjects in America have suffered themselves to be so misled by evil and designing men as to erect the standard of rebellion; and it is matter of surprise to us, who daily feel the happy effects of a mild and gentle reign, that there should in any part of your Dominions be found men so blind to their own welfare, and so ripe for civil war, as to break down the barrier of civil society, and place their hopes of liberty in anarchy and devastation.

Convinced as we are, by innumerable instances of your Majesty's regard to our happy form of Government, we could safely trust our dearest rights in your hands; but as we are bound by every consideration to transmit those rights to our posterity, we cannot but protest against the principles of those men, who, by asserting the dependance of America on the Crown, exclusively of the Parliament of Great Britain, endeavour to point out a distinction, that in future times may be productive of the most fatal consequences to both.

We thank you, Sire, for the paternal care you are taking of those Kingdoms, by, we hope, the effectual means you are pursuing, to reduce to the obedience of the laws these thoughtless men, whom neither gratitude for past assistance, nor the remembrance of blood and treasure shed and expended in their defence and support, nor even the ties of nature subsisting between us, can hold in peace.

As friends to our excellent Constitution, we can but express our indignation against those who have been the promoters, the leaders, and the abettors of rebellion; but we rely on your wisdom, your moderation, and that attribute of Heaven, your mercy, that, when it shall please God to open their eyes to reason, and turn their hearts to peace, you will receive them with open arms, as your people and our fellow-subjects, and convince them that by taxation is not meant oppression, and that true liberty is not founded on licentiousness.

The common seal of the said Corporation was hereunto affixed, on the 14th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1775.

ADDRESS OF THE HIGH SHERIFF, ETC., OF THE COUNTY OF BERKS.

Address of the High Sheriff, Gentry, Clergy, Freeholders, and other Inhabitants of the County of Berks, presented to His Majesty by Bartholomew Price, Esq., High Sheriff of the said County.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the High Sheriff, Gentry, Clergy, Freeholders, and other Inhabitants of the County of BERKS.

We, your Majesty's most dutiful, loyal, and affectionate subjects, the High Sheriff, Gentry, Clergy, Freeholders, any other Inhabitants of the County of Berks, beg leave to approach your royal throne with the strongest assurances of our steady attachment to your Majesty's and this Nation's united cause, in opposition to the insolent efforts of all the enemies of peace, order, and good Government, wherever exerted by factious clamour, or by rebellious insurrection.

An experience, coeval with your Majesty's reign, hath taught us, that your Majesty's first and most zealous aim hath been to win the affection and cheerful obedience of all your subjects, by all those methods of indulgence, patronage, and gentleness, which do, in the nature of things, tend to dispose the minds of men to submit themselves, with all thankfulness, to so patriotick a sovereignty; and we cannot, without the deepest concern, observe, that the event of so gracious a trial hath, through the treacherous workings of Republican malevolence, so totally disappointed your Majesty's just and reasonable expectations, and those of all good men; and that the good will and lenity, which pervade and adorn all your Majesty's measures of Government, have served only to raise, to animate, to inflame the stubborn spirit of insult and rebellion, especially in your Majesty's late highly favoured Provinces in America.

The tender emotions of humanity, foreseeing the calamities of the storm which that spirit hath raised, cannot but incline us to wish, that the common sentiments of gratitude had so duly operated in the hearts of our fellow-subjects there, as to have retained them in their most bounden duty of cheerful submission to those mild laws and equitable regulations with which the Legislature of their Mother Country hath an undoubted right to require their most cheerful compliance.

Such compliance, (against which no pleas of exemption have been offered, but what malice and chicanery have laboriously set up, to be, by plain truth and fact, with no labour, overthrown,) such compliance would happily have prevented that lamentable indigence and distress of the Rebel Provinces, that miserable effusion of Christian blood, which, it is to be feared, are now become the necessary though harsh remedies of their pestilential disease.

And since an obstinate and active rebellion, subsisting in any part of your Majesty's Dominions, can hardly fail, unless it be seasonably suppressed, of producing events highly calamitous to the whole, and of consequence deeply afflictive to your Majesty's paternal heart, we do, with all that alacrity and zeal of duty, which grateful subjects owe to such a Sovereign, assure your Majesty, that we are firmly determined, with our utmost ability and influence, to support such vigorous measures as your Majesty's wisdom and prudence, in concert with that of the great Council of the Nation, may think proper to adopt, for reducing mad and ruinous revolt to quiet and wholesome submission; and for establishing, in its full force, the legislative authority of Great Britain over the Dominions of the British Crown, in their widest extent.

With no small satisfaction we foresee, that, when your Majesty's firmness and magnanimity shall have obtained this just triumph over the treacherous and ungrateful, you will celebrate one more highly pleasing to you, in "receiving the misled with tenderness and mercy."

COMMITTEE OF FAIRFAX COUNTY (VIRGINIA) TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Alexandria, November 14, 1775.

SIR: By order of the Committee of this County, there was shipped from hence by Messrs. Henley & Call, on the 18th of November, 1774, one hundred and fifty-seven barrels flour, in the Schooner Volatile, Captain Woodbury, amounting to £215 10s.; and the freight paid here, £23 11s.; also fifty bushels beans, amount, £10; and eleven barrels bread and five barrels of flour by the Captains Hiltan and Rust, amount, £14 9s. 3d.; the contingent charges paid here £5 3s. 6d.—makes in the whole £268 13s. 9d., say two hundred and sixty eight pounds, thirteen shillings and nine pence. Our Committee has also, by the favour of John Custis, Esq., sent £53 13s. 3d. to be distributed, as you see necessary, among the deserving poor of Boston: there are still some more subscriptions to come in, which shall be forwarded as soon as they are received.

This Committee has never been favoured with a line from the Committee in Boston, acknowledging the receipt of any thing being received from hence, which surprises them. You have too much business upon your hands to request an inquiry into it. May every happiness attend you, in your endeavours in establishing that liberty so essentially necessary for the good of mankind; and that you may return with laurels among your friends is the sincere wish of, Sir, your most obedient humble servants,

JOHN DALTON, }
WM. RAMSAY, } For Fairfax Committee.

SAMUEL MCMASTERS TO DR. JAMES TILTON.

Lewes, November 14, 1775.

SIR: This informs you, that an indictment was found by the Grand Jury of Sussex County, against a number of zealous friends to their Country, for, as is said, insulting a certain J. C. The particulars are as follows: J. C., some time in the month of September, came to Lewes, and in an open, profane manner, cursed the honourable Continental Congress, and all those that would not curse it; calling upon the Supreme Being, in a most solemn manner, to d—n the Congress, and all that would not d—d it; that d—d set would ruin the Country. For which expressions, and such like, it was thought proper he should be had up before the Committee of Inspection, as guilty of treason against the liberties of America, and also the Congress; for the Congress acting suitable to the power delegated, that body ought to be esteemed as King, and therefore whatever is said against that body should be deemed treason. C. being had up before the Committee, and the facts before mentioned sufficiently proved, one of the audience said "it sounded like a death warrant." C., in an insulting, swearing way, said, "put it in execution." However, upon mature consideration of the Committee, some of which were no better than C., a sort of recantation was drawn up and signed by C., but by no means satisfactory to the people. Upon which some concluded we should proceed in the new mode of making converts, by bestowing upon C. a coat of tar and feathers; but after some hesitation, and much persuasion, were prevented from using any violent measures, unless beating the drum a few rods, and two boys throwing an egg apiece unknown to the men, which, as soon as they were observed, were immediately stopped. No threatening or abusive language was made use of to intimidate or affright him. This is as near the state of the matter as I can recollect. This they have made a riot of, and J. M., Esq., as King's Attorney, has acted in this matter.

Now, if such offenders as C. are permitted to bring us under the cognizance of the civil law, all the friends to liberty here in Sussex may as well give up as contend any longer; for we are too weak to oppose Ministerial tools.

This from your's to serve,
 To Doctor James Tilton.
 SAMUEL McMASTERS.

DR. JAMES TILTON TO SAMUEL McMASTERS.

SIR: Yours of the 14th instant came safe to hand. I am not a little surprised at the contents of it. I have heard a great deal of Sussex toryism, but imagined, if you had really such among you, they would have acted more ingeniously than by playing off the civil law, as an engine, against the sons of liberty. The recent success of Mr. H., I should have thought, would have taught them better. Your Grand Jury must certainly have been infatuated with very undue prejudices, or they never could have countenanced such an indictment as you mention.

I wish I was able to give you such advice as would be profitable to your deluded countrymen; but when I consider that I am writing to a man younger than myself, and who has perhaps as little influence in Sussex as I have in Kent, I conceive I cannot testify my esteem for a lover of our liberty better than by communicating my sentiments, on present troubles, in as short and plain a manner as I can.

I lay it down as a maxim, that the claim of England on America, "to tax her in all cases whatsoever," is affrontive to common sense, not to be tolerated, but spurned at by freemen, and to be resisted to the last extremity whenever attempted to be put in execution. It is found equally true, by our experience, that the civil or municipal laws of the Provinces are not sufficient to defend us against the unjust and cruel means used to bring us under unjust and arbitrary taxation. What resource, then, had America left her? Why, she appealed to the law of nature, which, having a like respect to all, is founded only in justice and truth. In doing this, however, the Americans have not violated the Constitution of England, (as their enemies have suggested,) for that being founded in liberty cannot be repugnant to the eternal and immutable laws of truth and justice. By the law of nature, then, and the Constitution of England, we are perfectly right in defending our rights and liberties. The law of nature is above all others, and constantly governs in the last exigency of affairs. In our present struggle, is it not equally necessary to guard against intestine enemies as foreign foes? But by what law of the land can we do it? By none, and therefore we appeal to the law of nature. By this law, the Representatives of a people in Committee publish an enemy and make him infamous forever; and by this law the people at large tar and feather tories and traitors. The sole object of natural law is justice; and agreeable to it, in Mr. C.'s case, the only question should be, has his punishment been more than adequate to his crimes? If he has discovered himself unfriendly to his Country, and especially to America, his light escape could be owing to nothing but great partiality or uncommon humanity in his countrymen. And as to those men, who would now take advantage of the civil law against those who were the instruments of justice on C., in behalf of their Country, I take it for granted they have a plentiful stock of ignorance or an uncommon share of boldness and wickedness; and I will venture to add, that were they in any part of the United Colonies, besides Sussex, they would in the one case meet with proper instruction, and in the other suitable correction.

TO THE INHABITANTS OF NEW-YORK.

New-York, November 14, 1775.

Of late, I have observed in Mr. Rivington's and Mr. Gaine's newspapers, sundry publications that have the same pernicious tendency with those that used to abound in those papers some months ago, before the flight of Cooper, Wilkins, &c., and the silence, association, and pretended reformation of many inveterate, rancorous enemies to the rights and freedom of the British Colonies, for which we are now contending. Indeed, considering the conduct and avowed principles of these tory gentry, there was no person, of common understanding, that believed there was any reality or sincerity in the apparently sudden change of their disposition from enemies to friends of the English Constitution, the rights and liberties of their Country. The seeming change, we have the greatest reason to believe, was only the effect of the basest of all causes—pusillanimity and cowardice—upon finding the friends to their Country to be the strongest party. After a silence and inactivity of several months, these tory vermin begin to creep out again, one after another, and, according to their natures, renew their works of mischief. At first, they begin with small matters, and, if they pass with impunity, proceed to those that are greater, enormous, and intolerable. They begin their operations with caution and secrecy. They appear disguised and in small numbers; but, emboldened by one another, they soon increase in number, work more openly, and at last venture to show themselves, and act without disguise. But the work in which we are now engaged is of too much consequence for us to suffer it to be interrupted, and its success endangered by an ill-judged lenity and indulgence to those most noxious animals, who aim at nothing less than our destruction, and stripping us of every thing that can be held valuable by reasonable creatures. It behooves us, then, as we value our lives, and, what should be still dearer to us than our lives, the rights and liberties of our Country and posterity, to hunt out, find, and destroy, or at least disable, these most detestable creatures, that otherwise will destroy or enslave us. This is no time for ceremony or forbearance. Our all is at stake. We must succeed in the enterprise in which we are engaged, or perish in the attempt, and be the most abject, miserable, and despised people of all the human race. Shall we hazard all these dreadful consequences, rather than punish, as they justly deserve, a set of wretches who are labouring, by every secret art of deceit and villany, to bring them upon us, and ruin us forever? No. Rather let them be perished and rooted out. The publications in Mr. Rivington's and Mr. Gaine's papers, that gave rise to these reflections, are more than I can now remember, as I have not those papers by me. One, however, was a copy of a long letter from London, tending to represent the proceedings of the people in America, in defence of their just rights and freedom, as unreasonable, criminal, and rebellious; the conduct of the Parliament and Ministry of England, to be lawful and necessary. That their disposition towards America was friendly and benevolent; that they aimed at nothing but a constitutional, legal authority over America, equally necessary for its own welfare, as that of all other parts of the British Dominions. That the whole body of the Nation, except an inconsiderable part, of little weight or influence, were unanimously against us. That the manufacturing part of the Nation were little affected by our Non-Importation Agreement, and that we must be finally overcome by the power of Great Britain. The whole tendency and design of the letter was to disunite and discourage us in our necessary defence, to persuade us to give up our rights and liberties to Great Britain, submit to the authority it claims over us, and to its mercy for our opposition to it.

This vile letter, which, by the style and sentiments, I imagine is the production of Dr. Cooper, was first published in Mr. Rivington's, and the next week in Mr. Gaine's paper. Since that publication, several others of the like tendency have appeared in each of these papers, among which may be reckoned Mowat's nonsensical, insolent letter to the people of Falmouth, before he began his act of murder and high treason in firing upon the Town. The Address of the Quakers, dated 26th October, signed John Pemberton, published in Mr. Rivington's last paper, without the answer and refutation of it, contained in the Petition and Remonstrance of the Committee of the City of Philadelphia, on the 31st of the same month, presented to the General Assembly of the Colony then sitting. In Mr. Gaine's last paper, an account of the success of Major Roach, in raising recruits in Ireland to fight against the Americans, when all the papers agree that whatever may be the success of that particular man, through the influence of his musick, his parade, his gold, and his beer, his insidious, delusive speech, and the interest of the venal, ministerial noblemen and gentry who assist him, yet the service is so disagreeable to the people of Ireland, in general, that few of the recruiting officers can prevail upon a man to enlist and fight against their American brethren; which is also the case in many parts of England. These, and many other such like pieces, ought never to appear in our newspapers without answers, at the same time, to expose their fallacy, and prevent the people from being deceived by them. General Howe's illegal Proclamations and Associations, and even the King's last Proclamation, are all calculated to intimidate and deceive the people, and ought not to appear without comments and remarks, to expose their fallacy and prevent their effects. Of the same kind, also, are two extracts of letters from London, one dated the 4th, the other the 10th of September, in Mr. Gaine's last paper. The first would frighten us by representing the vast preparations making against us, and treating us as a deluded people, in our opposition to tyrannical power; the other, in persuading us "that all we can do will be ineffectual. That England considers the loss of our trade, and our military preparations in our own defence, as matters of no importance; and yet, from a benevolent disposition, laments the woes we are drawing upon ourselves. That our pretended friends in England are not to be relied on or credited; that our non-importation scheme is of little consequence to England; that the bulk of the people are against us; our advocates few and inconsiderable; and that we shall fatally be convinced of it, if we do not fall upon some mode of pacification before the spring—that is, if we do not, before that, do something that shall, in effect, be a surrender of our rights and liberties, by admitting a right in the Parliament of Great Britain to make laws to bind and tax us in all cases (or in any case) whatsoever."

But, my brethren, in my turn, let me warn you not to be deceived by such representations as these, which are notorious and abominable falsehoods, intended not for your good, but to betray you into all the miseries they are falsely pretended to avert; for slavery includes every evil human nature has to dread. I am ready to die in defence of the principles I recommend to you; and I advise you to die, rather than yield one tittle of your rights to the unjust, unconstitutional claims of a tyrannical Parliament and Ministry. If you yield a tittle, you are undone; you and your posterity will be absolute and confirmed slaves forever. God has formed you free; his service is perfect freedom. Freedom, therefore, he has given you, for an everlasting inheritance, which no man has a right to take away. You cannot part with it without affronting the God who gave it, and despising the inheritance to which he has made you heirs. Fear not but that he will enable you to defend it, if you are not wanting to yourselves. You have God and justice on your side. With such aids, no power in nature can prevail against us.

The Ministry and Parliament of Great Britain, authors of all the late oppressive acts against America, have demonstrated a fixed design to destroy the English Constitution, (the Englishman's boast and glory,) and established, in its stead, an arbitrary, tyrannical Government. Is it possible that Englishmen, or their friends, can lend a helping hand to destroy that glorious Constitution that has distinguished them from all other nations, and is the only cause of the greatness and power to which they have risen? None but real enemies to England can fight against its Constitution. Such are the Parliament and Ministry who passed the Declaratory Act, and all the late acts against America, beginning with the act for shutting up the port of Boston. Every one of these acts I do affirm to be acts of high treason against the English Constitution, and I challenge all the lawyers in the British Dominions to refute me. I would enlarge upon this subject, but the compass of your paper will not admit of it.

I would humbly recommend to the Committee of Safety,

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. III.

the Congress, and other friends to the rights and liberties of America, that inquiries should be made of the printers, who it was that handed these insidious pieces to the press; and I dare engage they will be found to be secret and dangerous enemies. Also, that a Committee should be appointed to watch over the publications in our papers, and answer all such as might have a dangerous tendency in deceiving the people. Also, that an inquiry should be made to discover those persons who have wickedly endeavoured to destroy the credit and currency of the paper money, or bills of credit, issued by the Continental and each Provincial Congress. The faith of each Colony in particular, and of all conjunctly, is engaged to support the credit of each respective species of currency, and the success of all our operations depends on their being supported in full credit. He, therefore, who endeavours to depreciate or render their credit doubtful, ought to be noted, deemed an enemy to America, and treated accordingly.

TRUCE BETWEEN CAPTAIN WALLACE AND THE TOWN OF NEWPORT.

Colony of Rhode-Island, &c.

The following are published by order of the General Committee. Witness:

Henry Ward, Sec'y.

[No. 1.] His Majesty's Ship Rose, November 14, 1775.

I will suspend hostilities against the Town, till I have further orders, upon their supplying the King's ships with fresh beef, &c. Let it remain neuter. The ferry and market boats to supply it unmolested. If the Rebels enter the Town and break the neutrality, I hold myself disengaged, and at liberty to do my utmost for the King's service.

James Wallace.

To the Inhabitants of the Town of Newport.

At a Town Council, Newport, November 14, 1775:

The Council accepts the Letter from Captain Wallace as a truce, and hopes General Hopkins will accept it in the same light.

[No. 2.] Head-Quarters, November 15, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I received a copy of a letter, signed by James Wallace, commander of His Majesty's Ship Rose, together with your approbation of its contents. In answer to which, I am to let you know that I will permit you to supply the Ministerial Navy, now in your harbour, with fresh provisions, &c., provided the quantity be ascertained, and is no more than is sufficient, or has been heretofore made use of, and that under the inspection of a man that I shall appoint and authorize, and not otherwise; provided that he, (said Wallace,) with all the vessels and boats under his command and direction, let all the wood, market, and ferry boats, pass and repass, together with their passengers and effects, unmolested and unexamined; on failure or breach of which, I shall immediately stop the supplies. This is all that can be expected in supplying the Ministerial Navy, except they remove out of cannon-shot of the Town of Newport. I am, &c.,

EZEK HOPKINS, Brigadier-General.

To the Worshipful Town Council of the Town of Newport.

Newport, November 16, 1775.

SIR: Your proposal for settling a truce between the Town of Newport and Captain Wallace, we have received and examined; and as the word unexamined, in your proposal, seems to us will not be complied with by Capt. Wallace, request you will leave the same out, as we apprehend it contrary to his instructions and the acts of Parliament, and are fearful it will greatly impede the wished-for truce.

I am, in behalf of the Town Council of Newport, Sir, &c.,

WM. CODDINGTON, Council Clerk.

To Ezek Hopkins, Esq., Brigadier-General of the Forces in this Colony.

[No. 4.]

Head-Quarters, November 16, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I received yours this day, wherein you request the word unexamined may be left out of my proposals, which I now give you leave to do; but I think it would be more for your interest to let it remain.

I am, &c.,

EZEK HOPKINS, Brigadier-General.

To the Worshipful Town Council of the Town of Newport.

Newport, November 16, 1775.

SIR: Your proposals for a truce with this Town were laid before us yesterday, by a Committee appointed to wait on you for that purpose. We should be happy in complying with them, but our very unhappy situation, we fear, is such, that however anxious we are to comply with your proposals, we shall not have it in our power, unless Captain Wallace will please to consent and agree that whatever provisions, &c., he may have occasion for, should be procured and furnished him by Samuel Dyre, Esq., who will wait on you, to receive your orders for the same, whenever you please. Our great fear is, that should your men be suffered by you to come into our market, we should not be able to prevent them from being taken. If Captain Wallace will agree to be furnished by Mr. Dyre, we hope the truce may be preserved; and you may be assured every thing shall be done by us, and the greatest part of the inhabitants remaining in Town, that it shall not be violated on our parts. We also promise that every thing shall be done to prevent the troops from coming into Town. Captain Wallace to be furnished with fresh beef, &c., for his ships' use, lying under his command here; the ferry, market, fish, and wood boats, to pass and repass, unmolested.

Signed by order and in behalf of the Town Council of Newport:

WM. CODDINGTON, Council Clerk.

To James Wallace, Esq., Commander of His Majesty's Ship Rose.

[No. 6.]

His Majesty's Ship Rose, November 16, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I have received yours of the 16th instant. It is perfectly agreeable to me to take the provisions from any person you choose to appoint. The greatest care shall be taken to preserve the truce on our side; for which reason our men shall not be permitted to enter the Town, unless the Rebels enter, and oblige us for the King's service.

I am, &c.,

JAMES WALLACE.

To the Inhabitants of the Town of Newport.

[No. 7.]

At a Town Council, Newport, November 16, 1775:

The Council, having received the within from Captain Wallace, consent that he shall be supplied, for his Ships' use, in this harbour, with two thousand pounds weight of Beef, per week; and has now requested six hogsheads of Rum, which we think it necessary he should be supplied with, as, by the best information we can obtain, he has about five hundred men now to victual, on board the vessels under his command.

Signed by order and in behalf of the Town Council of Newport:

WM. CODDINGTON, Council Clerk.

To Ezek Hopkins, Esq., Brigadier-General of the Forces in this Colony.

[No. 8.]

Newport, November 17, 1775.

SIR: We received yours of this date, wherein you permit the ships under the command of Capt. Wallace to be supplied, weekly, with sixteen hundred weight of beef, and two hogsheads of rum. The Committee who went with the letters to Captain Wallace, to agree with him respecting his supplies of provisions, inform us that they stipulated for two thousand pound weight of beef, per week. And the last week he asked for two thousand pound weight; but when he came to receive it, took no more than one thousand six hundred and twenty-four pounds, he being governed by the number of men then belonging to his vessels here, under his command; so that we imagine he will take no more than for the number of men he now has here, and request you will allow him to take as much as he shall require, as far as the amount of two thousand pounds weight.

Signed by order and in behalf of the Town Council of Newport:

Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

WM. CODDINGTON, Council Clerk.

To Ezek Hopkins, Esq., Brigadier-General of the Forces now at Middletown.

[No. 9.]

Newport, November 17, 1775.

SIR: Mr. Christopher Champlin, contractor for victualing the ships here, this day informed the Council that he has now in his possession seventeen barrels of salted pork, and five casks of calivance, which he bought in June last, for the use of the ships here, under the command of Captain Wallace. And he informs us that he some time since informed Captain Wallace that he had such provisions bought for his service, but, as affairs were, he could not deliver them to him; and he therefore now informs the Council thereof, that they may act therein as they may judge fit. Whereupon, we recommend it that said provisions may be delivered to Captain Wallace, for his ships' use, as he says he has already charged them, and that his accounts are closed. We therefore, if it be agreeable, request that you will give orders for the delivery thereof.

Signed by order and in behalf of the Town Council of Newport:

Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

WM. CODDINGTON, Council Clerk.

To Ezek Hopkins, Esq., Brigadier-General of the Forces in this Colony.

[No. 10.]

Head-Quarters, Middletown, November 17, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I have received a copy of your letter to Captain Wallace, and his to you, bearing date the 16th inst., and also your request of this date, that the said Wallace may have delivered him seventeen barrels of pork, and five barrels of calivance, now in the store of Mr. Christopher Champlin.

You have my permission, under the care and direction of Samuel Dyre, Esq., to deliver to Captain Wallace the above seventeen barrels of pork, and five barrels of calivance; and also to deliver two hogsheads of rum, and sixteen hundred weight of beef, once a week, and that on Saturday. Moreover, Samuel Dyre, Esq., has my permission to supply the ships with sauce, he rendering to me a weekly account of the quantity delivered.

EZEK HOPKINS, Brigadier-General.

To the Worshipful Town Council of Newport.

NEWPORT, ss.

The above and foregoing ten Letters, No. 1 to 10, are true copies. Witness:

TO THE AMERICAN SOLDIERY.

Worthy Fellow-Soldiers:

When I take a view of the extensive Country we inhabit, and consider the surprising rapidity with which it has emerged from a state of savage barbarity, in which it was a century and a half past involved; when I traverse the pleasant fields, and take a survey of the elegant buildings and beautiful landscapes rising to my view, where, not long since, the impenetrable forests and inhospitable wilds, the haunts of prowling wolves, forbade the approach of the affrighted traveller; when I view these once dreary wastes blossoming as the rose, and teeming with an ample supply of all the conveniences of life; in fine, when I attend to the almost incredible rapidity of population in the American Colonies, I am struck with astonishment at the bountiful rewards of the industry of our worthy forefathers, and cannot forbear anticipating the future grandeur of this western world. The number of inhabitants, according to the most accurate estimates that have been made, doubles in every period of twenty-five years; the Continental Congress has estimated the number of inhabitants in eleven Colonies at three millions—equal to about three-fifths of those in the whole Island of Great Britain. In the year 1800, according to the foregoing calculation, it will amount to six millions. Let us stretch our ideas to the year 2000, and our computation furnishes us with the number of one thousand five hundred and thirty-six millions—a computation which almost exceeds human conception; but it is not greater than what may rationally be expected, if they continue to increase in the proportion they have hitherto done. It may, perhaps, be objected, that in indulging the sallies of too sanguine an imagination, I have neglected to consider, that as the rapid increase of inhabitants in the American Colonies has proceeded chiefly from that spirit of emigration which, in consequence of the cheapness of lands and healthiness of the climate, has actuated the Europeans, of almost all nations, to purchase freeholds for their families, and as those unappropriated lands are daily becoming less extensive, this source of population must in a short time fail us. I know it is an axiom in politicks, that beyond a determinate degree of population, in any Country, the proportion of the increase of number diminishes; but, to answer these objections, I need only point to those almost unbounded deserts which extend from our most western settlements to the Pacifick Ocean—regions hitherto unexplored by the most indefatigable researches. To this pleasing portrait, if we add the proportionable improvements in agriculture, the military and polite arts and sciences, together with that increase of wealth and importance which will result from an unconfined trade, they may perhaps render this once despicable Country the most powerful and august Empire which the annals of history can boast. Let us look around us, then, my fellow-soldiers; let us contemplate this pleasing figure; let us make a solemn pause, and then ask ourselves whether we are willing to relinquish not only our present enjoyments, but all our hopes of securing happiness and freedom for our children, and thereby spurn those privileges which the God of nature has conferred upon us in such beneficent profusion. Let us ask ourselves whether we will see our wives and children, with every thing that is dear to us, subjected to the merciless rage of uncontrolled despotism. Or, are any of us at a loss concerning our duty, in this day of general distress, let us repair to the graves of our sleeping forefathers; let us consult their venerable manes upon this momentous occasion. Would they not, if it were possible, reanimate their entombed dust, or burst forth from their gloomy caverns, and point to those wounds they received in securing the Country which gave us birth from the inhuman depredations of their faithless enemies? Would they not recount the numerous perils to which they were exposed in crossing a wide ocean, the hardships and almost insurmountable difficulties they encountered in every form? Would they not, with a degree of noble indignation, upbraid us with ingratitude to them, and want of spirit and manly resolution, in cruelly hesitating one moment to defend and secure to our posterity what cost them so much blood and treasure? Let us clothe our faces with an ingenuous blush for our criminal indifference; let us drop a grateful tear in tribute to the memory of men, the very relation of whose disinterested exertions and unparalleled sufferings should be sufficient to inspire us with an heroic ardour in the glorious enterprise of transmitting to our children those sacred rights to which we ourselves were born; let us fly to the only means left for our defence, and swear to those venerable shades, that their sons will never disgrace their unsullied names with the execrable epithet of slave.

But if these considerations are not sufficient to inspire us with fortitude and resolution, there are still higher motives, which cannot fail to unite us in this noble struggle. We are engaged, my fellow-soldiers, in the cause of virtue, of liberty, of God. For God's sake, then, let us play the man; for God's sake, let us neglect no requisite precautions to frustrate the cruel attempts of our remorseless foes; for God's sake, let us encourage regularity and good order in the Army, by paying implicit obedience to the commands of our officers; let us consider the importance of discipline, and the terror which the most exact uniformity in performing the military manœuvres generally strikes upon the most experienced enemy. What rendered the Spartan Army the glory of the Grecian Empire, and caused even Xerxes the Great to tremble, but that hardy mode of discipline to which they were from their infancy, by the law of Lycurgus, habituated? What but an unreserved confidence of the Roman soldiers in the abilities of their commanders enabled them to conquer an illustrious Hannibal? What but an unremitted attention to the art of war procured them the empire of the world, by wresting it from the hands of the Grecian warriors? What but a neglect of this rendered them an easy prey to their savage neighbours? In fine, these are the necessary artifices by which the glory of the British arms has extended to the most distant shores. Let Americans catch that beautiful regularity, and hardy form of discipline, which Britons, through debauchery and effeminacy, are losing. Let us not consider these matters as of little importance; they are absolutely necessary in a Standing Army, of the greatest importance in a Militia. We may hope, then, that the latter will, by the wisdom of our Senators, be immediately put under proper regulations, since their assistance may be rendered indispensably necessary in any emergency; let us be constant in attending our duty and in guarding our lines, that we may be ready at all times to repel our enemy. Though they may not, perhaps, venture without the reach of their cannon, yet they will doubtless endeavour to plunder our pastures, to satisfy their hunger, as in the week past; and we cannot be too vigilant in our endeavours to frustrate them; let us resolve to follow our officers to an honourable death or a glorious victory. At worst, it is only dying a few days sooner than we otherwise should; it is only losing a few days of a devoted life. If we live to conquer, we gain our freedom, and reap the fruits of it.

Our cruel enemies have forced us to pass the Rubicon; we have begun the noble work, and there is no retreating. The King of Britain has proclaimed us Rebels. The sword is drawn, and the scabbard must be thrown away. There is no medium between a glorious defence and the most abject slavery. If we fail in our endeavours to repel the assaults of tyranny, we are to expect no mercy. The brave but miserable Corsicans may serve for an example of the unrestrained ravages of enraged despotism. On the other hand, the States of Holland supply an instance of happiness and glory, procured by a noble stand against absolute power. We would not wish for the absolute independence of the latter, would our inexorable oppressors but listen to our just complaints; but, at all events, we are determined not to submit to a system of tyranny little inferior to that slavish thralldom in which the subjects of the Turkish Sultan are held.

Our enemies have ridiculed our courage and military skill; but, by dear-bought experience, they have been convinced of their error. They are obliged to submit to the mortification of being confined within a few acres of land, miserably fed upon a beggarly pittance of half-starved animal food. We are driving them from our fortresses in the West; our privateers are daily seizing valuable cargoes of provisions and other articles upon the seas, where we least expected success. In fine, we are supplying ourselves with every thing necessary to support the war. New schemes of economy are inventing, and I doubt not but we shall find our calamities in a short time considerably alleviated, if not by foreign trade, yet by industry and frugality, which are making such rapid progress throughout the Continent. Approving Heaven has hitherto smiled upon almost every enterprise.

Though, from a natural affection to our Mother Country, and a reluctance to the effusion of human blood, we quietly suffered the enemy to take possession of and fortify the Town of Boston, yet they can boast no advantages which they have acquired by their arms, except one dear-bought spot, which, by superiority of numbers, they with difficulty obtained.

A few more noble exertions, my brave fellow-soldiers, a few more spirited struggles, and we secure our liberties; a few more successful battles, and we are a free and happy people. We will then retire to our families, and, whilst we are regaling ourselves with social festivity, entertain our listening children with the fatigues and dangers to which they owe their freedom, and show the scars of the honourable wounds we received in the field of battle. Happy the man who can boast that he was one of those heroes that put the finishing stroke to this arduous work; in serenity may he pass his future days, and, when satisfied with life, and expiring under the smiles of an approving conscience, bequeath the inestimable patrimony to his grateful children.

A SOLDIER.

ADDRESS OF THE BOROUGH OF LYMINGTON.

Address of the Mayor, Burgesses, and Inhabitants of the Borough of Lymington, presented to His Majesty by Sir Harry Burrard, Bart., one of their Representatives in Parliament.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Mayor, Burgesses, and Inhabitants of the ancient Borough of Lymington, with all humility, approach your royal presence at this truly interesting and alarming crisis, and beg leave to express, in the warmest terms, our most affectionate and inviolable attachment to your Majesty's person and Government.

It is with the deepest concern we behold that some disaffected, turbulent, and designing men, taking advantage of your Majesty's lenity, have been able, by degrees, to deceive and delude so many of your Majesty's subjects in America; and to force others, by the most cruel acts of tyranny and oppression, into an avowed and detestable rebellion.

We cannot sufficiently admire the wisdom and lenity of your Majesty's Councils, in preparing, with firmness and resolution, the means of succouring and protecting the well affected and much distressed part of your Majesty's subjects; and of compelling the refractory to pay a due attention to their dependance on the Parent State, and a proper obedience to the laws of our inestimable Constitution. Nor can any thing render your Majesty's clemency more conspicuous, than the disposition you have manifested of re-admitting to your gracious favour and protection such of your subjects as may voluntarily retract their errors, and return to their duty and allegiance.

Sensible of your Majesty's paternal care and vigilance to promote the happiness of all your people, and to secure to them inviolate the full enjoyment of their liberties, and all the just rights and privileges delivered down to them from their forefathers, we most solemnly assure your Majesty, that we shall be ready to risk every thing we hold most dear, to keep the dignity and honour of the crown unsullied, and to maintain and support the supreme legislative authority of Great Britain; which we know to be the only firm basis of the true happiness of your Majesty's subjects in every part of your extensive Dominions.

That your Majesty may reign long and prosperous, over an happy and united people, is the fervent prayer of your Majesty's most faithful subjects.

ADDRESS OF THE ANCIENT AND ROYAL BURGH OF FORFAR.

Address of the Provost, Magistrates, and Town Council of the ancient and royal Burgh of Forfar, transmitted to the Earl of Suffolk, one of His Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, and presented to His Majesty.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Provost, Magistrates, and Town Council of your ancient and royal Burgh of FORFAR.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

With hearts full of gratitude we beg leave to express our sincere acknowledgments for the many blessings we have experienced under your Majesty's mild Government, ever since your happy accession to the throne.

Being sensible that these blessings have spread over all your Majesty's extensive Dominions, we must declare our utmost abhorrence and detestation of the unnatural and unprovoked rebellion raised and carried on by our deluded fellow-subjects in America, which we doubt not hath been greatly encouraged by several wicked and turbulent persons at home.

We sincerely lament the present situation of these deluded people, but, at the same time, as the most effectual means for restoring peace and good government, we must beg leave to express our earnest wishes, that the measures adopted by your Majesty and your two Houses of Parliament may be prosecuted with vigour, until all rebellious and seditious practices are totally extirpated. And we can assure your Majesty, that not only we, but the whole of the inhabitants of this Burgh, whom we represent, are ready to risk our lives and fortunes in support of such measures.

Signed in name and by appointment of the Magistrates and Town Council of the Burgh of Forfar, and the common seal appended, this fifteenth day of November, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five years.

WILLIAM KER, Provost.

ADDRESS OF THE TOWN OF CAMBRIDGE.

Address of the Aldermen, Common Councilmen, Freemen, and Inhabitants of the Town of Cambridge, presented to His Majesty by the Hon. Charles Sloane Cadogan and Soame Jenyns, Esq., their Representatives in Parliament.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's dutiful subjects, Aldermen, Common Councilmen, Freemen, and Inhabitants of the ancient and loyal Town of Cambridge, beg leave, with all duty and humility, to approach the throne at this important crisis, on which we do not impertinently presume to obtrude on your Majesty our opinions or advice, though for it we have numerous and great examples to plead, but desire only, together with many other of your Majesty's loyal subjects, to express at this time our sincere attachment to your Majesty's person and Government, our consciousness of your Majesty's many royal virtues, our utter detestation of all rebellion, treason, and faction, and our steady resolution to support your Majesty, to the utmost of our power, against all your enemies, whether open or concealed, both at home and abroad; and to assure your Majesty that we place such entire confidence in your Majesty's known wisdom and goodness, that we cannot entertain the least doubt that such measures, either of vigour or lenity, of coercion or indulgence, will be pursued, as are best adapted to reduce your deluded subjects in America, now in a state of rebellion and anarchy, to a due obedience to your Majesty, and submission to the Legislature of Great Britain.

Cambridge, November 15, 1775.

DINWIDDIE COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

At a Committee held for the County of Dinwiddie, on Wednesday, the 15th day of November, 1775, present twenty-eight Members:

Resolved, That no Provisions of any kind, or Fuel, be hereafter allowed to be carried from this County, by land or water, without a permit from the honourable Committee of Safety, or the Committee of this County.

JEDEDIAH ELDERKIN TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Windham, November 15, 1775.

Whereas your Honour and Council of Safety, on the 2d day of November, instant, appointed me, with Major Daves, (now residing in Norwich,) with such Engineers as your Honour should procure from his Excellency General Washington, to repair to and view the circumstances of the harbour and port at New-London, and neighbouring places, and consider of the most proper places and manner of fortifying the same against our enemies, &c., according to act of Assembly, &c., after which it so happened that no Engineers could be procured; that on the 8th of said November, your Honour directed me to wait on said Major Dawes, and with him to attend on and perform said service in the best manner we could.

That on the 9th day of said November, I, at Norwich, waited on said Major Dawes, informed him of his being appointed in manner aforesaid, and requested him with me to attend said service; which service the said Major Dawes declined, for reasons which he judged sufficient to excuse him; on which, by the advice of some of your Honour's Council of Safety, I went forward to New-London and Groton, to execute said trust, and do the service in the best manner I could, by the assistance, information, and help of the principal gentlemen of said Towns. On my arrival, sent to considerable part, and gave notice to almost all the gentlemen living on the banks and near the harbour in New-London, among whom were many who, by travelling and otherwise, had gained considerable knowledge in fortifications, batteries, and securing harbours, &c. I then informed them of your Honour's orders, and that I would wish them to view the several places mentioned by the Assembly's Committee, and any other they would propose as suitable to build works on for the security of the harbour; on which, it was the voice of all, that the places mentioned in the Committee's report were far the best on the harbour, and were so formed and situated that, with much the least expense and danger, they might be improved for the security of that port.

We then went on and viewed the island or point called Mammicoek, with the make, rise, and fall of the ground, to and from the point or place where the battery must stand; found the distance from thence to the old fort, to the harbour's mouth, and directly across the river. On viewing, all were of opinion that the places were good for the purpose. The top of the east part is near twenty feet above the water; on the top, principally flat rocks; near by plenty of turf, suitable for constructing and making of a rampart or bank—suppose a bank eighty feet, fronting near east, the same length south, the same north, not on right angles, with five embrasures in each rampart or bank, without bastions or trenches without the works, and five cannon, eighteen or twenty-four pounders, well mounted, which might with ease be removed from place to place, as the service might require. This battery, if built, would be one hundred and eighty-two rods from the old fort, a little over two miles from the harbour's mouth, and the waters of the river on the harbour near east opposite one hundred and ninety-two rods; would command the harbour in every place northeast and south within reach of their shot.

We then viewed the place called Winthrop's Point, and find the south bluff part of that point is twenty feet above the water, very steep, mostly hard gravel, pointing down the harbour to the harbour's mouth; a fine level on the top, near the water, to build a battery or breastwork, for the improving of cannon, to secure the port of New-London; the land leading to the point so rises and has sundry hills and vales, that any number of men may pass and repass entirely safe from ships in any part of the harbour; materials, viz: turf and gravel, plenty and handy. Suppose ten guns, eighteen or twenty-four pounders, would be well to be planted at this place.

Then viewed sundry places at Groton, and were attended by and had the advice of many of the gentlemen of that Town, who all manifested their desire that the port of New-London might be fortified; which they, as well as the people at New-London, supposed might be done with as little expense as any harbour or port equally valuable on the Continent. On examination, viewing, &c., find there is in Groton, nearly opposite the old fort, at New-London, a hill or eminence, the summit or top of which is about one hundred and twenty feet above the surface of the water, and within fifty rods of the water's edge, at which place the ship channel is not more than one hundred and sixty rods in width. On the summit of this hill, the harbour, from the entrance to the north part thereof, and some way up this river, is open and in view. On this hill, it seems, nature had prepared a place to plant cannon for the protection of that port or harbour; the top, running near the same part of the harbour north and south for some distance, is considerable level, sufficient to improve such number of cannon as would be necessary, and east and west sufficient for breastwork, platform, &c., for the cannon; then the declivity of the hill is such east, that any number of men, by slipping a few saps back of the works, would be out of danger. The form of the land is such, that all passing to and from a battery there could be secure from the enemy. It is thought no large man-of-war can so elevate her cannon in her lower tier as to annoy a battery at this place: if she could reach thence, they would be random shot. I suppose no works would be necessary here for the improvement of cannon, only a breastwork, or bank of turf and gravel, not more than ten feet thick, of suitable height for the cannon to play over, without embrasures, bastions, or trenches; turf and gravel plenty; ten twenty-four pounders would answer, but some larger would be better. I need not observe the great advantage the defenders would have at this place over their enemy; the elevation is such, that they may plunge into their ships, if within reach of their guns.

Also viewed the new works at the old battery, executed by Colonel Saltonstall, which are well done, and nearly finished; the cannon well mounted; the situation good, if other batteries, at some or all the other places, are built, and cannon planted, so that the enemy's fire be drawn to different places, and not centre there. But if the batteries were built at all the proposed places, and with a suitable number and proper weight of cannon, the situation and different angles that those places bear one to the other would expose any ship that should come within reach of their shot, within the harbour, to be distressed, annoyed, and raked fore and aft.

As to the expense of the works at those places, I endeavoured, by the help of some best acquainted, to make some estimate; but found, on trial, that it was not possible to be done with any degree of certainty. The people of Groton, at their own expense, have, at sundry places near the water's edge, made breastworks and intrenchments to protect them in the use of their fire-arms, on the landing of troops on or near their wharves and other places, which they are determined to oppose to the last. These works are very well done, and at very considerable expense, in which the people appear free and spirited.

As to floating batteries to defend the port and harbours against the enemy's ships, when they come with defiance and a determination to possess themselves of that part of our Country, they cannot be sufficient without fixed batteries at some or all the places proposed, to secure and defend the port from invasion and falling into the possession of the enemy. I own I never till lately gave much attention to the business or art of fortifying harbours or building forts, batteries, &c., but the alarming situation and distress which our Country is in, and ministerial designs and vengeance aimed at our sea-coasts, has called my attention to look into matters of that kind, and, so far as I can judge, it is of the utmost importance to secure the port and harbour of New-London from falling into the hands of our enemies, which will be an asylum for ships, vessels of force, floating batteries, &c., that may be by the Continent or any particular Government built for the protection of our sea-coasts or Country, which shall come that way; but, on the contrary, if left destitute of protection, and fall into the hands of our enemies, it would let them into the bowels of our Country, and give them great advantage against us. That the best and only sure and eligible manner of fortifying and securing said port and harbour is in erecting batteries at the several places and in some manner as before mentioned.

All which is submitted to your Honour's wisdom; and am your Honour's most obedient humble servant,

JEDEDIAH ELDERKIN.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Governour of the Colony of Connecticut.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Cambridge, November 15, 1775.

SIR: I received your favour of the 6th instant, in which you give a detail of Dr. Cheney's case, as it appeared before you and Council, in which nothing but the fair side of his character appears. You may be assured, Sir, that his trial will be impartial; that no insidious designs of his enemies will have weight, and that it will give me much pleasure to find he can acquit himself of the crimes he is charged with. The evidences are hourly expected; on their arrival, the trial will be no longer delayed. General Sullivan set out the 12th instant for Portsmouth, New-Hampshire. I enclose you a copy of instructions given unto him.

As it is now very apparent that we have nothing to depend on in the present contest but our own strength, care, firmness, and union, should not the same measures be adopted in yours and every other Government on the Continent? Would it not be prudence to seize on those Tories who have been, are, and that we know will be active against us? Why should persons who are preying upon the vitals of their Country be suffered to stalk at large, while we know they will do us every mischief in their power? These, Sir, are points I beg to submit to your serious consideration.

I congratulate you on the success of our arms, by the surrender of St. John's, which I hope will be soon followed by the reduction of Canada.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most humble servant,
GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

P. S. By an express arrived from Philadelphia, I received the following resolve of the Continental Congress:

"Resolved, That Dr. Church be close confined in some secure Jail in the Colony of Connecticut, without the use of pen, ink, and paper; and that no person be allowed to converse with him, except in the presence of a Magistrate, or the Sheriff of the County where he shall be confined, and in the English language, until further orders from this or a future Congress.

"By order of the Congress:

"JOHN HANCOCK, President.

"Attest: CHARLES THOMSON, Sec'y.

"Philadelphia, November 6, 1775."

Sir, in consequence of the above resolve, I now transmit to your care Dr. Church, under the care of Captain Israel Putnam, a Sergeant, and seven men. You will please to comply, in every particular, to the above resolution of Congress.

I am, with great respect, Sir, yours, &c.,
GEORGE WASHINGTON.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Cambridge, November 15, 1775.

SIR: General Sullivan set out the 12th inst., for Portsmouth, New-Hampshire. I enclose you a copy of instructions given unto him. As it is now very apparent that we have nothing to depend on, in the present contest, but our own strength, care, firmness, and union, should not the same measures be adopted in yours and every Government on the Continent? Would it not be prudent to seize on those Tories who have been, are, and that we know will be active against us? Why should persons who are preying upon the vitals of their Country be suffered to stalk at large, whilst we know they will do us every mischief in their power? These, Sir, are points I beg to submit to your most serious consideration.

I congratulate you on the success of our arms, by the surrender of St. John's, which hope will be soon followed by the reduction of Canada.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,
GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Governour Cooke, Rhode-Island.

ADDRESS OF THE BURGH OF LANARK.

Address of the Lord Provost, Magistrates, Town Council, and Deacons of Crafts, of the Burgh of Lanark, presented to His Majesty by Sir James Cockburn, Baronet, their Representative in Parliament.

Unto the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Lord Provost, Magistrates, Town Council, and Deacons of Crafts, of the Burgh of LANARK, in Common Council assembled.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

With affectionate hearts, full of loyalty to your Majesty's person and Government, and impressed in the most sensible manner with the blessings that flow from your mild and auspicious reign, permit us, at this important crisis, to express our abhorrence of that rebellious spirit which has prompted your deluded subjects in America to take arms in opposition to your Majesty's Government, and to the legal authority of Parliament.

We have, with the greatest concern, beheld the many unjust attempts which have been made to disturb the tranquillity of your Majesty's reign. We sincerely wish that our unhappy and deluded fellow-subjects in America may see their error, and return to their duty; but if they shall continue in their unnatural and unprovoked rebellion, with our lives and fortunes we will assert the supremacy of your Majesty and Parliament over every part of the British Empire, and hope the sons of sedition may be taught that the same arm which was lately stretched out for their defence and security, and which drove all their enemies far from their confines, can, with equal ease, chastise ungrateful and rebellious subjects. Happy that the rod is in the most mild and merciful hand—in the hand of the father and the friend of his people.

We pray that God Almighty, for these purposes, may bless your Majesty's Councils with wisdom, grant success to your arms, restore peace and tranquillity to all your subjects, and spare your Majesty long to reign with honour and glory, over a happy, a free, and united people.

Signed in our name and by our appointment, at Lanark, the sixteenth day of November, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five years, by ROBERT BELL, Provost.

THE MONITOR, NO. II.

New-York, November 16, 1775.

It is the common practice of courtiers to confound every distinction between open rebellion and a necessary resistance to usurpation and tyranny. However enormous the strides they take for extending their power, they still expect an implicit submission from the people, denominating every appearance of discontent or opposition a culpable mark of a mutinous and treasonable disposition; and, by this mean, they are often guilty of a shameful prostitution of ideas and language. A Charles and a James, as well as monarchs of more specious pretensions, were exceedingly liberal in bestowing the odious epithets of treason and rebellion upon the efforts of their subjects, to avoid the mischiefs of unbounded ambition and bigoted tyranny; furious proclamations, imperious speeches and menaces, the whole artillery of royal indignation was exerted, but exerted in vain, to intimidate the free spirit of an injured nation. To their cost they found that the dangerous tempest they had excited was not to be allayed, till it had overwhelmed them in merited destruction. Happily for mankind, the dictates of common sense, and the unalterable relations of right and wrong, justice and injustice, are not to be overruled by the arbitrary constructions of Princes or Ministers; but the laws of nature and reason will still retain their force, in spite of their perverted conceptions or contaminated principles. The breath of an incensed despot can never make it sedition or treason to withstand his pernicious encroachments and merciless oppressions.

Our enemies falsely charged us with endeavouring to subvert the Constitution; but, upon the fairest examination, it must be evident that we are its truest supporters, while they are its most flagitious destroyers. The right of the subject to enjoy a personal or representative participation in the laws on which depends the disposal of his life, his liberty, and his property, has been long an acknowledged fundamental of the English Government, and was fortified beyond all dispute by the principles of the Revolution. This privilege is the sole object of our contention, which we claim, not only from the genuine nature of the Constitution, but from express stipulations by royal grants and charters, and from the possession, almost uninterrupted, of near two centuries. But the innovating spirit of Administration is making the most forcible and reiterated attempts to wrest it from us. The British Parliament is violently usurping the powers of our Colony Governments, and rendering our legal assemblies utterly useless; to prevent this, the necessity of our situation has obliged us to depart from the common forms, and to adopt measures which would be otherwise unjustifiable; but, in this departure, we have been influenced by an ardent desire to repel innovations destructive to all good government among us, and fatal to the foundations of law, liberty, and justice; we have declared, in the most explicit terms, that we wish for nothing more than a restoration to our ancient condition; and, in different modes, have employed all the eloquence of earnest remonstrances, and fervent supplications, to detach our oppressors from their malignant designs. Inhuman and impolitick, they have still continued impregnable to our arguments and entreaties; and, mad with the intoxication of power, obstinately prosecute their intrigues and violences against us, to the manifest detriment of the Empire, and, perhaps, in the end, to their own confusion, infamy, and downfall. They have first taken up arms to overthrow our charters, the Governments erected upon them, and the immunities regularly transmitted to us by our provident forefathers; we have taken up arms in order to defend these from their inroads and invasions, desirous of laying them down whenever they will permit us, by desisting from schemes so irreconcilable to our safety and welfare.

If the Constitution is to be the touchstone of treason and rebellion, and the violators of it are the traitors and rebels, then will those appellations belong more properly to the Ministry and their instruments, who are labouring to overturn it, than to us, who are making every possible exertion in support of its purest principles.* It is the primary duty of a subject to preserve the Constitution; all other civil duties are secondary and subordinate to this. Even the allegiance due to the Sovereign is derived from that fountain, and must be regulated and limited by it. The King has no authority beyond the boundaries prescribed therein; nor has he the least right to expect, much less to enforce obedience to any anti-constitutional mandate or measure: and where he has no right to exact obedience he may be justly resisted. Those who should engage him in any such proceeding would be his greatest enemies; because every deliberate infringement of the Constitution must tend more or less, in proportion to its magnitude, to a dissolution of society, and to a forfeiture of his crown and regal dignity. Who can therefore sufficiently detest the unpardonable conduct of those men who abuse the confidence of His Majesty, by either seducing or encouraging him to enterprises which are not only likely to involve the Nation in unspeakable calamities, but are so dangerous in their consequences, to his prerogative and honour, and so contrary to the terms on which his family were called to sway the imperial sceptre?

It ought to be our best consolation and firmest support, that the resistance we are making cannot be deemed rebellion, without implying the same stigma on the Revolution; an event that forms the most illustrious epoch on the whole circle of English affairs. If we are rebels, all those who were concerned in inviting the Prince of Orange over to England, who were instrumental in the expulsion of the tyrant James, and who afterwards concurred in placing the crown on the head of William, were rebels of the blackest dye; William himself was a detestable usurper, and all his successors have been very little better. These consequences, in spite of cobweb casuistry, and all the subtilizing arts of political cheimists, are absolutely unavoidable.

In pleading the example of the Revolution to justify the principles upon which our present opposition is founded, and to remove the imputation of treason and rebellion, we should reserve a material distinction in our favour. In that instance, (owing indeed to the necessity of the case,) the opposition was levelled against the entire authority of King James; a breach was made in the established order of succession, and the hereditary monarch himself was expelled, and constrained to pass through various scenes of personal danger and distress. In our contest we do not even question the royal prerogative; we meditate nothing hostile to the person or authority of His Majesty; we aim not at revolutions or changes, but rather at the prevention of them. In short, we confine ourselves simply to the retaining what we have always had, without intending to dispossess others of any part of the power they ever were entitled to; we only blame His Majesty, or rather his Ministers, contrary to the uniform practice of their predecessors, for combining with the other branches of the Legislature of Britain to exercise powers, new and unprecedented, as well as derogatory to the authority of our Assemblies, and fatal to our rights as a free people. And this we are determined to resist so long as we have any resources or means of resistance left. It is, however, hard to tell what expedients we may hereafter be driven to, for our own preservation and security, if a reconciliation should unfortunately be too long protracted, and the war should proceed with that rage and animosity which are the usual concomitants of civil broils.

* "The first and highest treason is that which is committed against the Constitution." Again: "They neither are, nor can be traitors, who endeavour to preserve and maintain the Constitution; but they are the traitors who design and pursue the subversion of it; they are the rebels who go about to overthrow the Government of their Country; whereas such as seek to support and defend it are the truly loyal persons, and do act conformable to the ties and obligations of fealty."—SOMERS'S Judgment of whole Kingdoms, &c. Similar to these are the sentiments of Mr. Locke, Bishop Hoadley, and most of the best writers on Government.

It will no doubt have appeared, from the beginning, that the intention of this paper is to refute the fallacies advanced in a Proclamation lately issued under His Majesty's name, for suppressing rebellion and sedition, the preamble of which sets forth, "that many of his subjects, in divers parts of his Colonies and Plantations in North-America, forgetting the allegiance which they owe to the power which has protected and sustained them, after various disorderly acts, have at length proceeded to an open and avowed rebellion, by arraying themselves in a hostile manner, to withstand the execution of the law, and traitorously preparing, ordering, and levying war against him."

When did we forget or refuse to perform the duties or allegiance which we owe to the power that has protected and sustained us? To the King, as the supreme executive magistrate, the dispenser of justice, and the representative of the Nation, in all foreign transactions, we have ever shown the most unreserved obedience. So long as he continued to rule us by the laws of the land, agreeable to the rights of our Provincial Legislatures, and to the most simple ideas of liberty and equity, we gave the strongest proofs of the most devoted attachment; so long as the Parliament was contented with that share of authority over us which seems properly to arise from the nature of our connection, and requisite towards promoting the interests of the whole, we cheerfully acquiesced in its decisions. In the emergencies of the Empire, our contributions were proportionate to our abilities; we were commended for our liberality, and even repaid a part of our disbursements. "If this Nation (says Montesquieu, speaking of the English) sends colonies abroad, it must rather be to extend its commerce than its dominion." Accordingly we have allowed it, and are still willing to allow it, the monopoly of our trade, as a recompense for the benefit of its protection.

If our present conduct has not the aspect of the same loyalty and affection by which our former was distinguished, and if we have lately withheld the emoluments of our commerce from Britain, the reasons of this change are solid and indispensable. It did not take place before a change, the most important imaginable, had been introduced into the treatment we had ever been accustomed to receive from the Parent State. Protection includes the internal security of our privileges, as well as preservation from external or foreign attacks. But instead of protecting us in the peaceable fruition of our ancient rights, a criminal resolution was embraced to bereave us of them, and reduce us to the wretched condition of slaves. Where protection ceases, there obedience ceases also; and where injury begins, resistance commences with it. We are not unmindful of the power that has protected and sustained us; but we are opposing the unlicensed irruptions of a power that would enslave and ruin us. Our gratitude to the former we have displayed on many occasions, and long for nothing more than a fair opportunity of giving fresh testimonies, and of burying recent deviations in perpetual oblivion; our invincible enmity to the latter, I hope, we shall never be afraid to demonstrate by every symptom in our power.

It is false that we have at length proceeded to open and avowed rebellion, have withstood the execution of the law, or have levied war against the King. Rebellion is a resistance by force of arms to just and legal authority; we only resist the unjust and illegal usurpations of Parliament. The edicts of an assumed, arbitrary, and unconstitutional power are not law; a rightful, well founded authority is presupposed in the promulgation of law; we cannot, therefore, be said to withstand the execution of law, by refusing submission to the late unwarrantable acts of the British Legislature, which can never equitably pretend to the validity and efficacy of law. Neither have we traitorously waged war against the King, or entered into any conspiracies inimical to his person, crown, and dignity, as is injuriously asserted. We have, indeed, been compelled to arm in defence of our lives, liberties, and properties, from the projected desolations of his servants;* but we have expostulated with him in the most dutiful manner to discountenance and repress their attempts, confining our pretensions within the strictest bounds of duty, and declaring ourselves ready to lay aside every military preparation, so soon as it might be done consistent with our safety and repose. He or his evil counsellors alone are to blame for every moment's continuance in our present warlike posture.

How, then, ought we to be affected with the hateful denominations of traitor and rebel, and the vengeful threats of condign punishment, which have been vented against us? Surely they should not damp or assuage our ardour, but rather kindle and invigorate it. We should feel no other sentiments than those of indignation and resentment. First to attempt the deprivation of our dearest rights, and, because we show ourselves sensible of their importance, to reproach us with treason and rebellion, is a degree of insolence that almost surpasses the bounds of patience. He whose bosom does not recoil at the contemplation of the grossest injuries, aggravated by the grossest insults, must have an apathy of temper or a meanness of soul equally unaccountable and undesirable. Clothed in the armour of conscious rectitude, inspired by the noblest cause a people can be engaged in, and relying upon the providential care of that Being who is the pristine source of those rights we wish to defend, let us never be dismayed by any menaces the rancour and malice of our adversaries can suggest, but still press on to the goal of victorious success, with constancy, zeal, and intrepidity.

GENERAL GATES TO JAMES OTIS.

Head-Quarters, November 16, 1775.

SIR: This will be presented to you by the officer who commands the guards, you, in the name of the honourable Council, requested might be sent to Watertown. This officer has the General's orders to obey such orders as you, Sir, or the President for the time being, may think proper to give.

I am, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To the Honourable James Otis, Esq.

JAMES OTIS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Council Chamber, November 16, 1775.

SIR: The Council received your favour of this day, by the officer of the guard, and thank your Excellency for your care; and as the prisoners sent hither are all disposed of, there will be no occasion for any guard until others are sent in. We have therefore returned the guard, and the Committee of Council, who are appointed to hear and examine the prisoners in the recess of Court, (a copy of whose commission is enclosed,) will apply to your Excellency for such guards as may be at any time needed.

* There is great propriety in this distinction between the King and his servants, for they are the persons who are to be accountable by the Constitution for all instances of mal-administration. Bracton says, B. 3d, c. 9th: "The whole power of the King of England is to do good, and not to do hurt; nor can he do any thing as King, but what he can legally do," Nihil enim aliud potest Rex, nisi id solum quod de jure potest. Blackstone, commenting upon this maxim, says, "The King can do no wrong;" which ancient and fundamental maxim is not to be understood as if every thing transacted by the Government was, of course, just and lawful, but means only two things: First, that whatever is exceptionable in the conduct of publick affairs is not to be imputed to the King, nor is he answerable for it, personally, to his people. And secondly it means, that the prerogative of the Crown extends not to do any injury; it is created for the benefit of the people, and therefore cannot be exerted to their prejudice. This justifies us in accusing his Ministers with the late gigantic strides of power that have been taken, and in professing resistance to them only.

In the name and by order of the Council,

JAMES OTIS, President.His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE NEW-YORK PROVINCIAL CONGRESS.

Cambridge, November 16, 1775.

It was determined, at a conference held here in the last month, that such military stores as could be spared from New-York, Crown Point, Ticonderoga, &c., should be sent here for the use of the Continental Army. As it was not clear to me whether I was to send for, or that they were to be sent to me, I desired Mr. Reed, on his way to Philadelphia, to inquire into this matter. As I have not heard from him on the subject, and the season advancing fast, I have thought it necessary to send General Knox, Esq., who will deliver you this. After he forwards what he can get at your place, he will proceed to General Schuyler, on this very important business. I request the favour of you, Sir, and the gentlemen of your Congress, to give Mr. Knox all the assistance in your power; by so doing you will render infinite service to your Country, and vastly oblige, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Hon. Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq., President, &c.

INSTRUCTIONS TO HENRY KNOX.

You are immediately to examine into the state of the Artillery of this Army, and take an account of the Cannon, Mortars, Shells, Lead, and Ammunition, that are wanting. When you have done that, you are to proceed in the most expeditious manner to New-York; there apply to the President of the Provincial Congress, and learn of him whether Colonel Reed did any thing or left any orders respecting these articles, and get him to procure such of them as possibly can be had there. The President, if he can, will have them immediately sent hither; if he cannot, you must put them in a proper channel for being transported to this camp with despatch, before you leave New-York. After you have procured as many of these necessaries as you can there, you must go to Major-General Schuyler, and get the remainder from Ticonderoga, Crown Point, or St. John's. If it should be necessary, from Quebeck, if in our hands. The want of them is so great, that no trouble or expense must be spared to obtain them. I have wrote to General Schuyler; he will give every necessary assistance, that they may be had and forwarded to this place, with the utmost despatch. I have given you a warrant to the Paymaster-General of the Continental Army, for a thousand dollars, to defray the expense attending your journey and procuring these articles; an account of which you are to keep, and render upon your return.

Given under my hand, at Head-Quarters, Cambridge, this 16th day of November, Annoque Domini 1775.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

P. S. Endeavour to procure what flints you can.

STEPHEN MOYLAN TO WILLIAM WATSON.

Cambridge, November 16, 1775.

SIR: I have it in command from his Excellency to desire you will deliver unto Charles Coffin and Sibelline White their bedding and wearing apparel; also, Jonathan Coffin's. Let them be well examined, lest any goods or cash may be secreted amongst them. The first of them says he gave Captain Coit seven half joes. You will please to receive them, and account for them with the produce of the cargoes.

I am really at a loss to know whether it is customary to give the cash found in the pockets of prisoners to them with their wearing apparel. I do not think these people merit any indulgence. However, his Excellency would rather err on the side of mercy than that of strict justice. Let me know your opinion of this matter.

I am, with much regard, Sir, yours, &amp;c.,

S. MOYLAN, Sec. pro tem.William Watson, Esq., Plymouth.Shall we ever hear of Captain Martindale's departure?

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO THE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY OF NORTHAMPTON.

Cambridge, November 16, 1775.

SIR: I have it in command from his Excellency General Washington to inform you that Charles Elder, George Corwie, John Dunsier, Edward Webb, and William Carthew, officers of the British fleet, having given their paroles of honour to go to your Town, and not remove more than five miles from thence, or hold any correspondence, directly or indirectly, with any person, without communicating the same to your Committee of Safety, it is his desire that they be treated with civility and respect, they demeaning themselves as becometh.

I am, Sir, your humble servant,

R. H. HARRISON, Aid-de-Camp.

To the Chairman, &amp;c., of the Committee of Northampton.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Cambridge, November 16, 1775.

DEAR SIR: My last to you was the 5th instant. I have since received your most agreeable favour and its enclosure, of the 7th. The surrender of St. John's is a most pleasing presage of the reduction of Quebeck, in effecting which I hope Colonel Arnold will co-operate. The last account from him is dated the 13th of October, at the second portage from Kennebeck to the Dead River, from whence he had despatched an express to you, and expected your answer at Chaudiere Pond, where he expected to be in eight or ten days. By your not mentioning to have heard from him, I apprehend the express has been intercepted.

I am in very great want of powder, lead, mortars, cannon, indeed of most sorts of military stores. For want of them, we really cannot carry on any spirited operation. I shall, therefore, be much obliged to you to send me all that can be spared from your quarter. Mr. Henry Knox, an experienced engineer, will set out for your place, and inform you of those articles that are most immediately necessary; but as this gentleman goes first to New-York, you will please to get in readiness for transportation such guns, mortars, and ammunition, as you can, and Mr. Knox will, on his arrival, send them forward. There is nothing of consequence to acquaint you of from this quarter, except the arrival of a train of artillery, and part of five Regiments, from Ireland, to re-enforce the Ministerial Army at Boston.

I am, with great regard and esteem, dear Sir, your most assured humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Schuyler, Northern Department.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Cambridge, November 16, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I wrote you this day by express, and informed you therein the great necessity I was in for ordnance stores and ammunition, and that I would send Henry Knox, Esq., to New-York, to procure there as much as can be spared; from thence to proceed to you. That gentleman will deliver you this letter. I recommend him, and the business he goes upon, to your attention. Should he find more money than he carries with him necessary, you will please to supply him.

I am, with great esteem, dear Sir, yours, &amp;c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Schuyler, Northern Department.

EPHRAIM BOWEN TO COLONEL JOSEPH REED.

Plymouth, November 16, 1775.

HONOURED SIR: I expected long before this to have had Captain Martindale out on his cruise; but the weather has been so extremely bad for a fortnight past that we have not been able to do any thing of consequence. Have at length got him almost complete, and expect he will sail tomorrow morning, if the weather is suitable.

I shall proceed to Cambridge as soon as this vessel is ready to sail. In the mean time I am, Sir, your faithful servant,

EPHRAIM BOWEN, JUN.

To Colonel Joseph Reed.

SPOTTSYLVANIA COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

The Freeholders of the County of Spottsylvania being assembled for the purpose of choosing a Committee, agreeable to an Ordinance of the Convention, chose the following gentlemen, viz: Edward Herndon, Joseph Herndon, Fielding Lewis, Joseph Brock, Mann Page, Jun., John Lewis, attorney, John Herndon, Beverly Winslow, Oliver Towles, George Stubblefield, Mordecai Buckner, Mann Page, John Craig, James Tutt, Thomas Colson, Charles Washington, Francis Thornton, William Parker, George Thornton, James Wegglesworth, and Hugh Mercer.

ALEXANDER DICK, Clerk.

Fredericksburgh, November 17, 1775.

MARYLAND COUNCIL.

At a Council held at the Governour's, on Friday, the seventeenth day of November, in the fifth year of the Dominion of the Right Honourable Henry Harford, Esquire, Anno Domini 1775, were present: His Excellency Robert Eden, Esq., Governour; the Hon. Daniel Dulany, the Hon. John Ridout, the Hon. J. Beale Bordley; William Fitzhugh, Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Philip Thomas Lee, Esquires.

His Excellency is pleased to acquaint the Board that he is apprehensive of being laid under the greatest difficulty in getting proper persons to act as Sheriffs, in the several Counties, for the ensuing year; several whose times are not expired having, on account of the present unhappy disturbances, begged leave to resign their offices; therefore his Excellency requests the advice of the Board upon this occasion.

Whereupon, the Board recommend to his Excellency to endeavour to prevail on the present Sheriffs, whose times are not expired to continue to act; and, where their times are out, to appoint such proper persons as he can find willing to act as their successors.

The absolute necessity of having Sheriffs, as preservers of the peace in the several Counties, is too obvious to require their further remarks. And it will be in the Governour's power to gratify such persons, on future occasions, by reappointment to that office, as soon as consistent with the law, as a reward for their trouble in executing it during the present times.

His Excellency informs the Board that he intends, with their approbation, to prorogue the General Assembly, from day to day, for some time after the present term of prorogation expires, with a view, that should any opportunity offer, likely to prove beneficial to the Province, it may be readily embraced. To which proposal the Board gave their approbation.

The Hon. Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq., the Lord Proprietary's Agent, lays before the Board the following extracts from a Letter of the 29th of August last, which he had received from Hugh Hamersley, Esq., and humbly requests their advice thereon.

"The guardians being at present dispersed in the country, I can give no directions as to any payments to be made to the Governour, in aid of the deficiency of the twelve pence per hogshead. Would it not be better to write a formal, separate letter for this purpose, when the event happens, and the Governour makes his demand upon you; and in the mean time, in this, as in every other matter of doubt, pray the advice of the Council, and act accordingly. As to the Congress coinage, you cannot be too cautious how you deal in it, for fear of being left in the lurch in case of pacification; for I am still willing to persuade myself the Southern Colonies will never go the lengths of the more Northern ones.

"Though I have recommended caution, yet I wish you to consult the Governour and Council what you are to do in respect of the receipt of the quit-rents. Their written advice will be the best support to your proceedings, which, without it, may be liable to different constructions; and in times like the present, much must be left to your united discretion."

With respect to the first extract, relative to the Governour's salary, it is the advice and opinion of this Board, that, agreeable to the twenty-third article of the Governour's private instructions, the Agent ought to pay, or cause to be paid to his Excellency, in sterling money or good bills of exchange, drawn or endorsed by him for that particular purpose, as in payment of his salary as Governour, agreeable to the instruction before mentioned.

As to the extract relative to the payment of the Proprietary's quit-rents, and other dues, in the present Continental and Convention currency, the Board recommend it to the Agent to transmit, by the earliest opportunity, to the guardians of the Lord Proprietary, a full state of the nature of the Continental and Convention money, and to act in his department, in receiving or refusing the same, as the said guardians shall direct and appoint.

The Agent likewise informs the Board that some Proclamation warrants have lately been applied for and issued, to affect lands where the certificates had been compounded upon, but had been mislaid, or patent not taken out, or quit-rents not paid.

The Board, therefore, on mature consideration, are of opinion, and advise that Proclamation warrants, in such case, ought not to be issued without notice thereof, and summons given to the party affected, on application for the same, and a return upon oath, of the service thereof, produced upon all occasions.

And, further, the Board recommend to the Judges of the Land Office to pay attention to the same, with respect to all Proclamation warrants now depending, or that may hereafter be returned.

And the Clerk of this Board is directed to furnish them with a copy of the above recommendation.

EASTERN SHORE (MARYLAND) COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Eastern Shore branch of the Council of Safety of Maryland, at Chestertown, in Kent County, on Friday, the 17th of November, 1775, present: Robert Goldsborough, James Hollyday, Richard Lloyd, Thomas Smith, and Henry Hooper, Esquires.

Robert Goldsborough, Esq., having previously signed the Association, and qualified before Emory Sudler, Esq., by taking the oath prescribed by the Convention.

Isaac Atkinson, who was sent under a guard from the Committee of Observation for Somerset County to that of Talbot, and from thence to the Committee of this County, was ordered to be brought before the Council; and on his appearing, a Letter to the Council of Safety for the Eastern Shore of Maryland, from the Committee of Observation of Somerset County, and sundry Depositions taken before the said Committee of Somerset County, and hereto annexed, purporting a charge against the said Atkinson, of his having, since the breaking up of the last Provincial Convention of this Province, been raising a Company in Somerset County, to oppose the measures of the Continental Congress and Convention of this Province, and of his having declared he would protect any set of men who would not sign the Association—were read to the said Atkinson, and he was required to answer thereto.

The said Atkinson denied the charge.

The Board adjourned till to-morrow morning.

Saturday, November 18, 1775.

The Board met according to adjournment; and taking into consideration the proceedings of yesterday,

Resolved, That this Board will adjourn to Thursday, the 30th day of this instant, (November,) at Talbot County Court-House, to examine into the said charge.

Resolved, That the said Atkinson be committed to the custody of the Committee of Observation for Kent County, to be by them kept under a safe guard until Monday, the 27th day of this instant; and on that day, or as soon after as may be, delivered by them into the custody of the Committee of Observation for Talbot County, to be by them kept under a safe guard until the meeting of this Board at the time and place aforesaid, and to be then and there produced in custody as aforesaid.

Ordered, That the Clerk of this Board deliver a copy of the charge aforesaid, and a copy of the Resolution of adjournment aforesaid, to the said Isaac Atkinson, that he may have an opportunity of procuring witnesses in his defence, if he think fit.

Ordered, That a copy of the above Resolution be transmitted to the Committee of Observation of Somerset County, and that they send the witnesses, whose depositions were transmitted, and any other witnesses in support of the charge, to this Board, at the time and place aforesaid.

The Board received a Letter from Robert Done, Henry Johnson, and Peter Chaille, of Worcester County, by the hands of Mr. Robert Dennis, hereunto annexed, and an Affidavit of Mary Robins enclosed therein, and hereunto also annexed.

Upon considering the same, and examining Mr. Dennis, to whom the said Letter refers, as to the state and condition of the said County,

Ordered, That one barrel of Powder and three hundred weight of Lead, out of the publick Magazine in Chestertown, be, as soon as possible, forwarded to the Committee of Observation for Worcester County, under the direction of Thomas Smyth, Esq., a Member of this Board, and that the following Letter to the said Committee be forwarded by the said Mr. Dennis.

By the Eastern Shore branch of the Council of Safety of Maryland, Chestertown, November 18, 1775. }

GENTLEMEN: This Board has received, by the hands of Mr. Dennis, a letter from Messrs. Done, Johnson, and Chaille, and an affidavit enclosed therein, of which you have herewith copies, and have examined Mr. Dennis, to whom they referred us for further information. In consequence of which, this Board has ordered one barrel of powder and three hundred weight of lead to be forwarded as soon as possible, and lodged with Captain James Campbell, at Vienna, for the use of your County; and it is supposed it will be there by Wednesday night next, where it is expected you, or some persons by your direction and appointment, will receive it.

This is all the Board think it can be justified in doing at present; but there will be a meeting of this Board at Talbot County Court-House, on Thursday, the 30th of this instant, where, if you think it necessary, there may be a further representation of the state of your County made to it. Should there be no immediate use of this ammunition, it is expected you will be particularly careful to preserve it.

It being represented to the Board, by Robert Goldsborough and Henry Hooper, Esquires, two of the Board, that there is a necessity for a quantity of Powder and Lead in Dorchester County,

Ordered, That one barrel of Powder and three hundred weight of Lead, out of the publick Magazine at Chestertown, be forthwith forwarded to the Committee of Observation for that County, under the direction of Thomas Smyth, Esq., a Member of this Board.

Ordered, That the Treasurer of the Eastern Shore pay to John Garrett, or his order, for Fire-Wood and attendance, the sum of thirty Shillings, common money.

The Board adjourns to Thursday, the 30th day of November instant, at Talbot County Court-House.

A true copy from the Minutes:

ELEAZER McCOMB, Clerk.

Letters and Depositions mentioned in the foregoing Proceedings, viz:

Somerset County, November 7, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: This will be handed to you by a number of gentlemen whom we have appointed to carry Isaac Atkinson to you, agreeable to the resolves of the Provincial Convention; he having been guilty of sundry matters contrary to the resolves of the Continental Congress and Provincial Convention, and highly inimical to the liberties of America, as will appear by the enclosed depositions.

We are, Gentlemen, your very humble servants.

Signed per order of the Committee:

PETER WATERS, Clerk.

Information being lodged with the Committee of Somerset County, that Isaac Atkinson was raising a Company, contrary to the Resolves of the Congress and Convention, Mr. Atkinson appeared, and the following Depositions were taken:

October 24, 1775.

The deposition of William Dashiell, Inspector, being duly sworn, deposeth: That some time ago he was at the lower ferry, on Wicomico River, and that Captain George Day Scott was there exercising his Company; that Isaac Atkinson and Mr. Thomas Brumfield were in a high dispute; that Captain Thomas Shiles, Adjutant of said Company, went up to them, and asked Atkinson on what terms he was raising his Company: whether it was to join with the proceedings of the Continental Congress and the Provincial Convention, or not. Atkinson replied, that it was to oppose them, and he would do it, and offered to lay Mr. Whitewear a doubloon he would by that day week have three hundred men to join him in the opposition.

The deposition of Captain Thomas Shiles, being duly sworn, deposeth: That some time ago he was at the lower ferry, on Wicomico River, exercising Capt. George Day Scott's Company; that there was a very high dispute between Isaac Atkinson and Thomas Brumfield; the said Shiles ordered his men to lay down their arms, which they did; he then went up to Atkinson, and said that he understood that he, the said Atkinson, had ordered his men to meet there that day, with sharp flints in their guns; Atkinson said he did give such orders; then this deponent asked Atkinson on what terms he was making up his Company: whether it was to join the Convention cause and the Continental Congress, or whether he was in opposition; he answered, he was in opposition, and offered to lay Mr. Whitewear a doubloon by that day week he would have three hundred men to join him in opposition; upon which, one of his men (William Hieman) answered, "Yes, five hundred; for he is the only man that had opened their eyes, and is the man that ought to be upheld."

The deposition of Littleton Ayres, being duly sworn, deposeth: That he was some time ago at the lower ferry, on Wicomico River, and that Mr. Isaac Atkinson was also there; this deponent said he understood that Isaac Atkinson and Mr. Thomas Brumfield had had some conversation about the Association; and this deponent further saith, that he heard Atkinson say that he would never sign the Association, and that there were several people of his opinion, and that he would protect any set of people that would not sign the Association.

The deposition of Thomas Brumfield, being duly sworn, deposeth: That some time ago that he and Isaac Atkinson were in conversation about America and England, and that it was the said Isaac Atkinson's opinion that it was rebellion the way the people of Boston were going on, and that he believed the people of Boston wanted a King of their own in America.

The deposition of George Ballard, being duly sworn, deposeth: That some time ago he met Isaac Atkinson on the road, and that Atkinson said that he was told by a gentleman in the County that if he would head a Company from home, that his fortune would be doubled ten times; but he, the said Atkinson, said he despised such a thing. This deponent further saith, that he heard Atkinson say that he did not like any thing the Congress had done.

The deposition of George Ayres, being duly sworn, deposeth: That some time ago Isaac Atkinson was charged with ordering his men to appear with sharp flints in their guns, for he intended to shoot powder that day; and upon being charged with it, he said it was to shoot as a huzza at the breaking up of his Company; and this deponent further saith, that he, the said Atkinson, said he had the opinion of as wise a man and of as great a property as any in the Country for to go on in the way he then was.

November 7, 1775.

The deposition of George Whitewear, being duly sworn, deposeth: That on September 23, 1775, that he, this deponent, was at the lower ferry, on Wicomico River, and that Mr. Isaac Atkinson was there also; that, upon a dispute between the said Atkinson and this deponent, the said Atkinson did say that he could, on the Saturday following, appear at the said ferry with three or four hundred men to back him in the measures he was then pursuing, of which he offered to bet this deponent a doubloon; soon after which, Captain Thomas Shiles came up and asked him if he intended to raise a Company contrary to the resolves of the Convention, to which he answered in the affirmative.

Letter from the Committee of Observation for Worcester County to the Eastern Shore Council of Safety:

November 15, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed you have a deposition of a very alarming nature, which we think it our duty to communicate to you, and desire that it may, as speedily as possible, be taken into consideration.

We and the rest of the friends of liberty in this County are in a bad situation; we have no ammunition, and the Tories exceed our number. We hope you will send us assistance as soon as you can. Mr. Dennis, the bearer hereof, who is Clerk of our Committee, will give you such information of our affairs here as will clearly evince the necessity of something being done, and that speedily.

We are, Gentlemen, respectfully, yours,

ROBERT DONE,
HENRY JOHNSON,
PETER CHAILLE.

The deposition of Mary Robins, wife of Josiah Robins, being sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, deposeth and saith: That on the 15th of November, 1775, in the morning of the same day, Benjamin Butler came to the house of her said husband, and inquired whether there was any person in the house except his family; her husband made answer that there was; upon which they went out, and, after some time, her husband came in and told her that he was going to a certain William Bartlet Townsend's; that a certain Levin Townsend had been down to Norfolk, on board the man-of-war, and had brought up a quantity of ammunition, and that all those who were for the King were to go down to the said William Bartlet Townsend's, to get their share of the ammunition; and that the said Levin Townsend had brought a paper from on board the said man-of-war, that they were to sign; and that the said Levin Townsend was to set out this day on his return to the man-of-war; and that, if there was a sufficient number of signers to the aforesaid paper, they were to have assistance immediately from the said man-of-war.

The above Deposition taken before

Copy of a Resolve from Congress:

In Congress, October 6, 1775.

On motion made, Resolved, That it be recommended to the several Provincial Assemblies or Conventions, and Councils or Committees of Safety, to arrest and secure every person in their respective Colonies whose going at large may, in their opinion, endanger the safety of the Colony or the liberties of America.

CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary.

Letter from the Chairman of the Committee of Observation for Worcester County to the Eastern Shore Council of Safety:

Snow-Hill, November 17, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: We lately, by Mr. Dennis, signified to you that we have had information of some persons in our County procuring a quantity of ammunition from the men of war at Norfolk; that they had procured some kind of writing from them, that all who are against the present measures were to sign and transmit back to the commanders of the men of war; and that, if they had sufficient encouragement, they were to send regular troops to their assistance. We have now certain intelligence that a number of persons among us, who are disaffected to our cause, have signed the writing above mentioned, and have taken an oath to secrecy; that about twenty in number, on Wednesday night, took boat, and are gone down to Norfolk, to procure a large quantity of arms and ammunition and men to their assistance. We have had information that a number of regular troops have landed in Accomack County; but the report, as yet, is not confirmed. We have now under arms between three and four hundred men, who seem very willing to engage, if there should be a necessity; but are yet so young in the service, and having no person among us proper to lead them to action, that little can be expected from them. We are at present in a very melancholy situation. We have neither a proper conductor, arms, nor ammunition. We hope you will take our distressed circumstances into your consideration, and direct such measures as you shall think best for our safety, and to repel the force of our enemies. The men we have now under arms are partly from Somerset County. We have sent scouts through the County, in order to disarm all those who appear to be enemies to the present measures. As the wind is fair for the persons who are gone down to Norfolk, we have reason to expect they will quickly return with others from that quarter to their assistance.

We have the honour to be your most obedient humble servants.

Signed by order of the Committee of Observation of Worcester County:

BENTON HARRIS, Chairman.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland, on the Eastern Shore, per Mr. Waltom.

November 17, 1775.

William Handy, of lawful age, being called on by the Committee of Worcester County, deposeth and saith: That he had frequently conversed with Mr. Abraham Gibbs, upon the subject of the unhappy dispute now existing between Great Britain and the American Colonies; that the said Gibbs, some time last fall or last winter, or last spring, he can't particularly recollect which, this deponent heard the said Gibbs say that the Congress, he thought, either ought or would lose their heads; and, in case the Ministerial Troops were sent over here to lay their hands upon the Congress, that he, the said Gibbs, would be one of the first men who would join them; but that he has heard the said Gibbs, long since, speak much in favour of the American cause, and, at different times since, that he has heard Mr. Gibbs speak against the cause, and condemn the conduct of those who were friends to the cause; and that the latest conversation this deponent had with the said Gibbs, as he believes, was about three weeks past; he heard the said Gibbs then express himself very inimical to the cause, although not with that degree of violence or rancour as he had first heard him express himself respecting the Congress.

The deposition of Nicholas Haymon, of lawful age, being called by the Committee of Worcester County, deposeth and saith: That he lives in the neighbourhood where the article of agreement or association paper was circulated, which is taken notice of in the deposition of Isaac Hammond; and that they heard some of them were to be sent to Boston, and they were determined not to go themselves, or suffer any of their neighbours to go, if they could prevent it. That the association paper or article of agreement, above alluded to, was signed by Benjamin Shockly, amongst a number of other persons.

The deposition of Bartley Townsend, of lawful age, being called on by the Committee of Worcester County, deposeth and saith: That some little time since the rising of the last Convention of this Province, this deponent was informed that some few of the Company which the said Benjamin Shockly had enrolled in had desired him to attend at the house of the said Shockly, for the purpose of exercising and instructing a number of people in the military exercise; that this deponent accordingly attended; and when he came, after he had exercised some of the people who were there, Shockly proposed to this deponent that he would be their Captain; but, upon this deponent's refusal, asked him if he would be their Lieutenant, which he also refused; upon which, said Shockly then told this deponent he had come for a spy. He also asked this deponent if he had seen their articles; he said he had. He then asked him how he liked them; why, he said, he did not know; he found they were something like the association or articles of his Company; they were for their King and Country. Yes, said Shockly, but we are against Boston. That Shockly afterwards insisted upon this deponent's hearing their articles read; and, when they were read, they all huzzaed for the King, and pulled off their hats. This deponent also cried, and said he could huzza for their King; but, as he did not pull off his hat, said Shockly seemed to be displeased; and that this deponent was under apprehensions he was unsafe in their company, and immediately came off.

Copy of a Letter to the Committee of Observation for Somerset County:

November 18, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: In the inquiry into the charge exhibited by you against Isaac Atkinson, so far as the same was proceeded in, it was collected by that branch of the Council of Safety residing on the Eastern Shore, that Mr. Atkinson would rest his defence on the design and intention of his conduct in the matter he is charged with, he having alleged that his design was merely to oppose the proceedings of the people of the Presbyterian persuasion, and not the proceedings or resolutions of the Congress or the Convention.

It was therefore thought proper, by the board, that this should be communicated to the Committee of Observation for Somerset County; and I am directed by them to make this communication.

I am, &c.,

ROBERT GOLDSBOROUGH.

To the Committee of Somerset County.

The following Letter, from the Committee of Somerset County to the Eastern Shore Council of Safety, is without date; but being in reply to the foregoing Letter, is therefore transcribed immediately following it, and is as follows, viz:

GENTLEMEN: Yours of the 18th instant lies now before us; and we are a good deal surprised to hear that Mr. Atkinson should rest his defence upon a point which he did not rely on during any of his appearances before this Committee. At the same time, as Mr. Atkinson's friends are in general now hearty in the common cause, and as he himself always supported a reputable character till his present misconduct, we should be glad to give every thing its full weight, that he may offer in his own justification upon his approaching trial. But, as we are to do justice to the community as well as to individuals, we cannot omit to inform you that, in the course of our proceedings against this unhappy man, whom we always pitied, he had every indulgence that the nature of his offence could entitle him to. His trial was put off from day to day, and an opportunity always given of confronting the evidences against him, in hopes that he might be able to exculpate himself to the satisfaction of the publick.

With regard to his plea of intending only to oppose those of the Presbyterian persuasion, it is certain that this County has been long divided in religious sentiments, and that this division has been productive of much disturbance we have too much reason to remember. It is a prevailing opinion, amongst the members of the Church of England, that the Presbyterians are enemies to their present establishment, greedy of power, and oppressive in executing it, which makes them jealous of every measure, however laudable, that the Presbyterians engage in; and as this set of people (we speak it to their honour) were amongst the foremost in the country to espouse the cause of Boston, so the over-zealous ones of the Church persuasion, for this reason alone, became averse to it. But we are unwilling to enter upon a subject whose candour might perhaps be called in question.

There is an honourable gentleman in your own neighbourhood, (William Hayward, Esq.,) as much a stranger to the narrow spirit of party as he is superior to malice and detraction. To him, therefore, as he has an universal acquaintance in this country, we beg leave to refer you. At the same time, as we wish to furnish you with every possible information, we have taken the liberty to lay before you a letter which we this day received from Jacob Adams, an honest and reputable planter of this County. We have issued summonses for all the evidences to wait on you, agreeable to your adjournment, on Thursday next, at Talbot Court-House, and have no doubt of their punctual attendance.

With the most entire confidence in your justice and wisdom, we have the honour to subscribe ourselves your most obedient and obliged humble servants.

Signed per order: PETER WATERS, Clerk.

Letter from the Committee of Observation for Worcester County, to the honourable Council of Safety for the Eastern Shore of Maryland, per Captain William Hopewell:

Committee Chamber, Snow Hill, November 20, 1775.

SIRS: We here transmit to you, under the convoy of Captain Hopewell, Mr. Abraham Gibbs and Benjamin Shockly, who have unhappily fell under our censure. The charges against them you will find contained in the enclosed depositions. We much regret the necessity we are under of troubling you with these unhappy people, but thought ourselves, as a Committee, by no means at liberty to pass them over. How far they may appear criminal before you, gentlemen, we cannot pretend to say, nor, indeed, is it our province to determine.

We presume you have had, before this comes to hand, the deposition of Mary Robins laid before you, respecting the infernal machinations of Townsend. His diabolical scheme, since the departure of our first express to you, is incontestably confirmed. We received intelligence, about twelve o'clock on Friday night last, that he, with about seventeen of his wicked associates, had seized upon a small vessel in our river, and had proceeded down to the mouth thereof, on his way to the men of war, but that he got aground on the mud flats which make off from the same; in consequence of which, about one in the morning, we sent off a detachment of about forty men, of our militia, well equipped, under the Captains Done and Hopewell, in order, if possible, to apprehend them; but, although every possible despatch was used in getting down, they were unfortunately got off and gone before our detachment arrived.

We have had near one thousand armed men convened at Snow Hill this week, from this and the neighbouring County, (Somerset.) gentlemen of the first character in each, who manifested a very becoming spirit upon the occasion.

We have alarmed the neighbouring Counties of Virginia on this shore; and in case Townsend should, by contrary winds or distress of weather, be compelled to put into any of their harbours upon his return, believe the strictest vigilance will be observed.

We have just resolved to fit out a small privateer immediately, if we can possibly procure a sufficient quantity of ammunition for that purpose, with about forty or fifty men, well equipped with small arms, and some few swivel guns which we have in our possession, to cruise off the mouth of our river, to endeavour to intercept them on their return. We entertain so sanguine an opinion of the intrepidity and resolution of our men, that we doubt not of their ability to cope with any tender, in case that Townsend should come so attended.

We would observe, gentlemen, that Captain Hopewell, the bearer hereof, is elected Captain of our Minute Company, and that the Company has been properly enrolled, and approved of by us, and expect commissions will be issued to him and the other officers of said Company, and that they may receive their proportion of the Province arms. We are much distressed for arms and ammunition. If you can procure us any, pray let them be despatched immediately, as we know not how great call we may have for them, in case that Townsend should return, accompanied as you are already informed.

We don't know, from the alarms we have already given you, but you may have despatched a number of forces to our assistance. If that should be the case, we shall know how to direct them; but if they are not already on their march, we at present think that more than one good Company would be unnecessary. We can with pleasure assure you, we have conducted matters this week in such a manner as to effect almost a total reformation amongst our disaffected people to the cause, (at least to outward appearance.)

From the deposition you have already had of Mrs. Robins, you may, perhaps, think it strange we have not given him the same conveyance with Gibbs and Shockly. In answer to which, we at present inform you, we have apprehended him, and in our next correspondence will inform you the particulars of our conduct with respect to him.

By order of the Committee:

BENTON HARRIS, Chairman.

The following is a list of Officers of the Minute Company:

William Hopewell, Captain; Barnaby Purnell Cannon, Lieutenant; Solomon Long, Lieutenant; Levin Handy, Ensign.

The following Depositions are those referred to in the foregoing Letter from the Committee of Worcester County:

November 18, 1775.

Deposition of Isaac Hammond, of lawful age, being called on by the Committee of Observation of Worcester County, deposeth and saith: That about four weeks ago he went to a certain Henry Parker's, where he understood a number of people were to assemble for the purpose of entering into an association contrary to the General Association of this Province, and that he believes there might have been about thirty or forty people, and that a certain article of agreement or association was handed about for the people to sign, the substance of which this deponent understood was, that all those persons who signed the same bound themselves to stand together in behalf of their King, and were to oppose the measures of the Committee, and to support each other, and to be in readiness, in twenty-four hours' warning, to rescue any one of their number who should happen to be called on by the Committee, and to resist any attempts to apprehend or seize any of their said number, and that there was about seventy who had subscribed the same; and that a certain Benjamin Shockly was principally active in handing about the said association, and encouraging the people to sign the same; and advised them not to sign the General Association of the Province.

The deposition of John Davis, of lawful age, being called on by the Committee of Worcester County, deposeth and saith: That about four weeks ago a certain Benjamin Shockly was up at this deponent's mill, and they were talking of the Provincial Association; and Shockly told this deponent, that if any persons who had signed the same were sorry for what they had done, he, if they would come to him, would clear them from it.

The deposition of Smith Lingo, of lawful age, being called upon by the Committee of Worcester County, deposeth and saith: That about three or four weeks ago this deponent was at the house of William Dykes, where he met with Benjamin Shockly, and Shockly asked him if he was not one of the damned Associators. He, this deponent, replied, why, what if I am? Why, said Shockly, they are not worth a damn, or words to that purpose; Shockly taking up a broad axe, at the same time, told this deponent not to say another word, or he would split his brains open, or any that did sign the Association. That this deponent, at sundry times before, had seen the said Shockly very violent in condemning and threatening other people on the same account.

William Richardson, of lawful age, being called on by the Committee of Worcester County, deposeth and saith: That about six weeks ago, as he came up the river by Mr. Gibbs's house, he came to anchor at the said Gibbs's landing, and the said Gibbs came on board this deponent's vessel, and staid two or three hours, during which time the said

Gibbs, on conversing with this deponent on the American disputes with Great Britain, expressed himself very warmly in the American cause. This deponent, after expressing his own sentiments upon the occasion, said Gibbs told him he could make free to speak the sentiments of his mind to him.

Ordered, That the said Gibbs and Shockly be committed to the custody of the Committee of Observation for Talbot County, to be kept under a safe guard, and produced to this Council at their sitting at this place to-morrow, and the said Captain Ennalls is discharged of the custody of the said Gibbs and Shockly.

The Board adjourned till to-morrow morning, ten o'clock.

Friday, December 1, 1775.

The Board met according to adjournment: Present as yesterday.

Letter from Robert Goldsborough to the Eastern Shore Council of Safety:

November 30, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I fully designed attending the Council of Safety this day, and got as far as Mr. Ennalls's on my way, last night, and sent my horses and carriage over the river, but was again attacked last night with another fit of the gout, which renders me unable to attend. I have sent you enclosed two letters, which came to my hands since I had the pleasure of seeing you, one of which contains the depositions taken by the Committee of Worcester County, against the two men who were sent over yesterday.

I gave notice to the Committee of Worcester, that the witnesses against them should attend you this day in person; and I also sent an express with the letter to the Somerset Committee, desiring the witnesses to attend against Atkinson; and I am informed, by the express I sent down, that they will all be up agreeable to the order.

Enclosed is also a receipt for the powder and lead which Captain Campbell gave the man who carried it to Vienna; the man lost it on the road, and it was found and sent to me.

I am, Gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

ROBERT GOLDSBOROUGH.

Isaac Atkinson, who at the last sitting of this Board, at Chestertown, was committed to the custody of the Committee of Observation for Kent County, was brought before this Board, in the custody of the Committee of Observation for Talbot County: and Thereupon, the Board proceeded to take the Depositions of Thomas Shiles, William Dashiell, George Ayres, and Littleton Ayres, the only witnesses who appear against the said Atkinson. And took the Depositions of the said Thomas Shiles and William Dashiell, and then took the Deposition of William Stewart, at the request of the said Atkinson; which Depositions were taken in the presence of the said Atkinson, and are hereunto annexed.

The said Atkinson was then recommitted to the custody of the Committee of Talbot County aforesaid, to be brought before the Board to-morrow morning, at their sitting at this place.

The Board adjourned till to-morrow morning, ten o'clock.

Saturday, December 2, 1775.

The Board met according to adjournment: Present as yesterday.

Isaac Atkinson was brought before the Board, in custody as aforesaid.

The Board took the Deposition of George Ayres and Littleton Ayres, in the presence of the said Atkinson; which Depositions are hereunto annexed.

The Depositions aforesaid were then read to the said Atkinson, and he was informed that he might now make his defence against the charge exhibited against him, as stated in the proceedings of this Board at Chestertown; which charge was now again recited to the said Atkinson.

And the said Atkinson, having made his defence, withdrew, in custody of the Committee last aforesaid.

The Board then took into consideration the charge aforesaid, against the said Atkinson, the Depositions aforesaid, taken yesterday and this day, and the defence made by the said Atkinson.

And, after full consideration thereof, the Board were of opinion, that the said Isaac Atkinson hath, since the breaking up of the last Provincial Convention of this Province, been raising a Company in Somerset County, to oppose the measures of the Continental Congress and Convention of this Province; and hath declared he would protect any set of men who would not sign the Association.

Resolved, therefore, That the said Atkinson hath thereby been guilty of an high and dangerous offence, tending to disunite the Inhabitants of this Province in their present opposition.

Resolved, therefore, That the said Isaac Atkinson be closely imprisoned in the house of the Sheriff of Talbot County aforesaid, in the custody of the said Sheriff, until the 16th day of this instant December, unless the next Convention shall sooner rise; and if the next Convention shall sooner rise, then until the rising of the next Convention.

Ordered, That the Committee of Observation for Talbot County do forthwith deliver the said Isaac Atkinson into the custody of the Sheriff of Talbot County aforesaid, to be imprisoned as aforesaid, together with a copy of the following Commitment:

"By the Eastern Shore branch of the Council of Safety, of MARYLAND, the 2d day of DECEMBER, 1775:

"Ordered, That the Sheriff of Talbot County receive into his custody, from the Committee of Observation for Talbot County, the body of Isaac Atkinson, to be by the said Sheriff closely imprisoned in the house of him, the said Sheriff, and in his custody, until the 16th day of this instant December, unless the next Convention shall sooner rise; and if the next Convention shall sooner rise, then until the rising of the next Convention."

The said Isaac Atkinson was then ordered to be brought in; and being before the Board, the Resolutions of the Board were communicated to him, and a copy of the commitment aforesaid was delivered to the Committee of Observation for Talbot County.

Abraham Gibbs was brought before the Board; and upon considering the Affidavits transmitted to the Board by the Committee of Observation for Worcester County, relative to the said Gibbs, Ordered, That the said Gibbs be discharged out of custody.

The Board took into consideration the Representation of the Committee of Worcester County, against Benjamin Shockly, and the Depositions transmitted by them to the Board, relative to the said Shockly; and thereupon, Ordered, That the said Benjamin Shockly be delivered to the Committee of Observation for Talbot County, into the custody of Captain Greenbury Goldsborough, of Talbot County, to be by him sent under safe guard to Captain Thomas Ennalls, of Dorchester County; to be by the said Captain Ennalls sent under safe guard to Captain James Campbell, at Vienna; and by the said Captain Campbell to be sent under safe guard to the Committee of Worcester County aforesaid; and that the said Committee of Worcester County keep the said Benjamin Shockly in safe custody until the next Convention shall take order in the premises.

Ordered, That a copy of the above order be delivered to the Committee of Talbot County aforesaid, to be transmitted, with the said Shockly, to the Committee of Worcester County aforesaid.

Two Letters from the Committee of Worcester County, dated the 17th and 20th of November last, were read, and the following answer was ordered to be forwarded to the said Committee:

By the Eastern Shore branch of the Council of }
Safety of Maryland, December 2, 1775. }

GENTLEMEN: There being no evidences sent up against Benjamin Shockly, to prove the charge exhibited by you against him, and it being now too late to expect such witnesses, as the powers of this Board determine, by the meeting of the next Convention, which is appointed for Monday next, the Board have sent him back to you, to remain in your safe custody, until the Convention shall take order relative to him.

The Board recommend to you to lay the state of your County before the Convention as speedily as possible.

They doubt not you have already received the powder and lead sent you from Chestertown, and they have it not in their power to do more at present.

Signed by order: WILLIAM HINDMAN, Clerk.

To the Committee of Observation for Worcester County.

Two Letters from the Committee of Somerset County were read, and the following Answer was ordered to be forwarded to the said Committee:

By the Eastern Shore branch of the Council of }
Safety of Maryland, December 2, 1775. }

GENTLEMEN: This Board have received your letters, one dated the 20th November, the other without date. The Board have directed one barrel of powder and three hundred weight of lead to be forwarded, as soon as possible, to the care of Mr. Robert Harrison, near Cambridge, where it is expected it may arrive by Thursday next; and it is recommended to you to have some person there to receive it at that time. This is all the Board can do at present; but they doubt not you will make the earliest representation possible, of your situation, to the next Convention, which is appointed to meet on Monday next.

As to Captain Gunby's Company, this Board do not think they have any powers which will justify them in granting commissions, approving the form of enrollment, or putting them into pay, no such power being given to the separate branches of the Council of Safety; but they doubt not that the Convention, upon representation to them, will immediately do what they shall think necessary and proper. Signed by order: WM. HINDMAN, Clerk.

To the Committee of Observation for Somerset County.

Ordered, That one barrel of Powder and three hundred weight of Lead be, as soon as possible, sent, under the direction of Thomas Smyth, Esq., a Member of this Board, to the care of Mr. Robert Harrison, near Cambridge, to be delivered to the order of the Committee of Somerset County aforesaid.

Ordered, That the Treasurer of the Eastern Shore pay to Thomas Smyth, Esq., or his order, the sum of sixteen Pounds, two Shillings, and eleven Pence, out of the Bills of Credit in his hands, for the expense of sending Powder and Lead to Dorchester County and Worcester County, agreeable to the order of this Board, at their last sitting at Chestertown, as per accounts produced.

Ordered, That the said Treasurer pay to William Hindman, for his services as Clerk to this Board, and for Paper, the sum of three Pounds, out of the Bills of Credit in his hands.

Ordered, That the said Treasurer pay to John Jackson, for his services as Doorkeeper, fifteen Shillings, out of the Bills of Credit in his hands.

Signed by order: WM. HINDMAN, Clerk.

The Commitment of Abraham Gibbs and Benjamin Shockly:

Dorchester County Committee Chamber, }
Cambridge, November 23, 1775. }

Abraham Gibbs and Benjamin Shockly being, by order of the Committee of Worcester County, sent under guard of Captain William Hopewell, and part of his Company, to be conveyed to the Council of Safety, to answer charges against them of opposing the present measures of the Continental Congress and Convention of this Province, acting a part inimical to the common cause of America, and endeavouring to stir up sedition and disunion among the people, were delivered to the care of Thomas Ennalls, Captain of the Cambridge Blues, who this day produces them before this Committee.

And thereupon it is ordered by said Committee, that the said Captain Thomas Ennalls keep them (the said Gibbs and Shockly) in safe custody, so that he have them at Talbot Court-House on Thursday next, or as soon thereafter as he can, and then deliver them to the Council of Safety, who are expected will be then sitting there; or, if they should not be sitting, to the Committee of Observation of Talbot County.

Per order of the Committee:

THOMAS F. ECCLESTON, Clerk.

Depositions of Witnesses against Isaac Atkinson:

The deposition of Thomas Shiles, taken before the Eastern Shore branch of the Council of Safety of Maryland, at Talbot County Court-House, on Friday, the first day of December, 1775, in the presence of Isaac Atkinson, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith: That, in the month of September last, he was at a meeting of Captain George Day Scott's Company, at the lower ferry of Wicomico River, in Somerset County, to which Company this deponent and the said Isaac Atkinson had belonged, in order to enroll under the resolves of the late Convention, and to choose officers.

That this deponent was ordered to beat to arms; and upon his beating to arms, part of the Company drew up as usual under Captain Scott, but that about one-half or more of them drew up apart, under the said Atkinson, as their Captain, wearing red cockades instead of black, which they had formerly worn.

That this deponent had been informed that the said Atkinson had ordered his men to bring sharp flints in their guns that day.

That upon the separation of the Company, those under Captain Scott grounded their arms; and this deponent went up to the said Atkinson, and told him he had been informed by one of his (Atkinson's) Company, that he had ordered his men to bring sharp flints in their guns that day, and asked him whether he was raising his Company in opposition to the resolves of the Congress and Provincial Convention; to which Atkinson answered, he was. That this deponent repeated the question, and bid Atkinson answer boldly, and he again answered, he was.

This deponent thereupon asked Atkinson if he expected to carry his point by that handful of men; to which Atkinson answered, he could have five hundred men to back him by that day week, and offered to bet a doubloon of it. That thereupon William Hickman, one of the men that drew up under Atkinson, said, yes, a thousand men, ten to one, if they are wanted; for he is the man that has opened our eyes, and he is the man that ought to be upheld.

That to this deponent's observation about the sharp flints, Atkinson said he intended to burn powder that day, and showed this deponent a small horn with some powder in it. The horn, this deponent supposes, might hold a quarter of a pound of powder, when full, but that it was not full.

And this deponent saith he saw no other ammunition, of any kind, among the Company that were with Atkinson, and has no reason to believe there was any. That at the time of this conversation between the deponent and the said Atkinson, Atkinson appeared to be very cool and calm, and that this deponent distinctly heard what the said Atkinson said.

This deponent further saith, that when the said Atkinson was before the Committee of Observation for Somerset County, he was asked by them whether he would make concessions; and that if he would, the first thing to be done was to sign the Association, and asked him if he would sign it; to which Atkinson answered, he did not choose to sign it; that he looked upon it, it must come to a battle among themselves, and it was no matter how soon the day was appointed.

This deponent, upon being asked by the said Atkinson whether, at the time of the conversation between them, above related, there was not a great noise and hubbub among the people present, answers that there was.

This deponent saith, that he does not know that all the people who joined the said Atkinson, as aforesaid, had red cockades, but that most of them had.

The deposition of William Dashiell, taken before the Eastern Shore branch of the Council of Safety of Maryland, at Talbot County Court-House, on Friday, the first day of December, 1775, in the presence of Isaac Atkinson, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith: That he was present at a meeting of Captain George Day Scott's Company, at the lower ferry on Wicomico River, in Somerset County, some time in September last, in order to choose officers, agreeably to the resolves of the last Convention. That the drummer was ordered to beat to arms; and upon his beating to arms, part of the Company filed in under arms and went through part of the exercise. That Isaac Atkinson, now present, had been, before that time, a Sergeant in Captain Scott's Company, but did not then join those who were drawn up as aforesaid.

That a dispute arising between Thomas Brumfield, a private in Captain Scott's Company, and the said Isaac Atkinson, Thomas Shiles, the Adjutant to the said Company, ordered the men to ground arms, which they did; and Mr. Shiles went up to the said Atkinson, with whom about one-half of the Company, that had mustered formerly under Captain Scott, had separated themselves from those who were under arms as aforesaid, and asked him what he was after; whether he intended to raise a Company to join the common cause of America, or to oppose the resolves of the Continental Congress and the Provincial Convention; to which the said Atkinson answered, that it was not to join but to oppose the Congress and Convention, for that he did not like any of their proceedings, or any thing they had done; which this deponent cannot certainly recollect. That thereupon, George Whitear stepped up, and told the said Atkinson that if he gained his point, it would not be with honour; by which expression, "gaining his point," this deponent understood the said Atkinson's endeavouring to get part of Captain Scott's Company to choose him for their Captain. That the said Atkinson thereupon put his hand in his pocket, and offered the said Whitear to lay him a doubloon that he would, by that day week, have three hundred or five hundred men (which number of the two deponent cannot certainly say) to join him in his opposition. That this deponent told the said Atkinson, who appeared to him to be in a passion, that he would be sorry for the expressions he had used that day; and that the said Atkinson, without making any answer, turned about and walked away to his Company.

That some time about ten days after, this deponent was riding the road with the said Atkinson, and having been informed that the said Atkinson had denied he had made use of the expressions above related, at the meeting at Wicomico Ferry, deponent asked the said Atkinson if he had denied it; and the said Atkinson thereupon said he did not remember that he had made use of the said expressions.

This deponent, upon being asked by the said Atkinson whether any of the said persons who joined him with different coloured cockades than black, had formerly been of Captain Scott's Company, saith he cannot say, having himself been for some time prevented from attending the Company by sickness; but that several of those who had been of Captain Scott's Company did join him, (the said Atkinson,) and that a great many of them had since come back, on Saturday last, to Captain Scott's Company. That, after Atkinson left the Company at the ferry, many of the people that had joined him enrolled in Captain Scott's Company, though they did not muster in his Company till Saturday last; but this deponent has been informed that, after their enrollment in Captain Scott's Company, they mustered under the said Atkinson.

This deponent further saith, that he never heard the said Atkinson say any thing disrespectful of the proceedings of the Congress or Convention, but at the meeting at Wicomico Ferry, as aforesaid, though he hath had frequent conversations with the said Atkinson upon that subject, before the meeting of the last Convention, but that he hath had no conversation with him upon the subject, since the last Convention, but as above stated.

This deponent, being asked by said Atkinson whether there was not much noise and disturbance among the people at the time of the conversation and transaction at Wicomico Ferry, above related, saith there was a good deal of disturbance and confusion among the people, which he believes was occasioned by their different sentiments, some desiring to choose Captain Scott, and others the said Atkinson, for their Captain.

The deposition of George Ayres, taken before the Eastern Shore branch of the Council of Safety of Maryland, at Talbot County Court-House, on Saturday, the second day of December, 1775, in the presence of Isaac Atkinson, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith: That some time after the Association formed by the last Convention came over to Somerset County, and this deponent believes in September last, he was riding the road with Isaac Atkinson, now present, and a conversation arose between them, concerning the said Association; that the said Atkinson told this deponent he (Atkinson) did not approve of it, and that he should not sign it, and that he had the opinion of as knowing a man, and a man of as great property, as any in the County, to go on in the manner he was then in; that immediately after, the conversation was broke off, by other company joining them.

This deponent saith, that he did not at that time understand, nor did the said Atkinson explain, what he meant by "the manner he was then in;" but, from the said Atkinson's conduct afterwards, he imagined the said expression was in reference of the said Atkinson's purpose to raise a Company.

This deponent saith, he was present at the meeting at Wicomico Ferry, mentioned in the depositions of Thomas Shiles and William Dashiell, taken yesterday, and having been told that the said Atkinson had ordered the men who appeared for him that day to bring sharp flints in their guns, he went up to the said Atkinson, and asked him what he meant by ordering his men to appear with sharp flints in their guns; to which said Atkinson answered, he intended to shoot, as a huzza, at the breaking up of his Company.

This deponent, being asked by said Atkinson what he hath heard him say at any time respecting the dispute between Great Britain and America, saith, that he hath had frequent conversations with the said Atkinson upon that subject, and that the said Atkinson hath always expressed his opinion to be, that it was a religious dispute and a Presbyterian scheme; that these conversations have been both before and since the last Convention.

This deponent saith, that at the first forming of Captain George Day Scott's Company, the said Atkinson enrolled in it, and was chosen one of the Sergeants thereof, and often attended the musters of said Company, before the new regulation, and contributed to the purchase of colours and fife for the said Company; that the said Atkinson hath mentioned to this deponent his opinion, that the present dispute between Great Britain and America was about religion, and was a Presbyterian scheme, before his enrollment in Captain Scott's Company as aforesaid; that this deponent never heard the said Atkinson speak against the interest of America, otherwise than by speaking against the proceedings of the Convention.

The deposition of Littleton Ayres, taken before the Eastern Shore branch of the Council of Safety of Maryland, at Talbot County Court-House, on Saturday, the second day of December, 1775, in the presence of Isaac Atkinson, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith: That soon after the Association formed by the last Convention was brought over to Somerset County, this deponent was at Wicomico Lower Ferry, in company with Isaac Atkinson, now present, and sundry other persons; that several persons then present had just been reading the said Association, and in conversation about it, the said Atkinson said he never would sign it, and that he would protect any set of men that would not sign it. That the said Atkinson did not say how or in what manner he would protect them, but that this deponent did suppose he meant to protect, by arms, any persons against whom force should be used to compel them to sign. That this deponent was Second Lieutenant to Captain Scott's Company at the first forming of it, and is now ; and that between the time of the conversation with the said Atkinson, above related, and the time of the new enrollment, the said Atkinson (who was a Sergeant in the said Company) did not attend the muster so constantly as many others did, though he thinks as constantly as he used to do before.

This deponent saith he was present at the meeting at Wicomico Lower Ferry, mentioned in the depositions of Thomas Shiles and William Dashiell, taken yesterday; that several men that had not been at Captain Scott's Company, (he thinks about eight or ten,) appeared there with red cockades in their hats, and that part of Captain Scott's Company appeared with oak boughs in their hats. That the drummer was ordered to beat to arms, and did so ; and thereupon, part of Captain Scott's Company, about twenty or thirty men, filed in under Captain Scott on one side of a road, and that those with oak boughs in their hats, about seven or eight, drew up with the men who had red cockades, on the other side of the road, with the said Atkinson. That Captain Scott stepped up to Atkinson, and asked the people in what he had offended them, that they should then refuse to muster under him, as they had formerly chosen him their Captain. That what answer Atkinson made, or whether he made any, deponent cannot certainly say, as the Company presently crowded in about them, and there was great noise and confusion.

This deponent saith, that among the Company that joined the said Atkinson, there was not many guns, and he thinks not more than six in the whole. This deponent saith he has heard of said Atkinson's mustering about fifty or sixty men, four or five times, since the transactions above related, but never was present at any of said musterings ; but that he hath seen the said Atkinson and some men (it may be about six) passing along the road with guns, and understood, but not from Atkinson, that they were going to muster under the said Atkinson.

This deponent saith, that when the said Atkinson was before the Committee of Somerset County, and under examination upon the present charge against him, a number of men (he thinks about thirty) assembled at the Court-House of Somerset County, where the Committee sat, with short clubs in their hands, and that when said Atkinson came out of the Court-House, near fifty people crowded around him, and the said Atkinson said a day must be appointed, and they must fight it out ; that the said Atkinson made use of the same expression as he came out of the Court-House, and deponent thinks, but is not certain, before the Committee also.

This deponent, being asked by the said Atkinson whether he ever heard him say any thing against the proceedings of America, or disrespectful of them, saith he never did, except the expression of his dislike to the Association, and that he would not sign it.

The deposition of William Stewart, taken before the Eastern Shore branch of the Council of Safety of Maryland, at Talbot County Court-House, on Friday, the first day of December, 1775, at the instance of Isaac Atkinson, who, being duly sworn, deposes and saith : That he was present at the time of the meeting at the lower ferry at Wicomico, mentioned in the deposition of Thomas Shiles ; that there was great noise and confusion among the people then present, insomuch that he could not distinctly hear or understand much that was said, and does not now remember what was said. That some time before that meeting, he was on board a sloop of the said Atkinson's, with the said Atkinson, to buy some salt, and that the said Atkinson asked this deponent what he thought of the Association ; to which this deponent said he did not know well what to think of it ; but that as every body was signing it, why should they stick out. That the said Atkinson said he doubted it was a Presbyterian scheme, though he believed this deponent was an half-way one, slapping this deponent upon the shoulder, and said he would not sign the Association unless he was forced.

This deponent saith, that in a subsequent conversation with the said Atkinson, at Atkinson's own house, the said Atkinson mentioned his doubts that the present measures were a Presbyterian scheme, and that he hath heard him express the like doubts at other times.

DEFENCE OF THE REV. JOHN SCOTT.

Somerset County, Maryland, November 27, 1775.

SIR: I have had the mortification to hear, more than once, within a few weeks past, that I am represented to the publick as an enemy to American liberty, and the chief promoter of those unhappy political dissensions which lately prevailed in this and Worcester County; but have not been able to discover where those reports, false and malicious as they are, originated.

I am therefore reduced to this method of calling upon my accusers, whoever they are, to stand forth, or to lodge an information against me with the Provincial Convention, or Council of Safety, where they shall always find me ready, upon the shortest notice, to attend them. Meantime, as I have the greatest reason to believe that no such publick accusation will ever be exhibited, and that I shall not be indulged with so favourable an opportunity of vindicating my conduct to my countrymen, with whom I profess entirely to coincide in my political creed, I hope the honest indignation I feel at being most insidiously attacked by private enemies, as well as my ardent desire to retrieve the good opinion of the publick, will excuse my inserting the following depositions.

JOHN SCOTT.

The deposition of Levin Carey, being of full age, taken before me this day; who, being sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, saith: That on a certain Saturday, about three months ago, this deponent applied to the Rev. Mr. John Scott for his opinion, how he approved of Stephen Horsey's intention to raise a Company, by virtue of a commission to be obtained from the Governour, and to have nothing to do with those who were mustering agreeable to the resolves of the Continental Congress. That the said Mr. Scott said he apprehended the Governour would grant no such commission, and that he would advise him to decline such an undertaking ; and in consequence of Mr. Scott's advice, he, this deponent, and many others, on hearing Mr. Scott's sentiments, changed their resolution, and never after mustered upon the plan proposed by Stephen Horsey. And this deponent further saith, that the Rev. Mr. Scott requested he would make him acquainted with the time of their next meeting, for that he would attend such meeting, and endeavour to convince them that they were doing wrong. And the reason why he did not give Mr. Scott the information required, was, because he, this deponent, at the instigation of the said Mr. Scott, had left the Company, and never joined them after. And this deponent further saith, that, during his conversation with the said Mr. Scott, Isaac Atkinson came up, joined in the discourse, and said the major part of the people down his way were of the same opinion with Stephen Horsey ; that he understood people in general were so, and particularly the people of Dorset : on which the said Mr. Scott advised him to desist from such schemes, and join in the common cause, and not set up his judgment against those of superior knowledge ; that he, the said Mr. Scott, advised him to attend the meeting for choosing a Committee; on which the said Atkinson said he wanted no Committee, nor did the people in his neighbourhood, for they apprehended it was a Presbyterian scheme ; that he, this deponent, says, that during the whole conversation, the said Mr. Scott disapproved of their schemes, and advised the said Atkinson and the deponent to unite with the Continent in support of the common cause of their Country. And further this deponent saith not.

Taken before me, the subscriber, this 25th day of November, 1775.

JOHN ADAMS.

Whereas a report has been most falsely and maliciously propagated, that the Rev. John Scott advised Joshua Hitch to join in a Company, said to be raising in opposition to the resolves of the Provincial Convention, by Matthew Cannon; and, further, that the said Mr. Scott dissuaded the said Joshua Hitch from signing the Association; In order to falsify these base assertions, came before me the said Joshua Hitch, and made oath on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, that the said report is spurious and false, and that the said Mr. Scott stood never justly impeachable with said slander, having never been consulted by the said Hitch on the occasion : And further says, that he, the said

Hitch, consulted Gustavus Scott, Esq., on the subject of the Association, and he strongly recommended him to sign it.

Sworn before me, the subscriber, this 25th day of November, 1775.

JOHN ADAMS.

On the said 25th of November came Isaiah Banks before me, and deposed on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, that on Sunday, coming from Green-Hill Church, he heard the Rev. John Scott and Matthew Cannon discoursing on the subject of the said Cannon's raising a Company; to which he, the said Banks paid particular attention; that he heard the said Mr. Scott tell Cannon he apprehended the steps Cannon then pursued threatened the loss of his land; on which the said Banks said, he thought it was the way to save his land; on which the said Scott said, innocent as he, the said Scott, found himself of any hand in their proceedings, as they were churchmen, he feared he might be, in future, censured for their conduct; that the said Cannon replied, there would be no danger of censure, as he never was made acquainted, nor in any shape consulted about their designs.

Sworn before me,

JOHN ADAMS.

On the same 25th day of November came James Geoghegan, and made oath on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, that, at divers times, he conversed with the said Mr. Scott on the subject of politicks, and particularly the Association; and, from an intimacy with the said Mr. Scott, he expected his candid sentiments on the subject; that he always found the said Mr. Scott exceedingly tenacious of American freedom, and said that nothing should hinder him from signing the Association, but an opinion of his being comprehended amongst the Governour's household;* and finding that his postponing to sign the Association was a check upon others, that he, notwithstanding his opinion of being of the Governour's household, as an encouragement of those of divided opinions to unite in the common cause, signed it himself, within a very short time after it was introduced by the Committee, and verily believes that he has been as instrumental as any man in the County in procuring signatures to the Association.

Taken before

JOHN ADAMS.

On the said 25th of November came George Wails, and deposed, that, some time in September, riding in company with the Rev. Mr. Scott, from a sermon preached by the said Mr. Scott, he, the said Wails, asked the said Scott if he had heard that Matthew Cannon was raising a Company in opposition to the Continental Congress; that he answered in the negative; that, for his part, he believed it was false, and hoped Cannon had more sense than to undertake such an unjustifiable matter. That the said Wails said he also believed it was false, and requested that Mr. Scott would say no more about it.

Taken before me,

JOHN ADAMS.

The deposition of James Bounds, of full age, being sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, deposeth and saith: That after the rising of the late Convention, in which the Association of the freemen of Maryland was formed, he did not approve of the said Association and Resolves, and that, for some time after, he did not sign the Association, or form of Enrollment, as directed by the Convention of Maryland; but upon application to the Rev. Mr. John Scott, for his advice relative to the Association and Resolves, he, the said Mr. Scott, advised this deponent to comply with the measures adopted by the said Convention. In consequence of which advice, he, this deponent, broke off from a Company which he was then exercising in, and signed the Association and form of Enrollment, agreeable to the direction of the said Convention of Maryland. And this deponent further saith, he never heard the said Mr. Scott advise any person to act or do any thing in opposition to the measures of the honourable Continental Congress or Provincial Convention; but that, in the conversation between this deponent and the said Mr. Scott, he, the said Mr. Scott, always appeared friendly to America in her present opposition.

Taken before

GEORGE DASHIELL.

* Mr. Scott came into this Province under the protection of Governor Eden, and has an appointment as his Excellency's Chaplain.

At the time the above depositions were taken, Cannon was out of the Province, which prevented his deposition from being taken, and likewise inserted.

JOHN HANCOCK TO WALTER LIVINGSTON.

Philadelphia, November 17, 1775.

SIR: The Congress having resolved that the prisoners taken at Chambly and St. John's be sent to the Towns of Reading, Lancaster, and York, in the Colony of Pennsylvania; and having issued orders to the officer who has the charge of conducting them, to march them by the nearest road to the Town of Reading, in said Colony, and to apply to you for provisions for subsistence on their march: I am directed to order you to supply them, agreeably to the rations given to the Continental Army.

Should the express not meet the party with the prisoners, please to take the letter and deliver it to the commanding officer on his arrival with the prisoners at Albany.

COSMOPOLITAN, NO. IV.

To the Inhabitants of the AMERICAN Colonies.

Friends and Fellow-Citizens:

As our publick affairs are now situated, when almost every day opens new scenes, and every manœuvre of our adversaries has an aspect cruelly hostile: when worse than death stares us full in the face: when horror sits brooding over America: when our capital is clad in the robes of affliction, and her bosom bathed in the tears of distress: when Town after Town is falling victims to the infuriating rage of merciless cut-throats: when the pious petitions of beggared families are ascending in sweet memorials to the throne of God: when the orphan's cries and the inconsolable anguish of a weeping mother in silent eloquence demand our pity: when the manes of a Warren and our slaughtered heroes, when reason and common sense, the feelings of humanity, and the sacred laws of our violated Constitution, call for justice to an injured community: when not only our own welfare, but the very being of freedom, and the prosperity of future generations, seem to turn upon a critical period: when business of the last consequence demands our attention, and matters of the most interesting nature plead for consideration—to listen with credulity to the suggestions of fancy, and to be amused with the phantoms of fear, is trifling and unmanly—it is worse: it is folly and wretchedness, misery and destruction, slavery and death. What then shall we do to be saved, is an obvious inquiry. The answer is easy : caution and bravery, magnanimity and spirit, prudence and firmness, will conduct us, with honour and success, to glory and happiness.

Our immediate business is to annoy, weaken, and distress the enemy, to the utmost of our power ; to improve in the art, and, by all possible ways, procure the means of doing the same for the future ; to exert our whole force uniformly and at once, and at every hazard guard against and prevent the enemy's getting any advantage, any foot-hold in our Country. Let us conduct by foresight, and avoiding the common calamities of after-wisdom. Whatever is practicable, at any expense, it ought to be done. The consideration of cost and trouble sink to nothing, are not to be mentioned, when our Country is invaded, and piratical depredations are constantly making. Is the plan good ? and its execution feasible ? are the only questions. The skill of war, and the art of destroying, though dreadful, are become of unavoidable necessity. We have got the rampant lion by the beard ; by keeping the hold we may demolish his strength, and bring him to the ground ; if we yield to his force, he will rend us to atoms, or grind us to powder in his voracious, sanguinary jaws. Let us not only oppose, but make effectual opposition. Let us do it in time. It is in our power. There is in the power of mortals a degree of enterprise and persevering resolution that invariably commands success. Nothing else is wanting. For God's sake, and our Country's sake, let us exert it on the great and trying occasion. If a people once yield to the expansions of power and the efforts of a tyrant, their case is forlorn. If they are staggered by the force of superior abilities, caught by surprise, or the suggestions of the timid, the enemy enters and the danger advances. A single point gained, adds to the weight in the opposite scale, and one advantage secured, gives a facility in obtaining a second. The invader in his progress receives fresh accessions of strength. His power, incessantly growing like a torrent increasing as it runs, soon becomes too forcible for any possible barriers opposed to its passage. Many invasions which might have been repelled by a seasonable, bold, and united resistance, have become invincible, by cowardice, divisions, and preposterous exertions. One part of the community is subdued and made subservient to enslaving the other. On this fatal rock were wrecked the ancient republics of the world. By it Cæsar destroyed the liberties of Rome ; by it thousands have waded through blood to despotick command. The conquering tribes among the Huns and the Goths, with their bold and enterprising warriors, says the historian, for a succession of ages, furnished their Princes with their military guards ; but at length were made the tools of oppressing themselves. In this manner has slavery and ruin made their way into regions so much renowned for the wild freedom of nature. A power which was the terror of every effeminate Province is disarmed, and the nursery of nations is itself gone to decay. Happy the people that profit by others' misfortunes ! Doubly happy ! Happy in themselves, and happy in a numerous progeny of freemen.

I do not mean to assert that a single victory, or a repeated conquest, would enable the enemy to subdue our Country, or ought to dishearten ; I intend to show the reverse. Delays in preparing, and remissness in executing, are dangers to be guarded against. Every inch of ground should be disputed with spirit, to enhance the price of the enemy's purchase. The present acquisitions of our enemies were obtained at a dear rate. If they were to pay in the same proportion for the most inferior Province on the Continent, it would exhaust the nation of her blood and treasure, and she must soon die insolvent. I am sensible there are some who have chanted a different tone. They seem to have considered every thing British as unrivalled. They have represented her as the store-house of wisdom, and the only place where soldiers are formed ; as placed in the centre of being, an overawing creation. She frames her edicts, and the nations are hushed. She hurls her thunderbolts, and all is conquest. At her gentle reproofs, union was to languish ; at her more decisive frowns, opposition die. It is true she is powerful, and her troops naturally brave. But has experience verified such unmeaning rant ? Or are events still sleeping in the lap of futurity ? Has not picked Battalions, chosen Brigades, with a Percy at their head, marched the quick-step before a sudden collection of undisciplined peasants ? Does her resources come forth of the dust, or her invincible power spring out of the ground ? Are her troops invulnerable ? Are their bones bars of iron ? Have they brass sinews ? Does tempered steel compose their muscles ? and are their hearts cased with adamant ? Or have our swords leaden points, that they cannot penetrate ? Or are our balls watery bubbles that will burst in air ? In what then consists the boasted superiority of British mercenaries, compared with the freeborn sons of America ? In voce et præterea nihil. In gasconading, and nothing else.

Let us appeal to facts, attend coolly and deliberately to the real circumstances of each conflicting power, as they connect with and will necessarily affect each party in the bloody dispute. It is prudent, it is wise to inquire if we are equal to a defence against all the power that Great Britain can possibly exert. I assert that we are, and must ultimately triumph, having our temples wreathed with laurels of eternal glory. The strength of a country consists in numbers, riches, situation, temper and habits, the common resources of war. A state composed of corrupted, degenerate, cowardly men, is weak, however numerous, wealthy, and refined ; consisting of virtuous, vigorous, learned, publick spirited, and resolute men, is strong, is invincible, however attacked, however despised ; but the resources of war in hands that will not employ them, is like a keen edged sword sleeping in its scabbard.

Let us consider Great Britain in this four-fold point of view. Consider her numbers, her riches, her situation, her temper and habits, in relation to a war with America. With respect to her numbers, let us deduct from the account all those who cannot in some way or another, either mediately or immediately, add to the strength of the nation, and subserve the purposes of war. Let us further consider how much of the labour of the useful, and wealth of the nation, is constantly consumed in supporting this large catalogue of burdensome beings, this dead weight in luxury and debauchery. It is not the effeminate, luxurious, and debauched, that can defend their Country in the day of battle ! they increase timidity by their example, weaken counsels by their influence, and are so many useless mouths constantly consuming the resources of war. The Spaniards and Portuguese, says an historian, are incapable of defending themselves against a powerful foreign invasion. The immense wealth of the Indies, that every year comes home to their ports, goes to enrich a few. Their subjects are either in the extremes of wealth or poverty. The rich have only slaves beneath them, who hate those for whom they must labour ; the poor have no acquisitions or property to defend ! so that their armies are composed, either of wretches pressed into the service, who only seek for opportunities not to fight, but to fly ; or of men rich and noble, courageous from pride, yet weak from luxury. These observations apply in many respects to Great Britain. Besides these, that illustrious band of patriots and Whigs, both in Britain and Ireland, that are engaged in a glorious opposition, and are willing to range under the American standard should it ever be erected in Britain, must diminish in a great degree, as it operates in a duplicate ratio, adding to one scale what it takes from the other. Another circumstance which goes to the quality of this garbled number sinks its importance still lower, in a military point of view. The lower and middling sort of people, although useful citizens, add but little to the martial strength, for, by the tyranny of certain laws, being deprived of the use of arms, they neither possess the knowledge, nor the natural aptitude for the use of the sword or the musket. This difficulty cannot easily be cured. It is founded upon a ruinous principle of national policy. A calculation then, subject to the above deductions, gives us the full strength of Great Britain, so far as it consists in numbers. I shall not attempt a particular computation that will give a product precisely equivalent to her whole numerical force, as this would be rather a round of sportive acuteness than of real utility ; but I will venture to assert, that it cannot be equal to those banded thousands, I had almost said millions, of brave musketeering Americans. Their principal muscular strength, at present, consists then in a number of mercenary, hackneyed, tattered Regiments, patched up by the most abandoned and debauched of mankind, the scum of the nation, the dregs of Irish and Scottish desperadoes.

Let us next proceed to a consideration of those countless millions which compose the wealth of Great Britain. I doubt whether her riches will render her more formidable and respectable than her numbers, I mean considered as detached from the Colonies. After deducting about an hundred and forty-two millions, a debt for the payment of which the sources of all her wealth are mortgaged, together with the interest of between four and five millions annually, in what consists her boasted riches? It exists only in idea, in name, in paper, in publick faith, in Parliamentary security. The land, the trade, and the industry of her subjects, are pledged for this security. What then must be the consequence of this enormous debt, which has long hung like a mill-stone about her neck; when the American trade, the source of her wealth—which gave her her national rank—as a nursery, furnished her navy with seamen, made her sovereign of the ocean, and would soon have raised her to be mistress of the world, is dried up? What the consequence of losing that trade upon which the credit of the nation was supported, and the profitable industry of the manufacturer and the merchant very much depended? What the consequence of being denied that supply of timber, iron, plank, masts, pitch, tar, and hemp, by which her navy was built and kept in repair? It will, it must sink her from among the nations, ruin her credit, and make her a bankrupt. Add to this the enormous sum of millions it has cost her for securing her troops with experienced Generals in their Boroughs, the forcing one intrenchment, the work of a single night, and reducing two defenceless Towns to ashes, in a manner that so stains the lustre of the British name, as will not be washed out by the inundation of time; and those incredible sums for pensioners, placemen, and court sycophants, which must be paid, if the nation is ruined. A calculation then, with a diminution resulting from a concurrence of the above combined causes, gives us the full absolute strength and wealth of Great Britain. It gives us the whole that she could lift to action, against an enemy in her own neighbourhood, was she to bend all her power and spend all her force upon him.

Her situation is the next thing, in the order proposed, that demands our attention. This, in point of locality, and from the relation she stands in to the European powers, will still further lessen her already diminished strength, touching the American dispute. This, if carefully attended to, will enable us to form some judgment of that power by which she must subdue the Colonies. It gives us her relative strength, which is certainly much below her absolute power. While she is subduing the Colonies, she must defend herself. It is irrational to suppose that, by draining off her men and money for foreign service, she will leave home so destitute as to fall a prey to the first invader. An island as she is, and envied as she has been, instead of having those fortified frontiers to defend her from the incursions of her inveterate enemies, she is obliged to secure her maritime borders by her floating bulwarks, her powerful fleets and squadrons. It is true, that Great Britain is said to be at peace with her rival powers; but nominal peace, by the modern policy of nations, is a species of inactive war. The large and numerous armies and fleets that are kept encamped and supported in pay by one nation, induce a necessity of standing armies and a naval power to watch their motions and prevent their operations in another. France and Spain, always emulating the British glories, have in constant readiness for action large forces, both by land and sea. Their late increased warlike preparations wear an hostile aspect, and threaten some important blow. The latter has even dared to insult with impunity the mistress of the seas; the former has often attempted, and is still waiting an opportunity to humble the pride of the English power. Ireland is also, in general, opposed, from the intolerable grievances and oppressions they suffer. Notwithstanding the heavy expenses of Government, they are burdened with the payment of a list of pensioners and placemen upon the Irish establishment, which, in 1765, from a motion by the House of Commons, in that Kingdom, to address His Majesty upon the subject, the sum appears to have amounted, in the then two last years, to above a hundred and fifty-eight thousand Pounds; the greater part of which is paid to persons with whom they have no sort of concern. It is said there are upwards of two millions in the Kingdom so extremely poor that they are unable to pay the two shilling tax for their single hearth, and are so distressed by their tax-gatherers, that they are obliged very frequently to sell the pot in which their potatoes are boiled. I am astonished, says one, under such depressing circumstances, to observe such a love of liberty still animating that loyal and generous nation, and nothing can raise higher my idea of the integrity and publick spirit of the people who have preserved the sacred fire of freedom from being extinguished, though the altar on which it burned has been thrown down. What heart does not melt at the deplorable situation of this people? What community, what Kingdom does not deprecate its fate? It speaks in peals of thunder to America.

But to return. In addition to all this, there is a large train of discontented subjects in the very bowels of Great Britain, headed by the greatest and best men in the nation; these will be a thorn in her foot that will give her trouble and impede her progress. In this situation, will the wisest and best of Princes leave Ireland to rise in arms? Will he abandon himself to the just indignation of his British subjects? Will he leave the nation a prey to France or Spain? or relinquish the possession of his other Dominions? If not, it must necessarily divert much of his strength from the American Colonies, many of his ships to defend his own borders; otherwise, other Princes will make him feel the weight of their swords, and constrain him to yield to the force of their arms.

There is another point of view in which this division of the subject naturally presents itself. America is three thousand transmarine miles from this belligerent power. Shafts shot across the Atlantick must lose their force in air. Great Britain must beat the air and plough the ocean, before she can take the field. The seas will continue to roll, the wind to blow, and the cold frost to visit our northern shores, which arrest the streams in their course, and lash them fast to the river's side. She must spend much of her strength in getting at an object so remote. And after carrying on an expensive war with wind and weather, does she mount the stage upon equal terms? Can she, like Hannibal, recruit her wasted Army and procure resources in an enemy's country, where children are upon guard, and women tarry by the stuff? Or will the skeletons of Government, the renegadoes at her standard, form one fighting phalanx, and yield her real aid. Besides all this, there is the difficulty of levying troops for service so remote, and of such doubtful success; of procuring seasonable supplies for such long and uncertain campaigns; of commanding transports and performing voyages so lengthy, in which sickness is contracted in the passage, and the consequent loss of life; the want of fresh provisions; the delays ever attendant on movements so distant from the cabinet—movements which have engaged the attention of the world. I am sensible much has been said of the thousands of Hessians and Hanoverians that are taken into British pay for present emergencies. These will not fight without pay. There must be some great object to induce them to leave their native country, to which they never may return, and to take part in a foreign quarrel. But where is the wealth to come from that shall enable Great Britain to engage in her service a sufficient number of foreigners to subdue the Colonies; and to maintain that conquest, after the richest and most luxuriant sources of her wealth are dried up and gone forever? Where are the armies, the pay for those multiplied demands that will result from her situation, at home and abroad, with her own subjects and other States?

I shall be short upon the last branch of the subject. Bravery, humanity, and a love of liberty, were formerly supposed to enter into the composition of an Englishman's temper. Are there no habits of friendship between the descendants of a common parent, who have fought and bled side by side, that will check the ardour of offensive warriors, who are contending for domination against the defenders of their rights? Will not a recollection of mutual instances of kindness lead to recollection, and excite pity from scenes of barbarity? Will no spectacles kindle the relents of nature in favour of a brave, virtuous, and oppressed people, struggling for their liberties? Will there be no defection from the sentiments of humanity? Allowing the Americans are deluded, will they have no compassion for a general and inevitable delusion? Will not they see that the dagger which opens the way to what they call a deluded heart, and lets out life, conveys no conviction to a survivor's head? The delusion still continues, and the spirit is invincible; and although it should bend, for a moment, like an unwieldy bow, yet soon it would fly from its over-wrought tension, and, like flames smothered in a burning pit, blaze out anew. At length, fatigued with havock, and despairing of success, will not serious reflection seize their heads, and the pangs and twitchings of a wounded spirit, which stings like an adder and bites like a serpent, cool their courage, sheath their swords, and carry them back to their own homes, to demand the forfeited heads of their blood-thirsty employers?

From this summary view of the strength of Great Britain, we have no reason to think her force matchless, or that her efforts against America will prove successful. It is a good rule never to despise the power of an enemy, but to presume upon the worst, and prepare for the hardest. I shall, in my next, take a similar view of the internal strength of the United American Colonies, in the new world; that, having the whole before you in a collected point, you may make your comparisons, and draw such inferences as may be warranted by the nature of the case and the truth of fact respecting both Countries.

Worcester, November 17, 1775.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL WARD.

Cambridge, November 17, 1775.

SIR: As the season is fast approaching when the bay between us and Boston will, in all probability, be close shut up, thereby rendering any movement upon the ice as easy as if no water was there; and as it is more than probable that General Howe, when he gets the expected reinforcements, will endeavour to relieve himself from the disgraceful confinement in which the Ministerial Troops have been all this summer, common prudence dictates the necessity of guarding our camps wherever they are most assailable. For this purpose, I wish you, General Thomas, General Spencer, and Colonel Putnam, to meet me at your quarters to-morrow, at ten o'clock, that we may examine the ground between your work at the mill and Sewall's Point, and direct such batteries as may appear necessary, for the security of your camp on that side, to be thrown up without loss of time. I have long had it upon my mind that a successful attempt might be made, by way of surprise, on Castle William. From every account, there are not more than three hundred men in that place. The whale-boats, therefore, which you have, and such as could be sent to you, would easily transport eight hundred or one thousand; which, with a very moderate share of conduct and resolution, might, I should think, bring off the garrison, if not the stores. I wish you to discuss this matter, under the rose, with officers on whose judgment and spirit you can rely. Something of this sort may show how far the men are to be depended upon.

I am, with respect, Sir, your very humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Artemas Ward.

SAMUEL FREEMAN TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Falmouth, November 17, 1775.

SIR: Being prevented, by a sudden departure from Watertown, from waiting on your Excellency, as I fully intended, I think it proper, by way of letter, to inform you that our General Court have appointed the Hon. Joseph Frye, Esq., "to take the command of the men stationed in the County of Cumberland, who were raised for the defence of the sea-coast, until their further orders; and have empowered him, upon any emergency, to alarm and call together the Militia of the said County, or such part thereof as their safety may require, and them to discharge as soon as the service will admit; and to lead and conduct them and the other forces, and with them to encounter, repel, and resist, by force of arms, all and every person or persons that shall attempt the surprise, destruction, invasion, or annoyance of this Town and County; and to cause such fortifications to be erected at Falmouth, aforesaid, and elsewhere, as he shall judge necessary for their [our] defence."

This is all the Court have done at present. Something more is absolutely necessary. So excellent an harbour as that of Falmouth it is of the greatest importance to secure. On the preservation of this harbour depends, in a great measure, the safety of this whole eastern country; and should our enemies get possession of it, I humbly think the whole Continent will suffer by the loss; not only by the damage it will be to us, but by the advantages which they will thereby gain. I doubt not, therefore, a due attention will be given hereto; and I believe if a number of men were placed in a garrison here, and an armed vessel or two stationed to guard the coast, it would be an expense well applied.

I am unacquainted with military matters, but I think it a duty incumbent on me to communicate my mind; and, if your Excellency thinks it proper, I should be glad this matter might be laid before the Continental Congress. However, I would by no means pretend to dictate; but I hope some measures, wiser than I can propose, will be speedily adopted to serve the general interest.

Colonel Phinney, I suppose, will inform your Excellency of the present situation of affairs here. I will not therefore add, but that I am, with great respect, your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servant,

SAMUEL FREEMAN.

To His Excellency General Washington.

STEPHEN MOYLAN TO WILLIAM WATSON.

Cambridge, November 17, 1775.

SIR: Captain Coit complains of the uneasiness the men are under, and as the only chance there is of taking any prize is his being out at this time, the General consents to his getting men at Plymouth, which, he says, he can readily do. If he can procure them, give him every forwardness you can. He says six weeks' provision will be necessary, and that he must have a spare pilot, in case of a prize. For God's sake indulge him, and if he has misinformed his Excellency about getting the men, let us know it immediately, that we may govern ourselves accordingly.

I am, Sir, your most humble servant,

STEPHEN MOYLAN, Sec'y pro tem.

To William Watson, Esq., Plymouth.

LORD GEORGE GERMAIN TO GENERAL HOWE.

Whitehall, November 18, 1775.

SIR: Lieutenant-General Gage arrived here the 14th instant, and I have had the honour to lay before the King your despatches of the 5th and 9th of October.

It was a great satisfaction to me to receive, so early after my coming into office, your ideas of the plan of operations in the ensuing spring, and of the force necessary for carrying that plan into execution.

Every effort will be used to send you, as early as possible, the re-enforcement that will be wanted; and although our negotiation for foreign auxiliaries has not succeeded according to our expectations, and our recruits come in but slowly, yet I have no doubt that if we are not deceived in the propositions which have been made for raising some new corps, and the engagements which have been entered into for procuring levies in Germany, we shall enable you to take the field with an army of twenty thousand men.

Of the five Regiments which were under orders to sail from Cork for America, in the course of last month, the Seventeenth, Twenty-Seventh, and Fifty-Fifth, have proceeded upon their voyage; but the Twenty-Eighth and Forty-Sixth having been forced, by contrary winds, to put back, the King has thought fit to add them to the armament preparing for an expedition to the Southern Colonies; and I hope that, before the end of this month, the troops destined for that service will have been embarked.

All the advices which have been received of the state of the Southern Provinces, since the first idea of that expedition was taken up, tend to show the propriety of it, and to confirm us in our hopes that it will be attended with advantage and success; and I have no doubt that the whole or the greatest part of the Regiments, employed upon that occasion, will join the Army under your command much earlier, and in a better state for service, than if they were sent from hence in the spring.

I am, &c.,

GEORGE GERMAIN.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE COMMITTEE OF ALBANY.

Ticonderoga, November 18, 1775.

SIR: You will please to communicate to the Committee of the City and County of Albany the further success of our arms. General Montgomery possessed himself of Montreal on the 13th instant. Colonel Arnold is arrived at Quebeck; so that in all probability the entire possession of Canada, as formerly limited, will be in our possession soon, if not already; events which, I hope, will have a tendency to bring the Ministry of our Sovereign to reasonable terms.

That Heaven may again, and speedily, reunite us in every bond of affection and interest; that the British Empire may become the envy and admiration of the universe, and flourish until the omnipotent Master thereof shall be pleased to put his fiat on all earthly empires, is the sincere wish of yours, &c.

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Committee of Albany.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read November 29, 1775.]

Ticonderoga, November 18, 1775.

SIR: I do myself the honour to congratulate Congress on the reduction of Montreal. I enclose the copy of the terms the inhabitants wished to have, and of General Montgomery's answer, together with copies of sundry letters from Mr. Brook Watson, whose zeal (as General Montgomery, in badinage, expresses himself) is only to be equalled by his sincerity.

General Carleton took the advantage of a favourable wind to go down the St. Lawrence the evening before General Montgomery arrived. He took with him his garrison, on board of ten or eleven small craft, reserved for that purpose, and to carry away the powder and other important stores. General Montgomery is nevertheless in hopes of possessing himself of the powder. I am sure no diligence will be wanting on his part to effect it.

"By intercepted letter, I find (says our General) that Colonel Arnold is certainly arrived in the neighbourhood of Quebeck. That those who are inimical to our cause are exceedingly alarmed, and expect to be besieged;" which (he assures me) they will be if the severe season holds off, and he can prevail on the troops to accompany him. He adds:

"The Lizard, man-of-war, is arrived at Quebeck, with twenty thousand Pounds and one hundred marines. They have had some other little re-enforcements and recruits from Colonel Maclean's Regiment, called the Emigrants, which, together with artificers and sailors, may amount in all to four hundred and fifty men.

"One of the brigs which sailed some time since from England, is arrived with clothing and arms.

"I can't help feeling great uneasiness till I know the determination of the troops with respect to engaging for six months longer. I was obliged to promise all such their dismission as chose it. I make no doubt of retaining the ground already gotten; but it is of the utmost importance to finish this business at once, that the Ministry may have no hopes left of carrying on their plan in this important quarter. At any rate, it will be highly expedient to throw in a large body of troops; as soon as the ice will bear, in order to make a vigorous attack on Quebeck before the arrival of succours in the spring, should it not fall into our hands this winter; but should this instance of good fortune crown our labours, some advantageous post must be chosen below Quebeck, where a large corps of troops, strongly posted, a boom over a narrow channel, and floating batteries, may baffle all attempts from Europe. I am told a difficult pass, termed the Traverse, will answer this purpose. I shall clothe the troops completely who engage again.

"I find, with pleasure, that my politicks have squared with the views of Congress, and shall lose no time in calling a Convention, when my intended expedition is finished.

"Will not your health permit you to reside at Montreal this winter? I must go home, if I walk by the side of the lake. I am weary of power, and totally want that patience and temper requisite to such a command."

It is impossible, Sir, to conceive the variety of difficulties he has had to encounter. Prudence forbids me to be particular, and I am not at all surprised at the last declaration of his. My sentiments, on this head, exactly coincide with his, and so must those of every man of sentiment, who is drove to the necessity of wheedling, coaxing, and even lying, as we have both been under the necessity of doing, in order to carry on the service. I shall, however, do every thing in my power to put a finishing stroke to the campaign, and make the best arrangement in my power in order to ensure success to the next; this done, I must beg leave to retire. In a gentleman of General Montgomery's abilities, the Colonies will sustain an essential loss; it is, however, a consolation that you have many other able and experienced commanders. Permit me to suggest that it would be highly proper to determine on one to command in Canada, should he come away.

Since your letter of the 12th ultimo, I have not been honoured with a line from Congress. I am consequently without their determination on that part of mine of the 5th of October, which relates to the payment of the troops, and which I again mentioned in mine of the 21st and 22d—a matter of much more moment than at first view it appears to be; for unless the mode of paying the troops, which I then pointed out, or something similar to it, be adopted, not only a very considerable sum of money will be lost to the publick, but the troops cannot be paid off.

I am unhappy to find the apprehensions I expressed in a letter of the 20th ult., that few of the troops to the northward would re-engage, is on the point of being realized. They have such an intemperate desire to return home, that nothing can equal it.

As our paper currency will not pass in Canada, there will be an absolute necessity of sending a very considerable sum in specie; for if the Canadians should entertain an opinion of our inability in point of cash, I fear they will not adhere to us with that firmness we could wish; especially as they will be informed of the intended emoluments of the Ministry in their favour.

I have sent Captain Curtis, of Colonel Hinman's Regiment, (who is the only officer of that Regiment, as yet returned, willing to remain in the service,) to recruit. Enclose you copy of my orders to him; necessity, occasioned by the impossibility of hearing from Congress in time, as the season is so far advanced, must be my apology for this measure, which, I conceived, could not be dispensed with.

I have given the like orders to Captain Mills and Captain Rosecrans, of Colonel Holmes's Regiment, proposing to raise four Companies of seventy-five men, officers included, for this post and Fort George, as those works, which I proposed in my last, cannot be carried on without this number of men, and even more.

I send on Captain Livingston, (who brought me General Montgomery's despatches, with these,) a gentleman whose alertness and zeal has caused him to be distinguished in the Army.

I have a variety of regulations in contemplation, but time does not permit me to communicate them; and, indeed, I believe it will not be necessary that I should, as I hope to be honoured with a Committee of Congress.

I am, Sir, with the most profound respect to Congress and to you, your most obedient and most humble servant.

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., &c.

P. S. I have ordered the Commissary-General to purchase a thousand barrels of pork, and three thousand bushels of salt, and to get it at Albany, if possible, before the navigation of Hudson's River ceases for this year, that it may be brought up to Fort George in the course of the winter. I durst not venture to order up a greater quantity of salt, although I think much more should be sent, lest the intercourse between Albany and New-York should be cut off by the ships of war. This appears to me a very capital matter; for without that necessary article, it will be with the utmost difficulty that an Army can be supported in this quarter.

TO THE INHABITANTS OF MONTREAL.

November 12, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: My anxiety for the fate of Montreal induces me to request that you will exert yourselves among the inhabitants to prevail on them to enter into such meatures as will prevent the necessity of opening my batteries on the Town. When I consider the dreadful consequences of a bombardment, the distress that must attend a fire, (at this season especially,) when it is too late to repair the damage which must ensue, how many innocent people must suffer, and that the firm friends of liberty must be involved in one common ruin with the wicked tools of despotism, my heart bleeds at the dire necessity which compels me to distress that unfortunate city. I conjure you, by all the ties of humanity, to take every possible step to soften the heart of the Governour; for he, if he be sincere in his professions to the people committed to his charge, must commiserate their condition. In vain will he persist in a resistance, which can only be attended with misery to the inhabitants, and with lasting disgrace to his own humanity.

I am, Gentlemen, with earnest wishes for the success of your negotiation, your most obedient servant,

RICHARD MONTGOMERY,
Brigadier-General, Continental Army.

P. S. I have just heard it has been falsely and scandalously reported, our intentions are to plunder the inhabitants. I have only to appeal to your own observation, whether such a proceeding be consistent with our conduct since we have entered this Province.

Articles of Capitulation made and entered into between RICHARD MONTGOMERY, Esq., Brigadier-General of the Continental Army, and the Citizens and Inhabitants of MONTREAL, represented by the subscribers, JOHN PORTEOUS, PIERRE PANET, JOHN BLAKE, PIERRE MEZIERE, JAMES FINLAY, ST. GEORGE DUPREE, JAMES MCGILL, LOUIS CARRIGNANT, RICH'D HUNTLY, FRANÇOIS MATHIOT, EDWARD WILLIAM GREY, and PIERRE GUY, duly elected for that purpose.

Article 1st. That the citizens and inhabitants of Montreal, as well individuals as religious orders and communities, without any exceptions, shall be maintained in the free possession and enjoyment of their rights, goods, and effects, moveable and immoveable, of what nature soever they may be.

Article 2d. That the inhabitants, French and English, shall be maintained in the free exercise of their religion.

Article 3d. That trade, in general, as well within the Province as in the upper countries, and parts beyond the seas, shall be carried on freely as heretofore, and passports shall be granted for that purpose.

Article 4th. That passports shall also be granted to those who may want them for the different parts of this Province or elsewhere, on their lawful affairs.

Article 5th. That the citizens and inhabitants of the Town and suburbs of Montreal shall not be compelled, on any pretence whatever, to take up arms against the Mother Country, nor to contribute, in any manner, towards carrying on war against her.

Article 6th. That the citizens and inhabitants of the Town and suburbs, or any other part of the country, who have taken up arms for the defence of this Province, and are taken prisoners, shall be set at liberty.

Article 7th. That courts of justice shall be established for the determination of property, and that the judges of the said courts shall be elected by the people.

Article 8th. That the inhabitants of the Town shall not be subjected to lodge troops.

Article 9th. That no inhabitants of the country, or savages, shall be permitted to enter the Town until the commandant shall have taken possession, and provided for the security thereof.

JOHN PORTEOUS,	PIERRE PANET,
R. HUNTLY,	MATHIOT,
JOHN BLAKE,	CARRIGNANT,
EDWARD W. GREY,	MEZIERE,
JAMES FINLAY,	ST. GEORGE DUPREE,
JAMES MCGILL,	GUY.

Montreal, November 12, 1775.

I do hereby certify that the above Articles were presented to me, to which I have given the following answer:

The City of Montreal, having neither ammunition, artillery, troops, nor provisions, and having it not in their power to fulfil one article of the treaty, can claim no title to a capitulation.

The Continental Army have a generous disdain of every act of oppression and violence; they are come for the express purpose of giving liberty and security. The General therefore engages his honour to maintain in the peaceable enjoyment of their property, of every kind, the individuals and religious communities of the City of Montreal.

The inhabitants, whether English, French, or others, shall be maintained in the free exercise of their religion.

The present unhappy contention, between Great Britain and her Colonies, puts it out of his power to engage for freedom of trade to the Mother Country; nor can he make a general promise of passports; as far as it may consist with the safety of the troops and the publick good, he shall be happy to promote commerce, and, for that purpose, promises to grant passports for the upper countries when required.

The General hopes to see such a virtuous Provincial Convention assembled, as will enter, with zeal, into every measure that can contribute to set the civil and religious rights of this and her sister Colonies on a permanent foundation. He promises, for himself, that he will not compel the inhabitants of the Town to take up arms against the Mother Country, or contribute towards the expenses of carrying on the present war.

The Continental Army came into this Province for its protection; they therefore cannot consider their opposers as taking up arms for its defence.

'Tis not in the General's power to engage for the return of prisoners; motives of humanity will induce him to use his interest for their return to their families, provided it can be done without endangering the publick safety.

Speedy measures shall be taken for the establishing courts of justice upon the most liberal plan, conformable to the British Constitution.

The inhabitants shall not be burdened with troops, but when necessity requires it; of which necessity the General must be judge.

The inhabitants of the country, and savages, shall not enter the Town till the guards are posted.

To-morrow morning, at nine o'clock, the Continental Troops shall take possession of the Recollect Gate. The proper officers must attend, with the keys of all publick stores, upon the Quartermaster-General at nine o'clock, at the Recollect Gate.

This engagement is understood and declared to be binding on any future commanding officer of the Continental Troops that may succeed me in this district.

RICHARD MONTGOMERY,
Brigadier-General, Continental Army.

Montreal, November 12, 1775.

Ticonderoga, November 16, 1775.

SIR: You having signified to me that you are willing to continue in the Army of the United Colonies, raised for defence of American liberty, and for repelling every hostile invasion thereof, in the rank you now hold, I do therefore, by virtue of the power given me by the honourable Continental Congress, appoint you a Captain in their Army, and that you will be allowed the like pay that you have hitherto served for, unless they should please to augment it; and whereas it is necessary that you should immediately raise a Company, to consist of seventy-two men, non-commissioned officers and privates included, I do therefore empower and direct you to promise to every man that you shall enlist the same pay that was allowed to the troops raised in the Colony of Connecticut for the present campaign, and also that they shall be clothed, the particulars of which it is not in my power to determine, as I am not furnished with an account of them by the honourable Congress; that they shall be allowed one-twelfth of a dollar per day, for their subsistence, until they arrive at such place where provisions can be issued to them. If any man brings his own arms, such arms shall be valued; and if lost in the service, unless through the negligence of the owner, they shall be paid for them; and such as are not lost shall have the same allowance made for the use of them as was allowed by the Colony of Connecticut to the troops raised therein for the present campaign.

You are to enlist none but able-bodied men ; and every person that shall so enlist is to subscribe an enlistment, in the following words :

"I, A B, —, in the Colony of —, by trade a —, do acknowledge to have voluntarily enlisted myself a private soldier in a Regiment of Foot, to be commanded by such Colonel as the honourable the Continental Congress shall thereunto appoint ; and do promise that I will faithfully serve in such Regiment, so commanded, for the term of seven months, unless sooner discharged, and be obedient to and observe such articles of war as the honourable Congress hath or shall from time to time institute for the government of their Army, raised for the defence of American liberty, and for repelling every hostile invasion thereof."

You are to keep an exact account of the date of every man's enlistment.

You will make no delay in executing this service, as the time for which the men now here and at Fort George were enlisted will soon expire, and I wish to have the new-raised men up some time before.

I am, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,
To Captain Eleazer Curtis.
PHILIP SCHUYLER.

Montreal, October 19, 1775.

DEAR SIR : I know your goodness will pardon the trouble I am giving and likely to give you ; the necessity of the day will plead my excuse. Will you take the trouble to forward the enclosed letters ? They are of consequence to me, as well as to those to whom they are addressed.

I shall also take leave to inform you that John Orillat, a French gentleman of this Town, for whom I have great regard, and with whom I have extensive commercial concerns, is now a prisoner with the Rebels, by which his family and property suffer much. Will you, my good Sir, do me the kind office to get him exchanged, if possible, supply his wants, and return him to his family, and you will thereby render the most acceptable service to, dear Sir, your faithful humble servant,

BROOK WATSON.

To Major Shirreff, Boston.

P. S. The last letter from Mr. Orillat was dated Ticonderoga, 29th September, 1775. I hope to sail for London in ten days.

Montreal, October 16, 1775.

DEAR SIR : I have had the long wished for satisfaction of hearing from you at last. On the 7th instant I received yours of August the 14th, and immediately desired my friend at Quebeck to find Mr. Bliss, and get from him your letter of the 13th August, which I received the 14th instant, with an excuse of Mr. Bliss, that he had left it on board with his baggage. Your letter, in answer to mine of April the 6th, I have not received ; hence, you may naturally conceive me very unhappy concerning you and Mrs. Faneuil ; but am now relieved, and happy to learn you had determined on going to winter in Nova-Scotia, because you will certainly be in safety there. The Admiral can never suffer the Colonists to cross the Bay of Fundy, and seize the Province, nor can publick affairs continue to be conducted as they have been hitherto. From the little knowledge I have of America, and of military operations, I do conceive General Gage cannot winter at Boston, and that ere this he will have determined to quit it ; because, should it remain longer undetermined, it may not be in his power to quit Boston without quitting America. My meaning is, that he cannot winter all his troops at Halifax ; therefore, part of them must come to Quebeck ; and it is necessary, to that end, that they should now be embarked, or they will not get up the river. The Hunter, sloop-of-war, is arrived at Quebeck, from Boston. Perhaps she may bring some news of the kind.

Your intention of quitting America next spring, and with the fragments of your fortune purchasing an annuity for your and Mrs. Faneuil's lives, in case publick affairs shall not alter much for the better, I greatly approve ; at the same time, hope you will not have occasion to carry it into execution. Surely the Kingdom of Great Britain cannot much longer be governed by such weak counsels and feeble efforts. She has scarcely got a secure Province in America. As to this, it has long been on the brink of falling into the hands of the most despicable wretches. Had not the inhabitants of this Town gone out to meet Colonel Allen, on Monday, the 25th ultimo, the Town and principal part of the Province would have been in their hands, and that fellow would probably have been Governor of Montreal. Thank God, that day's action turned the minds of the Canadians ; and I have reason to hope the Province out of danger, at least for this year, and, doubtless, ample protection will be afforded it early in the next.

As to the affairs of W. & R., I have great pleasure in telling you I have sent them home forty thousand Pounds sterling since my arrival, thirty-two thousand Pounds of which in furs, per the ship Pomona, Captain Green, which sailed from Quebeck the 2d instant. Had it not been for the unhappy troubles which have reigned this year, I should have sent ten thousand Pounds more ; but I have reason to be content and happy in having made a voyage to America in 1775.

The Province of Nova-Scotia stands much indebted to W. & R., and I should be happy to have it in my power, as it is my wish, to visit it before my return to England ; but I conceive both the affairs of that Province and this demand my presence in London as soon as possible ; for which reason, it is my intention to leave Quebeck in the ship Adamant, about the 10th of next month, hoping to arrive on or about the 15th December, before Parliament shall be adjourned. Should my presence in Nova-Scotia be absolutely necessary, I shall, in discharge of my duty, visit it next spring. At the same time, I hope in God that may not be the case, for I ardently long for peace and home.

Your friends, Messrs. Jonathan and Isaac Clarke, would have done well, had not these troubles followed them to this Province. They have long had their goods packed, ready for embarking ; but I hope they will not be obliged to ship them.

Our friend Butler writes me he had resolved to go to London, with his wife, in the Canadian, Captain Abbott. Should that happen, I hope you will get to Halifax before his departure, and take charge of W. & R.'s power of attorney.

Pray make my compliments and affectionate regards known to Mrs. Faneuil ; and be assured that I am, dear Sir, your faithful and affectionate friend,

BROOK WATSON.

To Benjamin Faneuil, Jun., Esq., Boston.

P. S. My friend, Mr. John Orillat, of this City, is now prisoner with the Colonists. I esteem him much, and W. & R. have great commercial concerns with him and partner, Mr. Foretier. The last news I had of him, he was at Ticonderoga. Now, dear Sir, use your interest with General Gage to have him exchanged, get him released and returned to his family, supply his wants, and thereby render a most acceptable service to your friend,

BROOK WATSON.

Montreal, October 19, 1775.

DEAR SIR : I wrote you by the Cellery, Captain Hardie, from Quebeck, on the 18th ult., acknowledging receipt of your esteemed favour of August 19th, when I made you acquainted with the unhappy situation of this Province. I then wrote you fully concerning Kavanagh's affairs, and desired, in case any accident should prevent the Canadian from arriving, or that she should load fish for Europe, that you would charter a vessel to send home Kavanagh's oil and furs, &c. The Adamant did not arrive at Quebeck till after I had chartered a ship to carry home her intended cargo. I had two country vessels, with thirty-two thousand Pounds sterling in furs on board, waiting her arrival, at a time when the Bostonians were hourly expected to master the Province. Hence I thought it my duty, and did charter the ship Pomona, Captain Green, for three hundred and seventy-five Pounds, to proceed, with furs, &c., to London ; and she sailed from Quebeck the 2d instant. It was my intention to have gone home in her, and had prepared every thing accordingly, but altered my mind, and came off for Montreal the morning she was to sail for London ; and I confess to you that no one measure I ever took affords me half the satisfaction. This City, and the greatest part of the Province, would have fallen into the hands of the Colonists on the 25th last month, had not the inhabitants marched out to meet and give them battle. They fought, conquered, and saved the Province at least for a while. Colonel Allen, who commanded this despicable party of plunderers, (they were promised the plunder of the Town,) was, with most of his wretches, taken. He is now in irons on board the Gaspee. This action gave a sudden turn to the Canadians, who before, were, nine-tenths for the Bostonians. There are great numbers now in arms for the King; but the enemy have possession of the south side of the river, as low as Verchere, except the garrison of St. John's, which they still invest, with little hopes on their side, and little fear on ours, of its being taken. The beginning of the month I was much alarmed, on receiving news from Boston that Halifax was taken. From this I was soon relieved by your most welcome letter of September the 1st, which was soon followed by those of the 16th and 21st, all which I now mean to answer. I doubt not the trade of Halifax being dull; but I shall be much disappointed in my conjectures, if it does not soon mend. I think General Gage cannot winter at Boston; consequently, that he must soon send a part of his troops to Halifax, and the rest to this Province, where they are much wanted; for, notwithstanding the Bostonians are not likely soon to take St. John's, there is some danger of their getting this Town, and every other part of this Province, except Quebeck, unless it is soon supported by the King's troops. As to your Province, I am not under any apprehension of its being overrun by them; they will never send men where, let their success be ever so great, they cannot support them the winter; and I further think all possibility of their succeeding will be cut off, by the Admiral's orders to take and destroy all their vessels. I am with you of opinion, that if a land war is to be carried on, it had better be conducted through this Country, leaving the Navy to manage their sea-coast. I much fear the operations of the Army this winter will prevent your going home with Mrs. Butler. I am sorry her indisposition should make such a voyage necessary; at the same time, I shall have pleasure in seeing you there. Should that be the case, I know not any person in Halifax with whom you can confide Watson & Rashleigh's power of attorney. Mr. Faneuil writes me of his intention to winter there, with Mrs. Faneuil. Should he arrive before your departure, pray make over our power to him. I have wrote him a line on the subject. Should he not arrive, leave the power locked up with your other papers, our accounts, &c. The ship Adamant is nearly loaded with oak timber. There will be some furs and twenty odd passengers for her. It is my design to leave Quebeck about the 10th of next month, and I hope to be home before Parliament adjourns for Christmas holydays.

I have read your address to the King, Lords, and Commons, and cannot help admiring the delightful bull, "we feel for our Mother Country, of which many of us are natives." It is a good one. Tell my friend, Dr. Breynton, I wrote him from Quebeck on the 21st July last, per the Cellery, and did hope he would have given me a line in answer.

Pray push home every shilling of remittance which you can lay hands on; for W. & R., at these times of general want, will stand much in need of it.

Remember me to Mrs. Butler, and believe that I am, dear Sir, your faithful friend and humble servant,

BROOK WATSON.

To John Butler, Esq.

Montreal, October 19, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I had the pleasure to write you from Quebeck, the 18th ultimo, per the Cellery, Captain Hardie, since which I have been much alarmed by a letter from Boston, dated the 5th ultimo, advising of Halifax being taken, but I was soon relieved, by a letter from Mr. Butler, dated the 1st of September, which was soon followed by others of the 16th and 21st, by which I learn, to my great comfort, that the Province was not in any immediate danger; nor do I conceive these people will be so mad as to send a body of men where, let their success be ever so great, they cannot winter them. Indeed, the Admiral's orders to destroy their vessels will, if executed, effectually prevent their crossing the Bay of Fundy. It is my opinion General Gage cannot winter the Army in Boston, and that he soon will be obliged to quit it. If so, part of them must winter at Halifax, and part at Quebeck, where they are indeed much wanted; for such is the wretched state of this unhappy Province, that Colonel Allen, with a few despicable wretches, would have taken this City on the 25th ultimo, had not its inhabitants marched out to give them battle. They fought, conquered, and thereby saved the Province for a while. Allen, with his banditti, were mostly taken prisoners; he is now in chains on board the Gaspee. This little action has changed the face of things; the Canadians before were nine-tenths for the Bostonians; they are now returned to their duty. Many in arms for the King; and the Parishes which have been otherwise are daily demanding their pardon, and taking arms for the crown. St. John's is still invested. They have in the fort eight hundred men, well fortified and appointed; there is little danger of its being taken; yet I cordially wish for a few Battalions of the King's troops to chase them out of the Country. Our weather has been remarkably fine and mild, or they would soon be moving.

The Adamant is nearly loaded. I hope to sail from Quebeck about the 10th of next month, and to arrive in England before Parliament shall adjourn for the holydays. Let me entreat you to remit the balance of Mr. Louberbucker's account; every shilling is a relief at this time of general distress.

My good wishes attend Mrs. Franklin and the children; and I pray you to believe that I am, dear Sir, your faithful humble servant,

BROOK WATSON.

To Lieutenant-Governour Franklin.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Ticonderoga, November 18, 1775.

MY DEAR GENERAL: I do myself the honour to congratulate your Excellency on the surrender of Montreal. Enclose you copy of the terms that were proposed and allowed, as also copies of sundry letters from a Mr. Brook Watson, and that of General Montgomery to me; to Congress I have only sent extracts of the last, for prudential reasons. In your hands it is safe.

Since my last to your Excellency, I have been more particular on the subject which you recommended me to turn my thoughts to. I have not time to send you a copy, as I would not wish to detain the express one moment longer than what is absolutely necessary.

Your favour of the 5th I received on the 16th. If General Howe's military abilities do not exceed that specimen of his literary ones contained in the proclamation, his generalship is not much to be dreaded.

I shall write to General Montgomery respecting the garrison of Niagara and those to the westward.

The lead left this early in September, and was immediately forwarded to Cambridge, by Mr. Phelps, the Commissary at Albany.

My best respects your Excellency will please to make to Generals Lee and Gates, and Major Mifflin.

I am, with the sincerest regard, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL MONTGOMERY TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Montreal, November 13, 1775.

MY DEAR GENERAL: The badness of the weather, and worse roads, have put it out of my power to get here before yesterday. A favourable wind the night before enabled Mr. Carleton to get away, with his little garrison, on board ten or eleven little vessels, reserved for that purpose, and to carry away the powder and other important stores. I don't despair of getting hold of the powder yet. No diligence shall be wanting for that purpose.

By intercepted letters, I find Colonel Arnold is certainly arrived in the neighbourhood of Quebeck; that the King's friends are exceedingly alarmed, and expect to be besieged; which, with the blessing of God, they shall be, if the severe season holds off, and I can prevail on the troops to accompany me. The Lizard, man-of-war, is arrived there; she has brought twenty thousand Pounds sterling, and one hundred marines. They have had some other little re-enforcement of recruits, for Maclean's Regiment, and artificers, to the amount, in all, including marines and sailors, of four hundred and fifty men. One of the brigs is arrived, with clothing and arms for the faithful Canadians, as Mr. Carleton, with propriety, terms them. This morning we have taken possession of the Town. I send you their articles of capitulation, with my answer, and hope it may meet with approbation.

I cannot help feeling great uneasiness till I know the determination of the troops with respect to engaging for six months longer. I was obliged, at St. John's, to promise all such their dismissal as chose it, to coax them to Montreal. Indeed, Wooster's Regiment showed the greatest uneasiness. I make no doubt of retaining as many as will hold the ground already gotten; but it is of the utmost importance to finish this business at once, that the Ministry may have no hopes left of carrying on their infernal plan in this important quarter. At any rate, it will be highly expedient to throw in a large body of troops as soon as the ice will bear, in order to make a vigorous attack on Quebeck before the arrival of succours in the spring, should it not fall into our hands this winter; but should this instance of good fortune crown our labours, some advantageous post must be chosen below Quebeck, where a large corps of troops, strongly posted, a boom over a narrow channel, and floating batteries, may baffle all attempts from Europe. I am told a difficult pass, termed the Traverse, will answer this purpose. If your health will not permit you to engage in this affair, I think Lee ought by all means to have the command here.

I send some choice letters of that worthy and steady friend to the Colonies, Brook Watson, whose zeal is only to be equalled by his sincerity. You will think them of importance enough, I believe, to be communicated to General Washington and the Congress. Your friend, Mr. William Smith, has been pretty well humbugged by this gentleman.

I am exceedingly sorry Congress have not favoured me with a Committee. It would have had a great effect with the troops, who are exceedingly turbulent, and, indeed, mutinous. My vexation and distress can only be alleviated by reflecting on the great publick advantages which must arise from my unparalleled good fortune. I shall clothe the troops completely who engage again.

I find with pleasure that my politicks have squared with the views of Congress, and shall lose no time in calling a Convention, when my intended expedition is finished. Will not your health permit you to reside at Montreal this winter? I must go home, if I walk by the side of the lake, this winter. I am weary of power, and totally want that patience and temper so requisite for such a command. I will take it as a favour if you will send Harry Livingston with your despatches for Congress.

I wish some method could be fallen upon of engaging gentlemen to serve; a point of honour and more knowledge of the world, to be found in that class of men, would greatly reform discipline, and render the troops much more tractable. The officers of the First Regiment of Yorkers, and Artillery Company, were very near a mutiny the other day, because I would not stop the clothing of the garrison of St. John's. I would not have sullied my own reputation, nor disgraced the Continental arms, by such a breach of capitulation, for the universe; there was no driving it into their noddles, that the clothing was really the property of the soldier, that he had paid for it, and that every Regiment, in this country especially, saved a year's clothing, to have decent clothes to wear on particular occasions.

I am, &c.,
To General Schuyler.

RICHARD MONTGOMERY.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Ticonderoga, November 18, 1775.

Again, my good Sir, has the Divine Providence smiled on our arms. May Heaven still prove propitious, that a speedy termination may be put to this afflicting controversy, and Britons and Americans once more regard each other with the fond tenderness of a parent and child, and jointly establish an empire on such a solid basis, that no power on earth may be able to destroy it, and that shall last until the omnipotent Being is pleased to blot out all the empires of the earth. Montreal is in our possession, on which I sincerely congratulate you. The lead from Crown Point was sent from Albany to Cambridge, very early in September; of this you will please to advise General Washington. I either enclosed to your Honour, to Congress, or General Washington, the original return of the troops taken at St. John's. If your Honour has it, I beg you to send it to me; if not, a copy of your copy will do.

I am, with sentiments of real respect and esteem, your Honour's most obedient humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

The Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., &c.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Cambridge, November 18, 1775.

SIR: Your favour of the 13th instant, by Mr. Phillips, I received. In answer thereto, you will be pleased to order the officers and men that have been stationed at Block-Island to march to this camp: re-enforcements are wanting, and probably will be. When they are here, they will be incorporated into the Continental Army, if they choose it; the many circumstances attending the new arrangement of which, had, in some measure, occasioned me to forget these men before. When an account of the wages and subsistence due to them is transmitted, I shall give necessary orders for their payment. I congratulate you upon your appointment to the Government of the Colony, and am obliged by the assurances you give me of such assistance as may be in your power. I am, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Governour Cooke, Rhode-Island.

STEPHEN MOYLAN TO WILLIAM WATSON.

Cambridge, November 18, 1775.

SIR: Your favour of the 4th instant was delivered this day, by Major Soper. As it appears, by the papers he brought, that the cargo of wine, wrecked off the coast, belongs to a Thomas Sailer, of Philadelphia, and that it was not intended for the enemy, it is his Excellency's opinion that you had better have the wine stored in the most secure place you conveniently can, and that you wait for such directions as the owners will give for the further disposal thereof. I am really at a loss what instructions to give, relative to the six negroes; let them, however, be taken care of until further orders.

I am yours, &c.,

STEPHEN MOYLAN.

To William Watson, Esq., Plymouth.

TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

November 18, 1775.

SIR: The enclosed papers I received a few days ago. I suppose they came from Mr. Hitchborn. He appears very certain the Preston might be taken, but from her situation, and being unrigged, it will be very difficult, if not impossible, to secure her; for, as soon as daylight appears, she might be beat to pieces by the batteries of the Town, to which she would be a fair mark; or she might be retaken, by being boarded from the other ships and transports, which can furnish, together with the Town, a large body of men for that purpose. If she could be taken, but not carried off, would it not be an essential object to secure her powder and small arms? for which purpose a sufficient number of whale-boats might remove them to Chelsea in a short time, and afterwards the ship be burnt; first removing the men to Noddle-Island.

If Mr. Hitchborn's plan be a good one, might it not be applied with a better chance of success to the taking of the Boyne, which, according to Hitchborn, lies near the west end of Spectacle-Island, rigged? If she could be taken, she might be, from her situation, not only secured, but made good use of for taking the castle; which, perhaps, in its present dismembered state, might be attended with no great difficulty. Here would be probably found a good collection of arms and ammunition—the great desideratum.

I am, with much esteem, your Excellency's most humble servant,

BRITANNICUS.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Cambridge, October 28, 1775.

SIR: As his Excellency General Washington desired me to reduce to writing any thing I knew respecting the Navy in Boston harbour, I beg you would show him the enclosed memorandum, which will afford a general view of their situation. The plan of attacking the Preston, hereto annexed, I send you. . . . . * I did not choose to present it to the General, lest he might think me too officious. You will make what use of it you please. I think there can be no objection raised against it that I cannot obviate. I am under a necessity to set off immediately for Newburyport, or I should have waited on you in person. Shall return in a few days, when I will do myself that pleasure; and am, interim, most respectfully, Sir, your very humble servant.

To . . . . . *

Thoughts on the practicability of taking the Flag-Ship PRESTON.

She mounts fifty guns, carries three hundred men, (officers included,) and now musters her full complement; the following draughts being made therefrom, viz: eighteen sick, forty lent to other ships, and forty in the floating batteries, leaves two hundred and two effective men. This deficiency of their full complement reduces them to the necessity of manning the guns on one side only at a time. When the watch is set, at eight o'clock in the evening, one-half the ship's company retire to their hammocks; they have then eight marines and two sailors on the poop, one marine at each gangway, two marines and two sailors on the fore-castle, one sentinel over the prisoners between decks, one at the great cabin, one at the ward-room, and one at the gun-room door; in the whole, twenty men under arms every night. The rest of the watch are totally unarmed and defenceless; their duty leading them to their respective quarters at the great guns, immediately upon an alarm. They have, indeed, armed chests on the poop, containing several hundred muskets, about twelve pole-axes, and sixteen spears, about eight feet long, on the quarter-deck; these are to be made use of only by the marines, about fifteen in number, who we suppose to be now in their hammocks. There is an accommodation-ladder, leading from the water into the ship, which will deliver about sixty men in forty seconds. The only difficulty lies in bringing about eighty or one hundred men within musket-shot of the ship unnoticed. Suppose, then, that number of men embark from the eastern point of Noddle-Island, on a cloudy evening, with a flood-tide; in this case, the accommodation-ladder, being on the larboard side, will afford the most convenient situation for boarding her. Four boats, I imagine, would conveniently carry the men. Let the first boat be about two hundred yards before the rest, and when the three last are perceptible, the first will be in possession of the ladder. To carry on the deception with greater certainty of success, let the first boat have a square-sail, (provided the wind is favourable,) which will give her the appearance of one of the Boyne's boats. Upon being hailed, answer, Ay! Ay! which denotes your having an officer in the boat, and that you intend to board the ship you are hailed from. Upon a nearer approach, should they inquire, What boat is that? answer, the Boyne's; and I imagine the chance to be a hundred to one if you meet with the least opposition. I have observed several instances exactly similar at midnight. These circumstances being given, their cannon can be of no service to them, and must produce the greatest confusion in the ship. Should they discover your intentions early enough to guard against them, you will have notice in season to retreat, by the drum, which always, on such occasions, beats to arms. The only possibility I can conceive of failing in such an attempt, must arise from their having some previous information of your design; in which case, you would have no warning from the drum; they would be all at their quarters, and, with their cannon, must totally defeat the assailants. About eleven or one o'clock would be the most convenient time for making the attack, as the guard boat would then be at the greatest distance from the ship, and that point of Noddle-Island.

Names, rates, and situation of the Navy in BOSTON Harbour.

The Boyne: Mounts sixty-four guns, and lies near the western end of Spectacle-Island.

The Preston: Fifty guns; is now moored for the winter between Long Wharf and Hancock's Wharf, at the eastern end of the Town.

The Scarborough and another Sloop, one of twenty and the other of sixteen guns, are moored at a small distance to the southward of the Preston.

There are at present no other ships of force in the harbour, except the Mercury, stationed at the northwest side of the Town, upon Charles River.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A GENTLEMAN IN LONDON,
DATED SAVANNAH, IN GEORGIA, NOV. 19, 1775.

The Province of South-Carolina is involved in all the horrors of a civil war. Colonel Robert Cunningham, a very considerable planter in the back settlements, being suspected of attachment to the King's cause, was seized by a party sent in the disguise of Indian traders from Charlestown, by the Committee of Safety, and closely confined in the common jail of that Town. Mr. Patrick Cunningham, brother to the Colonel, having collected together the tenants and dependants of their family, seized some powder and shot belonging to the Committee, and, erecting the royal standard, declared for His Majesty and Great Britain, against all Rebels and their abettors. The Committee, in the mean time, ordered three detachments of their Army to march from different quarters, and to disperse the insurgents. A Colonel Williamson, with twelve hundred men, first arriving, took possession of a stockade fort, where he was instantly besieged by Cunningham, with his party. Williamson having remained confined for two days in the fort, destitute of provisions and water, was forced to sally with his men on the third day; but they were attacked by Cunningham, in the attempt, and totally dispersed. The Committee-men made so good use of their heels, that only twenty-five were killed in the flight, for fight there was none.*

DECLARATION BY THE PROVINCIAL CONGRESS OF SOUTH-CAROLINA.

Charlestown, November 19, 1775.

It has ever been the policy of America in general, and of this Colony in particular, to endeavour to cultivate a good correspondence with the neighbouring Indians, and especially since the commencement of these present disputes with the British Administration. This policy originated from a view of preserving, at the cheapest rate, our borders from savage incursions. Of late this policy has been persevered in, and our endeavours have been redoubled in order to oppose and to frustrate the designs of the British Administration, by the hands of Indians, to deluge our frontiers with the blood of our fellow-citizens. Experience has taught us that occasional presents to the Indians have been the great means of acquiring their friendship. In this necessary service, Government every year expended large sums of money. The late Council of Safety spared no pains to confirm them in their pacifick inclinations; but, from repeated, constant, and uniform accounts, it clearly appeared that a general Indian war was inevitable, unless the Indians were furnished with some small supplies of ammunition, to enable them to procure deer skins for their support and maintenance. Rather than draw on an Indian war, by an ill-timed frugality in withholding ammunition, the late Council of Safety, in October, issued a supply of ammunition, consisting of one thousand weight of powder and two thousand weight of lead, for the use of the Cherokees, as the only probable means of preserving the frontiers from the inroads of the Indians. The Council more readily agreed to this measure, because, as they almost daily expected the British arms would attack the Colony in front, on the sea-coast, they would be inexcusable if they did not, as much as in them lay, remove every cause to apprehend an attack at the same time from the Indians upon the back settlements.

* Major Andrew Williamson, who had the command of the Militia at Ninety-Six, went in pursuit of the party [under Patrick Cunningham and John Bowman] that seized the powder, but was obliged to retreat before superior numbers. In a letter from him to the Council of Safety, he informed them that he had had an action with the insurgents, under Major Robertson, for three days and three nights, without refreshments, in his fortified camp at Ninety-Six; and was reduced at last to the necessity of making a treaty with them; and, at their own request, they agreed to a suspension of hostilities for twenty days, with liberty for each party to send despatches, unsealed, to their superiors, informing them of their situation. At this time, Colonels Richardson and Thompson were marching to form a junction to relieve Williamson. Of this the insurgents were informed, which induced them to agree to a suspension of hostilities. They had, by some means or other, kept up an intercourse with Lord William Campbell, who encouraged them to oppose us, by promises of great rewards; they were also instigated by Pearis, who had much influence in Ninety-Six District. The Congress was determined to send an army among them, but first sent out by authority this Declaration.—Moultrie.

But this measure, entered into by the Council's principles of the soundest policy of Christianity, breathing equal benevolence to the associators and non-associators, and arising only from necessity, unfortunately, has been made, by some non-associators, an instrument for the most diabolical purposes. These weak men, to the astonishment of common sense, have made many of their deluded followers believe that this ammunition was sent to the Indians with orders for them to fall upon the non-associators, and taking advantage from the scarcity of ammunition among the individuals, arising from the necessity of filling the publick magazines, they invidiously represented that this ammunition ought not to have been sent to the Indians, while the inhabitants of the Colony, individually, are, in a great measure, destitute of that article.

Wherefore, in compassion to those who are deluded by such representations, the Congress have taken these things into their consideration, and they desire our deceived fellow-Colonists to reflect that the story of the ammunition being sent to the Indians with orders for them to massacre the non-associators, is absurd in its very nature: First, because the whole tenour of the Council of Safety demonstrates that they were incapable of such inhumanity, as a body, and the character of each individual shields him against a charge of so cruel a nature.

Second, because, also, if men will but call reason to their aid, they must plainly see, that if the Indians were let loose upon the frontiers, they must indiscriminately massacre associators and non-associators, since there is no mark to distinguish either to the Indians. However, in order to clear up all difficulties on this head, and ease the minds of our deceived friends, the Congress, in a body, and also individually, declare, in the most solemn manner, before Almighty God, that they do not believe that any order was ever issued, or any idea entertained by the late Council of Safety, or any member of it, or by any person under authority of Congress, to cause the Indians to commence hostilities upon the frontiers, or any part thereof. On the contrary, they do believe that they, and each of them, have used every endeavour to inculcate in the Indians sentiments friendly to the inhabitants, without distinction. It is greatly to be regretted that fellow-Colonists, individually, are not so well supplied with ammunition as would be adequate to their private convenience. But does not the unhappy situation of publick affairs justify the filling the publick magazines, thereby securing the welfare and forming the defence of the State, at the risk of inconvenience or safety of individuals, and out of the publick stock is given to the Indians, which may be sufficient to keep them quiet, by, in some degree, supplying their urgent occasions, yet not sufficient to enable them to make war? Ought our people, nay, they cannot have any reasonable ground to arraign the policy by which they are and may be preserved from savage hostility; or to complain that, because the whole Colony or the publick, individually, cannot be supplied with ammunition, that a small quantity ought not to be sent to the Indians? Men ought also to reflect that this small quantity is given in order to render it unnecessary to supply the publick, individually, on the score of defence against Indians. Men ought also to reflect, that when the publick magazines are well stored, supplies can be instantly, plentifully, and regularly poured upon those parts where the publick service may require them. Common sense and common honesty dictate that there is a probability that by a present of a small quantity of ammunition to the Indians they can be kept in peace. This present ought not to be held back, at the hazard of inducing an Indian war, involving the Colony in immense expense, breaking settlements, and unnecessarily sacrificing a number of lives.

ORDERS TO CAPTAIN FRANCIS MARION.

You are to proceed, with all expedition, with yours and Captain Huger's Companies, to Dorchester, to re-enforce the Troops there, and to take special care in guarding and defending the cannon, gunpowder, and publick records at that place; you are to take the command of the whole of the Troops at that place till further orders; you are to apply to the Committee at Dorchester for a sufficient number of Negroes in the publick service to remove the cannon lying near the water-side to a spot more safe and convenient, near the fort or barracks, &c.

WILLIAM MOULTRIE.

Charlestown, November 19, 1775.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, Williamsburgh, Va., Nov. 19, 1775.

All the Troops being now quartered in this City, it will highly behoove them to be careful and guarded in their conduct, so that all offences be avoided towards the citizens. The officers and soldiers will remember that their profession is to defend and protect the citizens, and all others who are in the American interest. A modest and respectful behaviour towards our friends, it is hoped, will characterize all our Troops, and that no condition, age, or sex, will justly charge them with licentiousness or immorality.

GEORGE MUTER, Sec'y C. C.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN OFFICER TAKEN IN CHAMBLY, DATED TRENTON, NEW-JERSEY, NOVEMBER 19, 1775.

From Chambly hither we have marched three hundred miles; and ever since we were taken, I have the pleasure and satisfaction to acquaint you, that we have been treated with the greatest civility and politeness. In short, every one, in every place we have yet been in here, seems happy they have it in their power to convince us, by their behaviour, of the benevolent principles on which they wish this unnatural contest may be conducted; and I have not the least reason to dispute but it is the sincere sentiment of the generality of the Americans, that a happy and honourable accommodation between Great Britain and her Colonies may speedily take place.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Cambridge, November 19, 1775.

SIR: I received your favours of the 7th and 10th inst., with the resolves of the honourable Congress, to which I will pay all due attention. As soon as two capable persons can be found, I will despatch them to Nova-Scotia, on the service resolved on in Congress. The resolve to raise two Battalions of Marines will, if practicable in this Army, entirely derange what has been done. It is therein mentioned, one Colonel for the two Battalions; of course a Colonel must be dismissed. One of the many difficulties which attended the new arrangement was in reconciling the different interests, and judging of the merits of the different Colonels. In the dismission of this one, the same difficulties will occur. The officers and men must be acquainted with maritime affairs, to comply with which they must be picked out of the whole Army, one from this corps, one from another, so as to break through the whole system, which has cost us so much time, anxiety, and pains, to bring into any tolerable form; notwithstanding ing any difficulties which will arise, you may be assured, Sir, that I will use every endeavour to comply with their resolve. I beg leave to submit it to the consideration of Congress, if these two Battalions can be formed out of this Army, whether this is a time to weaken our lines, by employing any of the forces appointed to defend them on any other service? The gentlemen who were here from the Congress know their vast extent; they must know that we shall have occasion for our whole force for that purpose, more so now than at any past time, as we may expect the enemy will take the advantage of the first hard weather, and attempt to make an impression somewhere; that this is their intention, we have many reasons to suspect. We have had, in the last week, six deserters, and took two straggling prisoners. They all agree that two Companies, with a train of Artillery, and one of the Regiments from Ireland, were arrived at Boston; that fresh ammunition and flints have been served out; that the Grenadiers and Light Infantry had orders to hold themselves in readiness, at a moment's warning. As there is every appearance that this contest will not be soon decided, and, of course, that there must be an augmentation of the Continental Army, would it not be eligible to raise two Battalions of Marines in New-York and Philadelphia, where there must be numbers of sailors now unemployed? This however is matter of opinion, which I mention with all due deference to the superior judgment of the Congress.

Enclosed you have copies of two letters, one from Colonel Arnold, the other from Colonel Enos. I can form no judgment on the latter's conduct, until I see him. Notwithstanding the great defection, I do not despair of Col. Arnold's success; he will have, in all probability, many more difficulties to encounter, than if he had been a fortnight sooner, as it is likely that Governour Carleton will, with what forces he can collect after the surrender of the rest of Canada, throw himself into Quebeck, and there make his last effort. There is no late account from Captains Broughton and Selman, sent to the River St. Lawrence; the other cruisers have been chiefly confined to harbour, by the badness of the weather. The same reason has caused great delay in building of our barracks, which, with a most mortifying scarcity of fire-wood, discourages the men from enlisting; the last I am much afraid is an insuperable obstacle. I have applied to the honourable House of Representatives of this Province, who were pleased to appoint a Committee to negotiate this business, and, notwithstanding all the pains they have and are taking, they find it impossible to supply our necessities; the want of a sufficient number of teams I understand to be the chief impediment.

I got returns this day from eleven Colonels of the numbers enlisted in their Regiments; the whole amount is nine hundred and sixty-six men. There must be some other stimulus besides love for their Country, to make men fond of the service. It would be a great encouragement, and no additional expense to the Continent, were they to receive pay for the months of October and November, also a month's pay advance. The present state of the military chest will not admit of this; the sooner it is enabled to do so the better.

The Commissary-General is daily expected in camp; I cannot send you the estimate of the Clerks in his department until he arrives.

I sincerely congratulate you upon the success of your arms, in the surrender of St. John's, which I hope is a happy presage of the reduction of the rest of Canada.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress.

Chaudiere Pond, October 27, 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: My last, of the 13th instant, from the portage to the Dead River, advising your Excellency of our proceeding, I make no doubt you have received. I then expected to have reached this place by the 24th instant, but the excessive heavy rains and bad weather have much retarded our march. I have this minute arrived here with seventy men, and met a person on his return, whom I sent down some time since, to the French inhabitants. He informs me they appear very friendly, and, by the best information he could get, will very gladly receive us; he says they informed him General Schuyler had had a battle with the regular troops at or near St. John's, in which the latter lost, in killed and wounded, near five hundred men, (this account appears very imperfect,) and that there were few or none of the King's troops at Quebeck, and no advice of our coming. Three days since I left the principal part of the detachment about eight leagues below the Great Carrying Place; and as our provisions were short, by reason of losing a number of batteaus at the falls and rapid waters, I ordered all the sick and feeble to return, and wrote Colonels Enos and Greene, to bring on in their divisions no more men than they could furnish with fifteen days' provisions, and send back the remainder to the Commissary, as the roads prove much worse than I expected, and the season may be possibly severe in a few days. I am determined to set out immediately with four batteaus and about fifteen men for Sartigan, which I expect to reach in three or four days, in order to procure a supply of provisions, and forward back to the detachment, the whole of which I don't expect will reach there in less than eight or ten days. If I find the enemy are not apprized of our coming, and there is any prospect of surprising the City, I shall attempt it, as soon as I have a proper number of men up. If I should be disappointed in my prospect that way, I shall wait the arrival of the whole, and endeavour to cut off their communication with Governour Carleton, who I am told is at Montreal. Our march has been attended with an amazing deal of fatigue, which the officers and men have borne with cheerfulness. I have been much deceived in every account of our route, which is longer, and has been attended with a thousand difficulties I never apprehended; but if crowned with success, and conducive to the publick good, I shall think it but trifling. As soon as I can get time, shall send your Excellency a continuation of my journal.

I am, with the greatest respect and esteem, your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

BENEDICT ARNOLD.

To his Excellency General Washington, at Cambridge.

Brunswick, near Kennebeck, November 9, 1775.

SIR: I am on my return from Colonel Arnold's detachment. I brought up the rear of the whole; Captains McCobb's, Williams's and Scott's Companies were assigned to my division. We proceeded as far as fifty miles up the Dead River, and then were obliged to return, for want of provisions. When we arrived at the Great Carrying Place, by what I could learn from the division forward, that provisions was like to be short, I wrote to Colonel Arnold, and desired him to take an account of the provisions forward. He wrote me word that there were twenty-five days' provisions for all the divisions ahead, but, to my surprise, before we got over the Great Carrying Place, Major Bigelow, with ninety men, were sent back from Colonel Greene's division to mine, for provisions. I let them have all I could spare. I continued my march with all expedition, and when about fifty miles up the Dead River, overtook Colonel Greene with his division, entirely out of provisions; and by reason of men being sent back with orders from Colonel Arnold for me to furnish them with provisions to carry them to the inhabitants, my division was reduced to four days' provisions. Colonel Arnold was gone ahead; the chief of the officers of Colonel Greene's division and mine were together, when we took the situation of our divisions into consideration; and upon the whole, for several reasons, it was thought best for my whole division to return, and furnish those that proceeded with all our provisions except three days' to bring us back, which I did without loss of time. A more particular account shall be able to give when I return to Cambridge. Shall lose no time if able to ride. I have for many days been unwell. Expect the whole of my division at this place to-morrow, when shall set out on our march to Cambridge.

I am your most obedient humble servant,

ROGER ENOS.

To his Excellency George Washington, Esq.

HORATIO GATES, Adjutant-General.

ORDERS BY GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 12, 1775.

(Parole, America.) (Countersign, Freedom.)

Each Colonel upon the new establishment to come to Head-Quarters to-morrow morning, ten o'clock, in order to receive from the Adjutant-General as many printed enlistments as there are commissioned officers in his Regiment. They will therefore without delay distribute one to each officer, who is forthwith to proceed to enlist men for their respective Regiments, in the Continental Army; the soldiers, as the printed enlistments express, to be engaged to serve until the last day of December, 1776.

In the general orders of the 31st of October it is declared, that every non-commissioned officer and soldier shall be paid by the calendar month, as follows: to a Sergeant, forty-eight Shillings; to the Corporals, forty-four; and forty to each Private; which pay, it is expected, will be regularly distributed every month. Each non-commissioned officer and soldier (drums and fifes excepted) is to furnish his own arms; if arms are found him, he is to allow six shillings, at the end of the campaign, for the use thereof. New clothing will forthwith be provided for every non-commissioned officer and soldier, for which an easy stoppage, of only ten shillings a month, will be made out of his pay, until the whole is paid. Two dollars will be allowed to each non-commissioned officer and soldier who provides himself with a good blanket, and liberty to take it away at the end of the campaign. The present ample allowance of provisions will be continued, and those who enlist will be indulged in a reasonable time to visit their families, in the course of the winter. This to be regulated in such a manner as not to weaken the Army or injure the service.

To prevent such contentions as have arisen from the same person being enlisted by different officers, and for different Regiments, it is positively ordered, upon pain of being cashiered, that no officer, knowingly, presume to enlist any soldier who has been previously enlisted by another officer; where such a mistake happens, undesignedly, the first enlistment is to take place.

The officers are to be careful not to enlist any person suspected of being unfriendly to the liberties of America, or any abandoned vagabond, to whom all causes and countries are equal, and alike indifferent. The rights of mankind and the freedom of America will have numbers sufficient to support them, without resorting to such wretched assistance. Let those who wish to put shackles upon freemen fill their ranks and place their confidence in such miscreants. Neither negroes, boys unable to bear arms, nor old men unfit to endure the fatigues of the campaign, are to be enlisted, the preferences being given to the present Army.

The officers are vigilantly to try what number of men can be enlisted in the course of this week, and make report thereof to their Colonels, who will report it to the General. This to be done every week, until the whole are completed. The Regiments are to consist of eight Companies; each Company of a Captain, two Lieutenants and an Ensign, four Sergeants, four Corporals, two Drums and Fifes, and seventy-six Privates. As the Regiments are completed, they will be mustered, and then reviewed by the Commander-in-Chief, when a roll of each Company, signed by the Captain, according to a form previously delivered by the Adjutant-General, is to be delivered to his Excellency. The Colonel of each Regiment will receive a list of the officers upon the new establishment from his Brigadier-General. The commissioned, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers of the present Army are notwithstanding their new engagement, to continue in the Regiment and Company they now belong to, until further orders. Upon any soldier being enlisted, from the present, into the new establishment, the Regiment he now belongs to, with his name, Town, and County, are to be entered in a roll kept for that purpose by each officer. A copy of this roll, signed, to be sent every Saturday morning to the Colonel of each Regiment. When the new Regiments are completed, the Colonels may, upon application, receive their Continental commissions for themselves and their officers.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 13, 1775.

(Parole, Granby.)

(Countersign, Barre.)

The Colonels upon the new establishment to settle as soon as possible with the Quartermaster-General the uniform of their respective Regiments, that the buttons may be properly numbered, and the work finished without delay.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 14, 1775.

(Parole, St. John's.)

(Countersign, Montgomery.)

This moment a confirmation is arrived of the glorious success of the Continental arms, in the reduction and surrender of the fortress of St. John's, the garrisons of that place and Chamby being made prisoners of war. The Commander-in-Chief is confident the Army under his immediate direction will show their gratitude to Providence for thus favouring the cause of freedom and America, and by their thankfulness to God, their zeal and perseverance in this righteous cause, continue to deserve his future blessings.

That no kind of confusion or disorder may arise between the old and new appointments, in case the despair and malice of the enemy should call us into action, it is again declared that the men who enlist into the new Army are to continue in the Regiments and Companies they at present belong to, until further orders.

It is earnestly recommended to all the officers of the old Regiments, to see that their men's arms are always in good order, and the men not suffered to straggle from camp, nor, on any account, to quit their post when upon duty, but be ready to turn out at a moment's warning; and they may rely upon it they will be suddenly called upon whenever it happens.

Very pointed complaints having this day been made against the Commissary-General, from several Field-Officers, &c., of General Sullivan's Brigade, the Commander-in-Chief assures the complainants, that the strictest examination shall be made into the conduct of the Commissary-General, as soon as he arrives in Cambridge, which is expected this week.

Whereas the General has been informed that the orders of the 6th of September have been construed to permit any approved Sutler to sell spirituous liquors to the soldiers belonging to other Regiments, without the permission of the commanding officer of the Regiment to which such soldier belongs; it is therefore ordered, that no commanding officer of a Regiment shall authorize more than one Sutler to a Regiment, and such appointment shall be notified in regimental orders; and no person, being authorized, shall presume to sell spirituous liquors to any soldiers belonging to any other Regiment, without leave in writing, under the hand of the commanding officer to which such soldier belongs.

Lieutenant Lyon, of Major Johnson's Company, in the Thirty-Fourth Regiment, tried at a late General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Patterson was President, for "aiding and countenancing a mutiny in the camp." There being no proof of the charge, the Court unanimously acquit the prisoner.

Lieutenant Soaper and Ensign Parker, tried at a General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Douglass was President, for "striking and abusing Lieutenants Henshaw and Craig, and keeping Lieutenant Craig in the Meeting-House Guard all night." The Court are of opinion that the prisoners are guilty of a breach of the forty-sixth article of the rules and regulations for the Massachusetts Army, and therefore unanimously adjudge the prisoners to be discharged the Continental Army.

Lieutenant John Bowher, tried at a late General Court-Martial, for "divers times leaving the camp without leave, and for countenancing the soldiers in disobedience of orders." The Court are unanimously of opinion, that the prisoner is guilty of quitting the camp without leave, but acquitted of the latter part of the charge; therefore only adjudge the prisoner to be mulcted four Pounds of his pay, to be appropriated as directed by the fifty-first article of war, and be severely reprimanded by his Colonel, at the head of the Regiment.

Sergeant Jonathan Putney, Corporal Harwood, Thomas Rollins, Isaac Larriley, Samuel North, and Ebenezer Williams, soldiers of Captain Hatch's Company, in the late Colonel Gerrish's Regiment, tried at a late General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Patterson was President, for "mutiny." The Court are of opinion that the prisoners, Sergeant Putney, Corporal Harwood, Rollins, North, and Williams, are guilty of the crime laid to their charge, and adjudge the said Sergeant to be reduced to the ranks, and fined forty-eight Shillings, to be appropriated as directed by the fifty-first article of war. The said Corporal to be reduced to a private, and whipped with thirty-nine lashes. The said Rollins to be whipped with thirty-nine; the said North with twenty-five; and the said Williams with thirty-nine lashes, upon their bare backs, with a cat-o'-nine-tails.

The Commander-in-Chief approves all the above sentences of the several Courts-Martial, mentioned in this day's orders, and directs the execution of them accordingly.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 16, 1775.

(Parole, Canada.)

(Countersign, Montreal.)

Motives of economy rendering it indispensably necessary that many of the Regiments should be reduced, and the whole put upon a different establishment, several deserving officers, not from any demerit, but pure necessity, have been excluded in the new arrangement of the Army; among these was Colonel Whitcomb; but the noble sentiments disclosed by that gentleman upon this occasion, the zeal he has shown in exhorting the men not to abandon the interest of their Country at this important crisis, and his determination to continue in the service, even as a private soldier, rather than by a bad example, when the enemy are gathering strength, put the publick affairs to hazard—when an example of this kind is set, it not only entitles a gentleman to particular thanks, but to particular rewards; in the bestowing of which, Colonel Jonathan Brewer is entitled to no small share of credit, in readily giving up the Regiment which he was appointed to command, to Colonel Whitcomb. Colonel Whitcomb, therefore, is, from henceforward, to be considered as Colonel of that Regiment which was intended for Colonel Brewer, and Colonel Brewer will be appointed Barrackmaster, until something better worth his acceptance can be provided.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 17, 1775.

(Parole, Nicholas.)

(Countersign, Hampton.)

Lieutenant Correy, of Colonel Prescott's Regiment, tried at a late General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Patterson was President, for "forgery, and defrauding his men of their pay." The Court were unanimously of opinion, that Lieutenant Correy was guilty of defrauding some of his men of their blanket money, and of attempting to defraud others of their coat money, and therefore adjudge the prisoner to be cashiered. The General approves, and orders the sentence to take place immediately.

Representations having been made to the Continental Congress of the great inequality in the pay of the officers and soldiers of the Army, this first being lower than usual, and less than was ever given to commissioned officers in any other service, whilst that of the soldiers is higher, the Congress have been pleased to increase the pay of Captain to twenty-six and two-third dollars; of a First Lieutenant to eighteen dollars; of a Second Lieutenant and Ensign to thirteen and one-third dollars, per calendar month each, to take place so soon as the new Regiments are completed to their full complement of men. The Congress have given this encouragement to the Captains and Subalterns, (whose pay was lower in proportion,) with a view to impress upon their minds a due sense of gratitude, at the same time that it is intended to enable them to support the character and appearance of gentlemen and officers, which will add much to the reputation of the Regiments, and cannot but be pleasing to every man in it. It is expected that the officers of the new-formed Regiments will exert themselves in the recruiting service, and that they do not fail to report the number they have recruited to their Colonels to-morrow, that they may make returns thereof the day after, in order that the recruiting parties may be sent into the country, if any backwardness should appear here. When this happens, the Colonels of the old Regiments are to be consulted, to prevent the Companies therein being left without officers.

As furloughs have been promised to the new enlisted men, none others can be indulged, under any pretence whatsoever, and in order that these furloughs may be given with some degree of regularity, none but the Colonels or commanding officers of Regiments, upon the new establishment, are to grant them, and they respectively not to let more than fifty be absent at a time, beginning with those who enlisted first, and going on in a regular rotation, until all are indulged, allowing each man ten days to be at home, and a sufficient time to go and return.

The Colonels or commanding officers of the new established Regiments are to meet at the Quartermaster-General's, in Cambridge, to-morrow, at eleven o'clock, to fix upon the uniform of their respective Regiments, that the making the clothing may not be interrupted; without all are present, this cannot be done, and the work must not be delayed.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 18, 1775.

(Parole, Ambloy.)

(Countersign, Bristol.)

There was a mistake in the entry of the general orders of yesterday. The honourable the Continental Congress have thought proper to allow the First and Second Lieutenants the same pay, viz: eighteen dollars a month to each, and the Ensigns thirteen dollars and one-third of a dollar.

The Commissary-General to order all the horns of the bullocks that are killed for the use of the Army to be saved and sent to the Quartermaster-General, who is also to provide as many as he can get, and have the whole made into good powder horns, for the use of the troops.

The honourable the Legislature of this Colony having thought fit to set apart Thursday, the 23d of November instant, as a day of publick Thanksgiving, "to offer up our praises and prayers to Almighty God, the source and benevolent bestower of all good, that he would be pleased graciously to continue to smile upon our endeavours; to restore peace, preserve our rights and privileges, to the latest posterity; prosper the American arms, preserve and strengthen the harmony of the United Colonies, and avert the calamities of a civil war:" the General therefore commands that day to be observed with all the solemnity directed by the legislative Proclamation; and all officers, soldiers and others, are hereby directed, with the most unfeigned devotion, to obey the same.

Any non-commissioned officers and soldiers, confined on account of leaving the detachment commanded by Colonel Arnold, in any of the main or quarter guards of the Army, are to be immediately released.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 19, 1775.

(Parole, Coventry.)

(Countersign, Danby.)

The Brigadier-Generals to make returns of the number of teams necessary to furnish their respective divisions with wood, and the teams appointed for each division to be continually employed in the service of that division, and not to be shifted from one division to another, as great confusion arises thereby; some Regiments having a double stock of wood, while others are suffering for want. The Quartermaster-General to provide the teams returned necessary for the above service, and direct the Wagonmaster-General to continue them in that employ.

All persons are strictly prohibited purchasing any clothes from the non-commissioned officers and soldiers. Any person violating this order to be sent prisoner to the main guard, by the Colonel or officer commanding the Regiment the clothes belong to; the clothes to be forthwith delivered up, and the loss sustained to fall upon the purchaser.

PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

Pursuant to an Ordinance of the General Convention, held at Richmond, July 17, 1775, the Freeholders for the County of Prince Edward assembled themselves at the Court-House of the said County, on Monday, the 20th of November, (being Court-day,) in order to elect twenty-one of the most discreet, fit, and able persons, to serve as Committee-Men for the said County; and after having delivered their lists, which were fairly counted, in the presence of so many of the Committee as chose to attend, the majority of the votes appeared in favour of the following persons, viz: Robert Lawson, John Nash, Jr., William Booker, William Bibb, Nathaniel Venable, James Allen, Sr., Thomas Scott, Sr., John Morton, the Rev. Samuel Stanhope Smith, John Nash, Sr., the Rev. Richard Sanket, John Halcombe, Henry Walker, Thomas Flournoy, James Clarke, Obadiah Woodson, David Walker, John Watson, Philemon Halcombe, Joseph Parks, and Andrew Baker, Gentlemen; who are accordingly considered as a Committee for the County aforesaid, publication having been duly made of the same.

John Nash, Sr., Esquire, was unanimously elected Chairman of the said Committee, and Mr. Benjamin Lawson, Clerk.

Resolved, unanimously, That as the assuming to ourselves unlimited powers in our proceedings may be in the end dangerous to, and subversive of, the just rights and privileges of our electors, that we will therefore confine ourselves literally within the line of duty marked out to us by the Continental Congress and the Colonial Convention; whose laws we will endeavour to make the rule of our conduct, and which to fulfil, so far as we can effect, we will exert our most ardent efforts.

This Committee, finding that there is no great prospect of a reconciliation shortly between Great Britain and her American Colonies, from any thing that has as yet transpired to their knowledge, and taking under their most serious consideration the miserable and pitiable state of the people in the interior parts of the Colony, obliged as they are, by the infernal and implacable fury of Lord Dunmore, to forsake their houses and habitations, and fly with precipitation for safety to places more remote from his inhuman aim, do therefore, in commiseration of their unhappy sufferings, hereby beg leave to present their respectful compliments to such of their distressed fellow-creatures; at the same time assuring them, that should they, in those times of peril and distress, find themselves unprovided with a more convenient and comfortable situation, that in such case, humanity, and the laws of hospitality, readily incline them to offer to their service a reasonable part of their property, and they are hereby cordially invited to a participation thereof.

Resolved, unanimously, That the Sub-Committees be vigilant and active, within their respective jurisdictions, in discovering and detecting all inimical or disaffected persons to the American cause, and make information thereof, as speedily as may be, to the Chairman of this Committee.

Resolved, That Mr. Purdie be forthwith furnished with a copy hereof, who is desired to publish the same in his Gazette.

JOHN NASH, Chairman pro tem.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Ticonderoga, November 20, 1775.

SIR: Yesterday I was honoured with your letter of the 9th instant, covering the resolutions of Congress of that date. You will perceive, by my last letters, that I had anticipated part of what Congress gave in charge to the Committee. I shall order the clothing to remain at Albany, as General Montgomery will provide the troops in Canada; and, indeed, the frost is so intense, that if it was necessary to send it to Canada, it is not likely I should be able to get it there, as the intercourse by water will soon cease, unless the weather should speedily turn more mild.

Our Army in Canada is daily reducing; about three hundred of the troops, raised in Connecticut, having passed here within a few days; so that I believe not more than six hundred and fifty or seven hundred, from that Colony, are left. From the different New-York Regiments, about forty are also come away. An unhappy home-sickness prevails. Those mentioned above all came down invalids; not one willing to re-engage for the winter service, and unable to get any work done by them, I discharged them, en groupe. Of all the specifics ever invented for any, there is none so efficacious as a discharge for this prevailing disorder. No sooner was it administered, but it perfected the cure of nine out of ten, who, refusing to wait for boats to go by the way of Fort George, slung their heavy packs, crossed the lake at this place, and undertook a march of two hundred miles with the greatest good-will and alacrity.

Captain Curtis and Captain Horton, to whom I had given enlisting orders, had not yet left the ground when the resolution of Congress came to hand. I have therefore countermanded the orders, and issued others conformable to those of Congress; and have ventured on the additional allowance of one-twelfth of a dollar per day, for billeting money, until they can get to such places where provisions can be issued to them, as the men cannot otherwise be subsisted.

The most scandalous inattention to the publick stores prevails in every part of the Army. The tents are left laying in the boats; axes, kettles, &c., lost; and every thing running into confusion. The only attention that engrosses the minds of the soldiery is, how to get home the soonest possible. Nothing, Sir, will ever put a stop to this shameful negligence, but obliging the officers to pay for what is not accounted for, and let them deduct it out of the men's wages. They cannot think this a hardship, as they were informed by me that every article that was issued to them should be returned into store, or properly accounted for. If they are suffered to do it with impunity this year, it will be the same next.

I am, Sir, with great respect and esteem, your most obedient and very humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., &c.

COLONEL JOSEPH TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, November 20, 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: The disease I have been afflicted with has given such a shock to my constitution as still disables me from travelling to Cambridge, where I want much to be; but sickness must be submitted to. I hope soon, now, to be able to travel, if the weather is tolerable.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. III.

I have been making every necessary preparation, within my department, for the subsistence of the Army, and find I have got a good supply of flour at camp, and on the roads leading thereto; and have now given orders for all to stop twenty miles back from Cambridge and Roxbury, on the different roads, from whence it can be hauled at all times, and in the worst seasons.

I am now also collecting pork and beef, agreeable to direction of Congress, to drive to and within twenty miles of camp, and there to be killed and salted; and have contracted to have it done so as to make the saving to the Continent full equal to my most sanguine expectations. This branch of business will make a heavy demand on the Paymaster, which I hope he is able to answer, as it would give great uneasiness to the farmers not to get their money on the delivery of their cattle and hogs, and me great trouble to have them to pay afterwards. On what your Excellency wrote me, when I drew last to pay my flour contracts, I took the liberty to write to the Delegates for this Colony what sums I should probably want, and the necessity of my being supplied, at the present season, which I hope will forward supplies of cash to the Paymaster, to answer the necessary demands on him. Some considerable sums of cash will be wanted for beef and pork, and to pay up the officers' rations—those of them who are like to leave the service before I can come to camp—and I have directed Mr. Avery to apply to your Excellency for a warrant or warrants, as may be needed. Whatever sums your Excellency has or shall give warrants for, to him, I will be answerable for, and underwrite his receipts on my arrival. I have made out an estimate of the cost of a day's ration,* which is annexed for your Excellency's inspection and approbation, as a rule to pay the officers by.

I am, with the greatest respect and esteem, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

JOSEPH TRUMBULL.

His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO JOSEPH REED.

Camp at Cambridge, November 20, 1775.

DEAR SIR: The hint contained in the last of your letters respecting your continuance in my family, in other words, your wish that I could dispense with it, gives me pain. You already, my dear Sir, know my sentiments on this matter; you cannot but be sensible of your importance to me; at the same time I shall again repeat, what I have observed to you before, that I can never think of promoting my convenience at the expense of your interest and inclination. You can judge that I feel the want of you, when I inform you that the peculiar situation of Mr. Randolph's affairs obliged him to leave this place soon after you did; that Mr. Baylor, contrary to my expectation, is not in the smallest degree a penman, though spirited and willing; and that Mr. Harrison, though sensible, clear, and perfectly confidential, has never yet moved upon so large a scale as to comprehend at one view the diversity of matter which comes before me, so as to afford that ready assistance, which every man in my situation must stand more or less in need of. Mr. Moylan, it is true, is very obliging; he gives me what assistance he can; but other business must necessarily deprive me of his aid in a very short time.

This is my situation; judge you, therefore, how much I wish for your return, especially as the armed vessels, and the capital change in the state of this Army about to take place, have added a new weight to a burden, before too great for me to stand under with the smallest degree of comfort to my own feelings. My mind is now fully disclosed to you, with this assurance sincerely and affectionately accompanying it, that whilst you are disposed to continue with me, I shall think myself too fortunate and happy to wish for a change.

Dr. Morgan, as director of the hospital, is exceedingly wanted at this place, and ought not to delay his departure for the camp a moment—many regulations being deferred, and accounts postponed, till his arrival. The method you have suggested concerning the advanced pay, I very much approve, and would adopt it, but for the unfortunate and cramped state of our treasury, which keeps us forever under the hatches. Pray urge the necessity of this measure to such members as you may converse with, and the want of cash to pay the troops for the months of October and November; as also to answer the demands of the Commissary and Quartermaster, and for contingencies. To do all this, a considerable sum will be necessary. Do not neglect to put that wheel in motion which is to bring us the shirts and medicines from New-York; they are much wanted here, and cannot be had, I should think, upon better terms than on a loan from the best of Kings, so anxiously disposed to promote the welfare of his American subjects.

Dr. Church is gone to Governour Trumbull, to be disposed of in a Connecticut jail, without the use of pen, ink, or paper, to be conversed with in the presence of a Magistrate only, and in the English language. So much for indiscretion, the Doctor will say. Your account of our dependance upon the people of Great Britain, I religiously believe. It has long been my political creed, that the Ministry would not have dared to go on as they did, but under the firmest persuasion that the people were with them. The weather has been unfavourable, however, for the arrival of their transports; only four Companies of the Seventeenth Regiment and two of the Artillery are yet arrived, by our last advices from Boston.

Our privateersmen go on at the old rate, mutinying, if they cannot do as they please. Those at Plymouth, Beverly, and Portsmouth, have done nothing worth mentioning in the prize way, and no accounts are yet received from those farther eastward. Arnold, by a letter which left him the 27th ultimo, had then only got to the Chaudiere Pond, and was scarce of provisions. His rear division, under the command of Colonel Enos, had, without his privity or consent, left him with three Companies; and his expedition, inasmuch as it is to be apprehended that Carleton, with the remains of such force as he had been able to raise, would get into Quebeck before him, I fear is in a bad way. For further particulars I refer you to Mr. Hancock, to whom are enclosed copies of Arnold's and Enos's letters. The last-named person is not yet arrived at this camp.

I thank you for your frequent mention of Mrs. Washington. I expect that she will be in Philadelphia about the time this letter may reach you, on her way hither. As she and her conductor, who I suppose will be Mr. Custis, her son, are perfect strangers to the road, the stages, and the proper places to cross Hudson's River, by all means avoiding New-York, I shall be much obliged by your particular instructions and advice to her. I imagine, as the roads are bad and the weather cold, her stages must be short, especially as I presume her horses will be fatigued, as, when they get to Philadelphia, they will have performed a journey of at least four hundred and fifty miles—my express having found her among her friends near Williamsburgh, one hundred and fifty miles below my own house.

My respectful compliments to Mrs. Reed; and be assured that I am, dear Sir, with affectionate regard, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Joseph Reed.

TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

November 20, 1775.

SIR: As the present seems the suitable season for endeavouring to procure a stock of powder, your Excellency will indulge a few thoughts on this important subject, even though they should not be wholly pertinent. I beg leave to propose to your Excellency's consideration, that a good schooner (a prime sailer) should proceed, as soon as may be, to Havre-de-Grace, in the English Channel, with a suitable person on board, (your agent,) who should, immediately on his arrival there, go to Paris or Versailles, about one hundred and twenty miles, with letters from your Excellency to the Prime Minister of France, requesting an immediate supply of ten thousand barrels (quintals) of powder, with one hundred tons of lead; for the payment of which the Continental Congress will make provision. Your reasons to induce the French Minister to grant this supply will so strongly coincide with the national politicks of France, it seems highly probable he will be glad of the opportunity of supplying or even of giving it, though in some covered way. If your agent succeeds, he can easily procure, under the auspices of the French Minister, five or six vessels (good sailers) of one hundred tons each, to bring the powder and lead from Brest, or whencesoever the same may be shipped. Each of those vessels should have a pilot from the schooner, which, for that purpose, should be doubly manned with the best men; your agent instructing the masters and pilots of the said vessels how to conduct on falling in with our coast. The reason for going to Havre-de-Grace is to have the shortest and directest communication with the French Minister. The same advantage cannot be had so well in Spain, as Madrid is so distant from the sea-port. But another schooner, alike circumstanced, might be sent to Cadiz, and the business, perhaps, negotiated with the Spanish Governour for a like quantity of powder and lead. If not, your agent might proceed to Madrid, about three hundred miles, and settle the business with the Prime Minister, by whose favour he could procure at Cadiz the powder and lead, and vessels necessary to bring them. Your Excellency will probably think that your agent should treat only with principals, as sub-managers are scarcely to be trusted in so important a business. Two schooners, well fitted, manned, &c., might be happily employed in this manner during the winter months. It might procure the freight of the powder on easier terms, if the French and Spanish vessels were allowed to carry off with them American produce. The lead would answer for ballast. The agents should conduct with great circumspection, to prevent their business being even guessed at. Should it be known to the English Consul at Cadiz, or the Ambassador at Madrid or Paris, or through any other channel transpire, the vessels will be stopped or taken by English cruisers, which will be sent to intercept them. If both applications should succeed, and the powder and lead arrive in consequence, the quantity of each will probably be little enough for the ensuing campaign; as Ministry seems to intend it shall be a vigorous and extensive one. Your Excellency knows whether fire-arms, flints, or tinplates for making cartridge-boxes, will be wanting. The same application will probably procure them.

I have the honour to be, with the most perfect regard, Sir, your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servant,

ADDRESS OF THE ROYAL BURGH OF SELKIRK.

Address of the Magistrates and Town Council of the Royal Burgh of Selkirk, presented to His Majesty by Sir James Cockburn, Baronet, their Representative in Parliament.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Magistrates and Town Council of the Royal Burgh of SELKIRK, in Common Council assembled.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, humbly beg leave to approach your throne, with hearts filled with the most grateful acknowledgments for the many blessings we have enjoyed under your Majesty's mild and constitutional Government.

While we thankfully acknowledge these blessings, it is with the utmost abhorrence we observe a most unnatural spirit of disaffection, which has, for some time past, prevailed in several of your Majesty's Colonies in America, and which has now broke out into a daring and open rebellion; a rebellion the more unjustifiable and ungrateful, as being raised against the dignity of your Majesty's crown, and the legislative authority of Great Britain, which has always been anxiously concerned and careful to provide for their safety and security, even at the expense of much blood and treasure.

We beg leave to assure your Majesty, that we, and the whole inhabitants of this Burgh, whom we represent, are ready, with our lives and fortunes, to support all such measures as your Majesty and the wisdom of Parliament shall judge necessary to put a speedy end to this unnatural rebellion, which appears to us to have been greatly fomented and encouraged by the machinations of a seditious and discontented party at home.

That Almighty God may bless your Majesty's Councils, give success to your arms, that a speedy reconciliation may take place among all your subjects, and that you may have a long and prosperous reign, over a free and happy people, is our sincere prayer.

Signed in presence and by appointment of the Town Council of Selkirk, this 21st day of November, 1775 years.

THOMAS CURRER, Chief Magistrate.

ADDRESS OF THE NOBLEMEN, ETC., OF THE COUNTY OF BANFF.

Address of the Noblemen, Freeholders, Justices of the Peace, and Commissioners of the Land-Tax of the County of Banff, transmitted to the Earl of Suffolk, one of His Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, and presented to His Majesty.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Noblemen, Freeholders, Justices of the Peace, and Commissioners of the Land-Tax of the County of BANFF.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Noblemen, Freeholders, Justices of the Peace, and Commissioners of the Land-Tax of the County of Banff, beg leave to approach your royal person, to testify our disapprobation and abhorrence of the conduct of your Majesty's Colonies in America.

We admire your Majesty's moderation and temper, which, while your Majesty exerts that firm and constitutional spirit to subdue, yet still holds forth the benevolence to pardon those who return to duty.

We most humbly assure your Majesty, that we will support your Majesty, to the utmost of our power, in maintaining the authority of the Legislature over every part of the British Dominions.

We pray God to direct your Majesty's Councils and measures, and that your Majesty may long reign over a free, happy, and united people.

Signed in our name, presence, and by our appointment, at Banff, the twenty-first day of November, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five years, by our Præses.

FIFE.

ADDRESS OF THE FREEHOLDERS, ETC., OF THE STEWARTRY OF KIRKCUDBRIGHT.

Address of the Justices of the Peace, Freeholders, and Commissioners of the Land-Tax for the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, in Quarter-Sessions assembled, presented to His Majesty by William Stewart, Esq., Representative in Parliament for the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Justices of the Peace, Freeholders, and Commissioners of the Land-Tax for the Stewartry of KIRKCUDBRIGHT, in Quarter-Sessions assembled.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

Impressed with the deepest sense of the blessings we enjoy under your Majesty's auspicious reign, we cannot help testifying our abhorrence of those attempts which are made to disturb its tranquillity by our rebellious fellow-subjects in North-America.

Warmly attached to our inestimable Constitution, it is our earnest wish that every part of it may be preserved inviolate. To attain this great end, it appears to us an indispensable requisite, that the supremacy of the British Legislature be asserted over every part of the Empire.

With such sentiments as these, we must express our disapprobation of the principles of those men who make British liberty to consist in an undistinguished opposition to every measure of Administration. The fatal effects of a conduct resulting from such principles are now severely felt by the misguided Colonists on the other side of the Atlantic.

We lament and pity the mischiefs which evil counsels, licentiousness, and a factious spirit, have produced among a deluded people. But since conciliatory proposals have been disregarded, and mildness and forbearance construed into timidity, we humbly apprehend that vigorous measures are now become absolutely necessary to bring back these ungrateful children to a proper sense of their duty to their Mother Country. Being fully persuaded that these measures will be such as are consistent with the honour, the dignity, and the liberty of Britons, we will support them with our lives and fortunes.

We cannot conclude without expressing a wish that, undisquieted by faction, and undisturbed by rebellion, your Majesty may long continue to reign over the hearts of your people.

Signed by order and in presence of the Court:

WILLIAM GORDON, Præses.

Kirkcudbright, November 21, 1775.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM WALTER HATTON TO N. COFFIN, RECEIVER-GENERAL AND CASHIER OF HIS MAJESTY'S CUSTOMS AT BOSTON, DATED NORFOLK, NOVEMBER 21, 1775.

It is now, and has been for some time past, an established rule to break open all letters either going from or directed to any officer in the service of the Crown. It was with difficulty, I will assure you, that I now am able to transmit them, as my going from Accomack to this place was opposed by upwards of three hundred people of the County, who will not allow any vessel to come to this place, for fear of supplying the ships of war and other troops with provision; and I am doubtful whether I may not be obliged to take a shelter in some of the ships, or at least on this side the bay, as I expect, during the confused usurpation of power, that an officer of the customs, if he only acts with spirit, or as his duty and oath bind him, that he will immediately fall under the lash of the d—d Committees, &c., who, on such occasions, will show them as little mercy as they themselves may expect in the future world. And as I have, on sundry occasions, opposed their measures, and strove to convince the deluded people of their error, I have, by that means, rendered myself obnoxious to them, and no doubt, if ever in their power, shall have their whole weight of vengeance laid on me. But while I am acting in favour of Government and my own steady principles, I make no doubt but I shall be able, with half their number, to meet them in the field; as I hold it to be an established point, "that those who fight or take up arms against Government are always in dread, and fight to great disadvantage; knowing that they are fighting against their Sovereign, by whom alone they can hope for assistance against their real enemies, and who, out of his grace and favour, has offered them protection from all their foes, and who would be glad to see them return to their duty, and embrace the proffered grace." They know that the halter is round their necks, and, if taken, (which they can do no less than expect,) that they are liable to be trussed up, without any delay; whilst the favourers of Government know the goodness of their cause, and the support that may at any time be given, from the friends thereof, to assist them against all enemies. They also, no doubt, are assured, that if they fall in a glorious and good cause, that they have done their duty, and may expect their reward in a future life. You will be glad, no doubt, to hear, out of so many enemies to Government, that there is some who have courage, even in these hazardous times, to confess the lenient measures used by those in power, and who have sworn allegiance to their lawful Sovereign; amongst which, the inhabitants of Norfolk Town and County, Princess-Anne, Nansemond, &c., stand recorded to, I believe, three thousand and upwards. The late engagement at Kemp's, I believe, has been cause sufficient for numbers who have been constrained to throw off the yoke, and boldly to stand forth and confess themselves friends of Government; numbers having been forced to take up arms against their wills, as has been proved since the late action. God send a happy conclusion to this bad beginning. How long I may stay among them here is uncertain, as I have a design to remove, and have a promise from those in power for a better place, I have reason to expect, somewhat nearer you than this. My letters please direct to the care of Mr. Sprowle, Norfolk, (or Gosport rather,) who will forward them.

CHARLOTTE COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

At a Committee held for Charlotte County, on Tuesday, the 21st of November, 1775:

Mr. Christopher McConnico being desirous to re-establish himself in the good opinion of his countrymen, and remove the charge formerly lodged against him, for refusing to subject his Books to an examination, this day appeared in Committee, and produced his Day-Books and Invoices, for their general inspection. Whereupon, the Committee proceeded to an examination, and found that the said Mr. McConnico had not exceeded the Association in the sales of his Merchandise. At the same time, Mr. McConnico offered, in writing, a Recantation, containing expressions of real concern for his former conduct, in refusing to submit his Books to the inquiry of this Committee; which was deemed satisfactory. Therefore, this Committee have thought proper to advise the publick of their resolution to renew a friendly communication with the said McConnico, acquit him of injurious imputations, and have considered him as now become capable of forming and carrying on commercial intercourse with the good people of this Country. By order of the Committee:

WILLIAM JAMESON, Clerk.

Charlotte County, November 21, 1775.

The Committee of this County, considering the unhappy situation their countrymen in the lower parts of this Colony are reduced to, from the dangerous alarms and piratical depredations committed on their property by Ministerial forces, have unanimously resolved to invite such of their distressed friends as will produce a recommendation from the Committees of their respective Counties, and are obliged to remove from their once peaceable habitations, to come among us, and that we will cheerfully afford them every comfort and necessary accommodation, so far as our circumstances and abilities will extend. By order of the Committee:

WILLIAM JAMESON, Clerk.

LORD STIRLING TO COLONEL MAXWELL.

Princeton, New-Jersey, November 21, 1775.

SIR: In pursuance of an order I have received from the Continental Congress, you are hereby required, as soon as possible, to cause three Companies of your Battalion, with one field-officer, to march through Sussex County, in New-Jersey, to New-Windsor, on Hudson's River, and from thence to proceed to the new fort on said river, in the Highlands, in the Colony of New-York, there to remain, as part of the garrison of said fort. To make this march the more expeditious, as well as convenient, you are requested to send on this service the two Companies raised in Sussex, and one of those raised in Hunterdon County, if these can first be furnished with arms; otherwise, such Companies as can first be so furnished.

Colonel William Maxwell.

STIRLING.

LORD STIRLING TO LIEUTENANT-COLONEL WINDES.

Princeton, New-Jersey, November 21, 1775.

SIR: You are, with three Companies of the Eastern and First Battalion of the Troops in New-Jersey, immediately to march for Haverstraw, in the Province of New-York, and from thence to proceed to the new fort on Hudson's River, in the Highlands, in said Province, and, with these and three Companies of the West-Jersey Battalion, and such other Troops as you will find there, or as shall join you by order of the Continental Congress, to garrison the same. The Companies destined for the service are Captain Morris's and Captain Howell's, of Morris County, or Captain Meeker's, of Essex County; to whom I shall despatch notice to hold themselves in readiness.

STIRLING.

Lieutenant-Colonel Windes.

Draught of a Letter to Governour Trumbull, and another to Mr. Babcock, in answer to their Letters received and read on Tuesday evening last, were laid before this Committee, read, and approved of, and are as follow, viz:

Letter to Governour TRUMBULL:

New-York, November 21, 1775.

SIR: We are favoured with your Honour's letter to Henry Remsen, Esquire, enclosing a vote of your Honour and the Council of Safety, soliciting the loan of some cannon, of the size of eighteen and twenty-four pounders, for the use of the Town of New-Haven. In answer to which, we inform your Honour that we have no cannon of the size you mention, the exclusive property of our constituents, though there are a considerable number lying on the Battery, claimed by the Province; and as our Congress (who are competent to determine upon your application) are about sitting, we have accordingly referred it to them; not doubting but they will cheerfully render you any assistance in their power, consistent with our immediate safety, though we are strongly inclined to believe they will judge it inexpedient to have the cannon removed off the Battery, under present circumstances, from a well-grounded apprehension of the consequence such a measure would be productive of. We are informed there are many heavy cannon lying useless at Ticonderoga: we submit to you whether it would not be expedient to apply to the Continental Congress for liberty to transport from thence to New-Haven any number that Town may have occasion for. Should that fail, we believe, by applying to the New-Jersey Provincial Congress, you may get any number and sizes made you choose, as there were foundries employed last war in that Province for a like purpose.

We are, with great regard, your Honour's most humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

JOHN BROOME, Chairman pro tem.

Letter to ADAM BABCOCK, Esquire:

New-York, November 21, 1775.

SIR: We received your favour 10th current, directed to Henry Remsen, Esquire, requesting the loan of ten pieces of heavy cannon for the defence of your Town. In answer to which, we inform you, that we have no cannon, the exclusive property of our constituents, of the weight you mention, though there are a considerable number lying on our Battery, claimed by the Province; and as our Provincial Congress (who only are competent to determine upon your application) are about sitting, we have referred it to them, and doubt not but they will do all in their power to serve you, consistently with the safety of the Colony; but are strongly inclined to believe they will judge it inexpedient, for the safety of the City, to have them removed, under present circumstances.

We have written his Honour, your Governour, to the above effect, and are your very humble servants.

By order of the Committee.

Ordered, That fair copies be made of them, and transmitted to his Honour and Mr. Babcock, respectively, by the first opportunity.

A Letter from Walter Franklin & Co., requesting a permission from this Committee to load a Sloop with Flour, Ship Bread, Rum, Cider, &c., and send her to Georgia, one of the United Colonies, agreeable to a Resolve of the honourable Continental Congress, was laid before this Committee, and read.

Ordered, That Messrs. Franklin & Co. have permission accordingly, they giving satisfactory security to Messrs. Evert Bancker and Robert Ray, two members of this Committee, in double the value of the said Sloop and cargo, that the said Sloop will proceed (unavoidable accidents excepted) directly to some port in the Province of Georgia, and land the same there, and no where else; and that the Captain of said Sloop, on his return, within convenient time, lay before this or future Committee a certificate, from the Committee of Inspection of Georgia, of his having discharged his said cargo agreeable to the above order; which certificate shall be sufficient to cancel the securities above required.

The examination of Messrs. Thomas Pearsall and Peter T. Curtenius, taken before the Provincial Congress of New-York on the 3d instant, respecting the conduct of Robinson & Price, of this City, merchants, as to the sale of some Blankets, &c., was sent down to this Committee, together with a request from the Congress thereupon, that this Committee would call the said Robinson & Price before them, and make proper inquiries therein.

Ordered, That the said Robinson & Price, and William and Robert Montgomerie, be requested to attend this Committee immediately.

Mr. Robinson attending, and being asked what price he lately sold Pins at, replied, that he had sold them at twenty Shillings per pack, but does not remember certainly to have sold any higher; and furthermore said, that the Pins sold as aforesaid cost him eleven, twelve, to sixteen Shillings per pack.

Mr. Robinson, being called in, produced a Bill of five pieces Blankets, purchased by him of William Moore, of Philadelphia, at eighteen Pounds per piece, Philadelphia money, dated 19th September; that he paid twenty-one Shillings freight for them to this City; that they had left on hand a few Blankets more than Thomas Pearsall bought of them, which cost about eight Pounds per piece; that they bought two pieces of Smith Ramage, at about five Pounds ten Shillings per piece; of Messrs. McFarren & Dunlap, about eight pieces, early last fall; that the Blankets Mr. Pearsall purchased were of those they purchased last fall, as above.

Mr. Simon Cregier declared his wife purchased one pack of Pins of Thomas Gardner, for which she paid thirty Shillings, on Tuesday, the 22d of November, and that said Gardner asked him the same price the day before.

Silvanus Dillingham declares, that his wife purchased Checks of Henry Tenbroeck, at four Shillings per yard, such as used to be sold for one Shilling and ten Pence; that he heard Barnt Christophers, (at Shipyards,) Mr. Harris, (on board a brig at Walton's wharf,) and Thomas Leonard, Sailmaker, declare, that Thomas Gardner went on board the Packet Mercury, at Sandy Hook, and purchased a quantity of Checks and other Goods, and brought them to this City.

Mr. Price says that Pins have been sold out of their store at a higher price than twenty-four Shillings per pack; that he had sold two and a half himself at twenty-four Shillings per pack; that all the Blankets they bought of Smith Ramage, &c., last fall, were sold to a Mr. Stevens, for Boston; that the Blankets sold Mr. Pearsall were of a parcel bought of a person in this Town, at one hundred and forty per cent. advance; that their Pins cost them from eight to twelve Shillings per pack; that a large quantity of the Pins were purchased of a principal merchant in this City, at ten Shillings per pack; that he knows importers have sold them at twenty Shillings, but will not discover who sold them; that Thomas Gardner and Henry Tenbroeck gave nineteen Shillings and six Pence to upwards of twenty Shillings.

Thomas Gardner, being called, says, he bought Pins of Robert Montgomerie at twenty-four Shillings per pack, and from George and William Ludlow from eighteen to twenty-two Shillings per pack; for eighty to ninety packs, twelve Shillings; and four packs, eighteen Shillings; four and a half packs, twenty-two Shillings, about four weeks ago; and that he sold them at twenty-six, twenty-eight, and thirty Shillings per pack.

Resolved, nem. con., That Robinson & Price have violated the Association of the Continental Congress, in selling sundry articles of merchandise at an exorbitant price.

Ordered, That the above Resolve be published immediately.

Ordered, That Joseph Bull, Benjamin Helme, and Abraham De Peyster, be a Committee to prepare the publication of the said matters relative to Robinson & Price, and report the same to the Committee on Friday evening next.

Ordered, That Robert Leonard, Barnt Christophers, and Mr. Harris, be desired to attend this Committee at their next meeting.

George Janeway,

The Committee re-assuming the consideration of Mr. Burling's motion of last night, Mr. Burling agreed to withdraw the same.

Information having been given to the Committee that a number of barrels of Pork was brought down to this City on board of Michael Crow's Boat, the property of one Webb, of Westchester, which was suggested Webb intended to convey on board of the Asia, Man-of-War, to be sent round from thence, to Boston: Upon examining into the matter this evening, it did not appear that Webb intended his Pork for the purposes above suggested; and, therefore,

Ordered, That the persons who had taken possession thereof re-deliver the same to said Webb.

The Committee then resuming the consideration of Mr. Thomas Gardner's conduct as to the sale of sundry of his Goods at an exorbitant price, contrary to the ninth article of the General Association, and also as to the information given to the Committee, of his having purchased Pins, &c., from on board the Packet, &c.: upon examining Mr. Isaac Mott, touching the above charges, he declares that Gardner bought of a Packet's man (as this examinant was informed by the Packet's man) a number of packs of Pins, enough to pay for four hogsheads of Rum; that the day before the sale of the Pins to Gardner, they had been offered for sale to this examinant by the said Packet's man, and that this examinant refused to purchase them; that the said Packet's man informed the examinant that the voyage before the last he had sold to Gardner Pins at four Shillings and six Pence per pound, and about a month ago he sold Gardner a quantity of Pins at ten Shillings per pound.

Ordered, That the consideration of the subject-matters relating to Mr. Gardner be deferred to the next meeting of this Committee.

Ordered, also, That Mr. William Ludlow, who attended here this night, according to the request of this Committee of last night, be further requested to give his attendance here again at the next meeting of this Committee.

Mr. De Peyster, from the Sub-Committee appointed on the evening of the 22d instant, to draw a draught of an advertisement respecting Robinson & Price, reported a draught accordingly; which, being read, was approved of.

Ordered, therefore, That a fair copy be made thereof, and signed by the Chairman, and that the same be advertised in Mr. Gaine's next Monday's Gazette.

Peter Harris and —, two of the prisoners ordered under confinement to Mr. Foster Lewis's, for enlisting Men for the Ministerial Army at Boston, having made their escape last night; and it being suggested to the Committee that their escape was effected by the misconduct of Captain Christopher Benson and some of his Company, who were on guard last night; and, likewise, that some of Captain Benson's Company assisted personally in carrying the said prisoners off: The Committee therefore went into the examination of the matter, by taking the information of the following persons, to wit:

James Taylor, who declares that he belongs to Captain Benson's Company; that Mr. Leonard, Sergeant in said Company, sent him, John Kelley, and Leonard's apprentice boy, with some others, to guard the prisoners at Mr. Foster Lewis's last night, between twelve and one o'clock; that after they had been at Lewis's a little while, he, this examinant, desired the said John Kelley and the others to take their muskets, (which they had placed, when they first came to Lewis's, in one of the corners of the room,) and do their duty; that he, this examinant, took his, and stood sentry, but that the others refused to do any thing; that this examinant and the others of the guard at Lewis's differed very much in opinion; that they differed and disputed the whole time they were there together; that between two and three o'clock in the morning the examinant left Lewis's, and went home, without waiting to be relieved, and that after he went away the prisoners escaped; that the reason he went away was, because the others of the guard were all against him, and would not take their muskets and guard the prisoners.

Lewis De Bois declares, on his examination, that John Kelley, who was one of the sentinels on guard last night at Lewis's, when the prisoners made their escape, told him, this examinant, the day before, at the hospital, that if he, the said Kelley, was to be on guard at Lewis's that night ensuing, he (Kelley) would let the prisoners escape; and this morning, when Kelley awoke, and was told that the prisoners were gone, he replied, he thought of what he said yesterday.

Joseph Meeks, upon his examination, says, that he belongs to Captain Benson's Company; that he, this examinant, was of the guard last night; that about three o'clock in the morning, John Warner declared that it was a damned shame those three men at Lewis's should be confined; that he (Warner) had a boat ready, and had or would get, this examinant cannot recollect which, four men, who would take away the three prisoners; that Warner was in a great passion when he made the above declaration; and that Warner further said to this examinant, that he, this examinant, might rescue the prisoners if he pleased; that Captain Benson was present, and must have heard all that Warner said, but that Benson was silent, and looked Warner full in the face, and spoke not a word; that there was, during the evening, a great number of visitors at the guard room, such as the two Brownejohns, Norris the Barber, Burns the Barber, and many more.

Edward Meeks, upon his examination, declares, that he, as one of Benson's Company, was at the guard room last night; that during the first part of the evening there was an uncommon number of visitors and strangers continually coming in and going out of the guard room, most of whom he did not know; that among the persons who were not of the guard, and who he knew, were William Brownejohn and Thomas Brownejohn, Thomas William Moore the Vendue Master, Winterton the Mason, Isaac Herron the Watch-Maker, and John Norris the Barber; that these persons, with Captain Benson, sat drinking in the guard room; that during the whole night no picket was set out, or any sentry placed, as was customary, on the Battery; and that upon this examinant asking Captain Benson the reason thereof, he gave this examinant no answer, but attended only to the conversation that passed among the above Company; that most if not all their conversation turned upon the subject of the times, and was very scurrilous as to the transaction of depriving Rivington of his types; that this examinant and the abovementioned Herron disputed a considerable deal the conduct of the Ministry; and that he, this examinant, observed, that he believed it was the intention of the Ministry to establish Popery in all the Dominions, and that Popery was certainly the bottom of all their schemes, which Herron denied was the case; but that when this examinant further observed of its being established in Canada, Herron replied, that he thought it was very right Popery should be established in Canada, and moreover added, that arming the Roman Catholics in Ireland was also very right, and he approved of it; that Captain Benson sent out no guard, nor appeared to care any thing about the business of the night; and the time while this examinant was at the guard room was mostly taken up by Captain Benson and his Company abusing and damning Isaac Sears and several other persons for a pack of scoundrels; that this examinant left the guard room about two o'clock, finding that nothing was to be done; that Benson gave John Warner and James Leonard leave to go out about twelve o'clock, and that they remained out about two hours.

John Taylor, another of Captain Benson's Company, at the guard room last night, says, upon his examination, that he heard John Warner, between five and six o'clock in the morning, and before it was known that the prisoners had escaped, say, that there was a boat ready to carry off the prisoners, and that he (Warner) would assist in carrying them off; that last night he, as Sergeant, wanted some of the men to turn out on guard, and asked them all round, in the presence of Captain Benson, to go out, and that they respectively denied, and would not go, except three men, two of whom he left at the guns as a guard.

After hearing the whole of the above testimony, a motion was made by Mr. McDougall, and seconded by Mr. Sands, in the words following, viz:

Mr. Chairman: I move that a Sub-Committee be immediately appointed, to take a file of the guard with them, to seize and apprehend John Kelley, John Warner, and Robert Leonard's apprentice, who was last night on guard; and if the doors of their residence be not opened at the request of the Sub-Committee, that they be authorized to break them open.

Mr. Brinckerhoff then moved, seconded by Mr. Denning, that the following words, to wit: "and if the doors of the residence be not opened at the request of the Sub-Committee, to search the houses for them, that the Sub-Committee be authorized to break them open," be struck out of Mr. McDougall's motion. And debates arising upon Mr. Brinckerhoff's motion, the question being put, it was carried in the affirmative.

The question then being put upon Colonel McDougall's motion as amended, it was unanimously agreed to by the Committee.

Ordered, therefore, That Mr. Denning, Mr. Brinckerhoff, Mr. Dennis, Mr. De Peyster, Major Abeel, Captain Johnson, Mr. Breasted, and Mr. Wickham, be a Sub-Committee to apply immediately to the officer on guard for a file of Men, and repair with them to the lodgings of John Warner, John Kelley, and Robert Leonard's apprentice, and them respectively apprehend, and keep in safe custody until further orders from this Committee.

Ordered, That Abraham W. De Peyster, Benjamin Kissam, and John Berrian, be a Sub-Committee to draught and report, without delay, a Petition to the Provincial Congress, praying them to take into their serious consideration some expedient to prevent the inhabitants of any of the neighbouring Colonies coming into this, to direct the public affairs of it, or to destroy the property or invade the liberty of its inhabitants, without the direction of the Continental or Provincial Congresses, or the Committee of Safety, or the Committee of the County into which such inhabitants may come, or of the Continental Generals, unless there should be an invasion made into this Colony.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO THEIR DELEGATES IN CONGRESS.

In Committee of Safety at Portsmouth, November 21, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: The Committee of Supplies, and others concerned in supplying and paying our Troops, have not as yet been able to close their accounts in such a manner as that we could make out the Colony account against the Continent. We have proceeded so far as to be sure that supplying and paying our Troops in the Continental Army under General Washington, to the 4th of August, with what we advanced to those gone in Colonel Arnold's detachment, and those now in Canada, under the command of General Schuyler, will amount to upwards of twenty thousand Pounds, lawful money.

To avoid the necessity of emitting more paper money for our own internal charges, we desire you would request the honourable Congress to make us a grant of such a part of the aforesaid sum as they shall see fit, and our accounts shall be transmitted, as soon as a settlement can be made with the persons who have transacted the business.

The numbers of the inhabitants in the several Towns in this Colony, directed by our Congress to be taken by the several and respective Selectmen, and returned under oath, has chiefly been complied with. We send you enclosed the list as returned, except those where only the column for the sum total are filled up, which not being returned, we have set down by the best information we could obtain, and are confident we have done it very near the true number. However, shall forward those wanting when they come to hand, (which we daily expect,) that the whole may be completed by the Selectmen's returns.

By order of the Committee:

WILLIAM WHIPPLE, Chairman.

To Josiah Bartlett and John Langdon, Esqs.

ORDER IN COUNCIL.

St. James's, November 25, 1775.

At the Court at St. James's, the 22d day of November, 1775. Present: The King's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

Whereas the time limited by His Majesty's Orders in Council, of the 23d of August and 27th of September last, for prohibiting the exporting out of this Kingdom, or carrying coastwise, Gunpowder, Saltpetre, or any sort of Arms or Ammunition, will expire on the 23d of this instant, November; and whereas it is judged expedient that the said prohibition should be continued for some time longer, except in those cases where, for the benefit and advantage of trade, and for the use and defence of ships trading to foreign parts, His Majesty, by his several Orders in Council of the 13th and 27th of October last, and of the 6th of this instant, has thought proper to permit and allow the exportation of, and carrying coastwise, Gunpowder, Saltpetre, Arms, and Ammunition, under certain conditions and restrictions mentioned in the said orders: His Majesty doth therefore, by and with the advice of his Privy Council, hereby order, require, prohibit, and command, that no person or persons whatsoever (except the Master-General, Lieutenant-General, or principal officers of the Ordnance, for His Majesty's service) do at any time, during the space of three months, to commence from the said 23d of this instant, November, presume to transport into any parts out of this Kingdom, or carry coastwise, any Gunpowder, Saltpetre, or any sort of Arms or Ammunition, on board any ship or vessel, in order to transporting the same into any parts beyond the seas, or carrying the same coastwise, except in the cases comprised within the aforementioned Orders in Council of the 13th and 27th of October last, and 6th of this instant, November, without leave or permission in that behalf first obtained from His Majesty, or his Privy Council, upon pain of incurring and suffering the respective forfeitures and penalties inflicted by an act passed in the 29th year of his late Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act to empower His Majesty to prohibit the exportation of Saltpetre, and to enforce the law for empowering His Majesty to prohibit the exportation of Gunpowder, or any sort of Arms and Ammunition; and also to empower His Majesty to restrain the carrying coastwise of Saltpetre, Gunpowder, or any sort of Arms or Ammunition." And the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury, the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of Great Britain, the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, the Master-General of the Ordnance, and His Majesty's Secretary at War, are to give the necessary directions herein as to them may respectively appertain.

W. BLAIR.

ADDRESS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE.

Address of the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge, presented to His Majesty by the Rev. Richard Farmer, D. D., the Vice Chancellor.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of CAMBRIDGE.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's most loyal and faithful subjects, the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge, in full Senate assembled, think it our duty, at this alarming crisis, to approach your throne with the deepest and most grateful sense of the many blessings which, through the dispensation of the Divine Providence, we have participated with our fellow-subjects, under your Majesty's auspicious reign.

Anxious for the continuance of those blessings in every part of your Majesty's Dominions, and animated with the warmest loyalty and affection for your royal person and Government, we cannot remain silent spectators of the unnatural rebellion into which many of our brethren in your Majesty's American Colonies have been unhappily seduced. We see their delusion with equal indignation and concern; we disclaim the opinions on which they proceed, as destructive of the happiest Constitution that hath ever existed in the history of mankind, and subversive of all order and good Government; yet we pity their infatuation, and lament the miseries which it is necessarily bringing upon them.

Relying with full confidence on your Majesty's wisdom and paternal tenderness, and convinced that you will pursue every method, consistent with the dignity of Government and the preservation of the Constitution, to prevent, as much as possible, the effusion of blood, and to restore due obedience and peace, we fervently implore Heaven to bless your Majesty's Councils with success; so that the crown and dominions of this realm may be transmitted with undiminished lustre to your Majesty's remotest posterity.

ADDRESS OF THE BOROUGH OF HUNTINGDON.

Address of the Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen, Burgesses, and Inhabitants of the Borough of Huntingdon, presented to His Majesty by George Wombwell, Esq., one of their Representatives in Parliament, accompanied by the Earl of Sandwich, Recorder of the said Borough, and Lord Viscount Hinchinbrook, one of the Aldermen.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen, Burgesses, and Inhabitants of the Borough of HUNTINGDON.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen, Burgesses, and Inhabitants of the Borough of Huntingdon, beg leave most humbly to approach your royal person, to offer to your Majesty our most grateful acknowledgments for the wise measures you have taken to enforce the legislative authority of the Parliament of Great Britain over all your extensive Dominions. To beseech your Majesty to use every constitutional effort to bring your rebellious subjects in America to acknowledge their past errors, and to submit to that legal authority which they have dared to resist, with the most unprovoked and violent outrages.

Our offer of contributing aid towards reducing the Colonies to obedience, by desiring your Majesty to dispose of our lives and fortunes, is, we are sensible, but of very little importance to the completion of so great a work; but we can only offer our all; and we flatter ourselves that we may say with truth, that none of your Majesty's subjects exceed us in loyalty to your sacred person, or in abhorrence of the vile machinations of those disturbers of the publick tranquillity, who, by various means, have given encouragement to the deluded Colonists to hope for success in what we are convinced is their principal object, the establishing themselves in an independency of the Mother Country.

ADDRESS OF THE FREEHOLDERS, ETC., OF THE COUNTY OF SUTHERLAND.

Address of the Freeholders, Justices of the Peace, and Commissioners of Supply of the County of Sutherland, transmitted to the Earl of Suffolk, one of His Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, and presented to His Majesty.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Freeholders, Justices of the Peace, and Commissioners of Supply of the County of SUTHERLAND.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Freeholders, Justices of the Peace, and Commissioners of Supply of the County of Sutherland, sensible that under your mild and equitable Administration we, among other blessings, enjoy every species of liberty compatible with the existence of society, beg leave to assure your Majesty, that none can hold in greater detestation and abhorrence than we do, the unnatural behaviour of your subjects in America, who have raised the unprovoked standard of rebellion against your gracious Government and the legal authority of Parliament. With the deepest concern we see, that their obstinacy and contempt of the lenity exercised towards them by your Majesty's humanity and aversion to bloodshed, render the most vigorous measures absolutely necessary for reducing their rebellious spirit; and we assure your Majesty that we, and the other inhabitants of this most loyal County, are all ready, with our lives and fortunes, to support your Majesty in all such measures as the wisdom of your Parliament may find necessary for quelling this rebellion, and for securing and preserving the just and constitutional rights of Great Britain over all her Colonies.

By order and in presence of the meeting:

JAMES SUTHERLAND, Præses.

Dornock, November, 22, 1775.

NANSEMOND COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

At a Committee held for Nansemond County, at the house of John Aspray, in Suffolk Town, on Wednesday, the 22d of November, 1775, present: Willis Riddick, Chairman, and eleven Members.

Betsy Hunter being summoned to appear before this Committee, for writing certain Letters to her mother and brother, (John Hunter, of Norfolk.) informing them of the situation of our guards in this County, that the people were in arms at Suffolk and Smithfield, and that our Troops were crossing the river on their march down here, and many other matters of importance, the said Betsy Hunter appeared, and said, that she did not intend them as letters of intelligence, but wrote them for her amusement. The Committee having heard the Letters read, are of opinion, that they were intended as letters of intelligence, and inimical to the American cause.

Ordered, therefore, That the said Betsy Hunter, with Mary and Martha Wilkinson, (who were privy to and assisting in the said Letters, and were also summoned to appear before this Committee,) be advertised in the public papers, and looked on as enemies to America.

LEMUEL GODWIN, Clerk.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read December 7, 1775.]

Ticonderoga, November 22, 1775, 9 o'clock, A. M.

SIR: I sent off the express about noon to-day, who brought me your favour of the 9th. Since his departure, I received a letter from General Montgomery, enclosing a copy of one from Colonel Arnold. Copies of both I do myself the honour to transmit you.

If General Carleton had reached Quebec before Colonel Arnold, it is probable the latter might have met with more difficulties than he expected, from the re-enforcement the former carried with him; but I hope, by this time, that our troops are in barracks at Quebec.

Colonel Arnold's march does him great honour. Some future historian will make it the subject of admiration to his readers.

I wish I could return boats, agreeable to General Montgomery's request; but I am almost left alone.

I am, Sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,
PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., &c.

November 23. The frost has been so severe last night, that the lake, as far down towards Crown Point as we can see, which is about three miles, is entirely closed.

GENERAL MONTGOMERY TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Montreal, November 17, 1775.

MY DEAR GENERAL: With great pleasure I transmit you a letter from Colonel Arnold, for General Washington, together with the copy of his letter to me.

Colonel Easton has six guns mounted on shore—three twelve-pounders, one nine-pounder, and two sixes—at the Sorel, and the two row-galleys. Mr. Carleton, with his eleven sail, has not yet been able to pass him by. Indeed, Easton has obliged him twice to weigh anchor and remove higher up the river. I am making all despatch to attack him on my side, with field artillery, mounted in batteaus.

I have had great difficulty about the troops. I am afraid many of them will go home. However, depending on my good fortune, I hope to keep enough to give the final blow to Ministerial politicks in this Province, as I hope effectual measures will be taken to prevent their laying hold of it again.

I must beg the boats may be sent back, if possible, which take up the discharged men. Some of them might be left at Point-au-Fer. I am exceedingly hurried, and have not done half my business with you. I shall establish a post, which will set out next Monday for Ticonderoga. Will you appoint a postmaster there?

May you enjoy better health. I am, &c.,

RICHARD MONTGOMERY.

To General Schuyler.

COLONEL ARNOLD TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

St. Mary's, four leagues from Point Levi, }
November 7, 1775. }

DEAR SIR: I wrote you the 13th of October, from the Dead River, advising you of my being there with a large detachment of the American Army, and that I expected to reach Quebec in about a fortnight. The badness of the roads and weather prevented making the despatch I expected, and I am but just arrived here. Near one-third of the detachment returned from the Dead River short of provisions; the remainder are here, or within two days' march, and in good spirits. My letter of the 13th I sent by an Indian, who I believe has betrayed me, and given it up to some of the King's officers, as I find they have been some time apprized of our coming, and prepared to receive us, and I have received no answer. The canoes belonging to the French people on this side the river are all taken away or destroyed, to prevent our passing. This inconvenience is obviated, as we have those of our own. I am informed there are two frigates lying before Quebec. We have been very kindly received by the inhabitants, who appear very friendly, and willing to supply us with provisions. I intend crossing the St. Lawrence, if possible, in two or three days, and, if practicable, to attack the City; though I am fearful of their being re-enforced from Montreal, which may possibly put it out of my power; in which case I intend to march for Montreal, where I hope, if you have not already taken possession, I shall have the pleasure of seeing you. I make no doubt of every advice and assistance in your power.

I am, dear Sir, very respectfully, your most humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To General Schuyler.

COLONEL ARNOLD TO GENERAL MONTGOMERY.

St. Marie, two-and-a-half leagues from Point Levi, }
November 8, 1775. }

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 29th ult. I received at ten o'clock this morning, which gave me much pleasure. I heartily congratulate you on your success thus far. I think you have great reason to be apprehensive for me, the time I mentioned to General Washington being so long since elapsed. I was not then apprized, or, indeed, apprehensive of one half the difficulties we had to encounter, of which I cannot, at present, give you a particular detail. Can only say we have hauled our batteaus up over falls, up rapid streams, over carrying places, and marched through morasses, thick woods, and over mountains, about three hundred and twenty miles, many of which we had to pass several times to bring over our baggage. These difficulties the soldiers have, with the greatest fortitude, surmounted; and about two-thirds of the detachment are happily arrived here, and within two days' march, most of them in good health and high spirits. The other part, with Col. Enos, returned from Dead River, contrary to my expectation, he having orders to send back only the sick, and those that could not be furnished with provisions. I wrote General Schuyler the 13th of October, (by an Indian I thought trusty,) enclosed to my friend in Quebec; and as I have had no answer from either, and he pretends to have been taken sick at Quebec, I make no doubt he has betrayed his trust, which I am confirmed in, as I find they have been some time apprized of our coming in Quebec, and have destroyed all the canoes at Point Levi, to prevent our passing. This difficulty will be obviated by birch canoes, as we have about twenty of them, with forty savages, who have joined us, and profess great friendship, as well as the Canadians, by whom we have been very friendly received, and who will be able to furnish us with a number of canoes. I am informed, by the French, there are two frigates and several small armed vessels lying before Quebec, and a large ship or two lately arrived from Boston. However, I propose crossing the St. Lawrence as soon as possible; and if any opportunity offers, of attacking Quebec with success, I shall embrace it; otherwise, shall endeavour to join your Army at Montreal. I shall, as often as in my power, advise you of my proceedings, and beg the favour of hearing from you by every opportunity.

The enclosed letter to his Excellency General Washington, beg the favour of your forwarding by express.

I am, very respectfully, dear Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

BENEDICT ARNOLD.

To General Montgomery.

P. S. Since writing the above, I have seen a friend from Quebec, who informs me a frigate of twenty-six guns, and two transports, with one hundred and fifty recruits, arrived from St. John's, Newfoundland, last Sunday; which, with the inhabitants who have been compelled to take up arms, amount to about three hundred men; that the French and English inhabitants, in general, are on our side, and that the City is short of provisions. I shall endeavour to cut off their communication with the country, and make no doubt, if no more recruits arrive, to bring them to terms soon, or at least keep them in close quarters until your arrival here, which I await with impatience; but if St. John's should not have surrendered, and you can possibly spare a Regiment this way, I think the City must, of course, fall into our hands.

B. A.

Point Levi, November 13, 1775.

DEAR SIR: The foregoing is a copy of my last, by the two Indians you sent by express the 29th ult., who, I hear this moment, are taken five leagues above this; since which, I have waited two or three days for the rear to come up, and in preparing ladders, &c. The winds have been so high these three nights, that I have not been able to cross the river. I have near forty canoes ready; and, as the wind has moderated, I design crossing this evening. The Hunter, sloop, and Lizard, frigate, lie opposite, to prevent us, but make no doubt I shall be able to avoid them. I this moment received the agreeable intelligence (via Sorel) that you are in possession of St. John's, and have invested Montreal. I can give no intelligence, save that the merchant ships are busy, day and night, in loading, and four have already sailed. I am yours, &c.,

BENEDICT ARNOLD.

To General Montgomery.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Ticonderoga, November 22, 1775.

I have the happiness, my dear General, to enclose you a letter from Colonel Arnold, and a copy of one of his to General Montgomery, with a copy of that gentleman's to me. Whatever may be Colonel Arnold's fate at Quebeck, his merit is very great, in marching such a body of troops through a country scarcely trodden by human foot. May Heaven still continue to smile on our arms, until we have obtained that justice which is so justly our due.

I momentarily expect a Committee of Congress. The gentlemen left Philadelphia on the 11th instant.

I lament that I cannot return any boats to St. John's, as I am left almost alone here. Nothing can surpass the impatience of the troops, from the New-England Colonies, to get to their firesides. Near three hundred of them arrived a few days ago, unable to do any duty. But as soon as I administered that grand specifick, a discharge, they instantly acquired health, and, rather than be detained a few days to cross Lake George, they undertook a march from here of two hundred miles with the greatest alacrity.

Our Army requires to be put on quite a different footing. Gentlemen in command find it very disagreeable to coax, to wheedle, and even to lie, to carry on the service. Habituated to order, I cannot without the most extreme pain see that disregard of discipline, confusion, and inattention, which reigns so general in this quarter, and am therefore determined to retire. Of this resolution I have advised Congress.

I am, dear Sir, with the most unfeigned sentiments of esteem and respect, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

General Washington.

COLONEL ARNOLD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Point Levi, November 8, 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: My last letter was of the 27th ultimo, from Chaudiere Pond, advising your Excellency that as the detachment were short of provisions, by reason of losing many of our batteaus, I had ordered Colonel Enos to send back the sick and feeble, and those of his division who could not be supplied with fifteen days' provisions, and that I intended proceeding the next day, with fifteen men, to Sartigan, to send back provisions to the detachment. I accordingly set out the 28th, early in the morning, and descended the river, amazingly rapid and rocky for about twenty miles, where we had the misfortune to stove three of our batteaus and lose their provisions, &c., but happily no lives. I then divided the little provisions left, and proceeded on with the two remaining batteaus and six men, and very fortunately reached the French inhabitants the 30th, at night, who received us in the most hospitable manner, and sent off early the next morning a supply of fresh provisions, flour, &c., to the detachment, who are all happily arrived (except one man drowned, one or two sick, and Colonel Enos's division, who, I am surprised to hear, are all gone back,) and are here and within two or three days' march. I have this minute received a letter from Brigadier-General Montgomery, advising of the reduction of Chambly, &c.

I have had about forty savages joined me, and intend, as soon as possible, crossing the St. Lawrence. I am just informed, by a friend from Quebeck, that a frigate of twenty-six guns, and two transports with one hundred and fifty recruits, arrived there last Sunday, which, with another small frigate, and four or five small armed vessels up the river, is all the force they have, except the inhabitants, very few of whom have taken up arms, and those by compulsion, who declare (except a few English) that they will lay them down whenever attacked. The Town is very short of provisions, but well fortified. I shall endeavour to cut off their communication with the country, and which I hope to be able to effect, and bring them to terms, or at least keep them in close quarters until the arrival of General Montgomery, which I wait with impatience. I hope at any rate to be able to effect a junction with him at Montreal.

I am, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

BENEDICT ARNOLD.

His Excellency General Washington.

Point Levi, November 13, 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: The foregoing is a copy of my last of the 8th instant, by an express sent me by General Montgomery, who, I am this moment informed, was taken fifteen leagues above this, on his return. I have waited three days for the rear to come up, and in preparing scaling ladders, &c.

The wind has been so high these three nights that I have not been able to cross the river, but is now moderated, and intend crossing this evening, with about forty canoes; to prevent which, the Hunter, sloop, and Lizard, frigate, lie opposite; however, expect to be able to evade them. I have received the agreeable intelligence that St. John's is in our hands, and Montreal invested. The merchant ships in the harbour (about fifteen) are loading day and night, and four already sailed.

I am, very respectfully, your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servant,

BENEDICT ARNOLD.

His Excellency General Washington.

CONNECTICUT COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Wednesday, November 22, 1775.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, at Lebanon, present:

His Honour the Governour, Jabez Huntington, William Williams, Nathaniel Wales, Jedediah Elderkin, Joshua West, Benjamin Huntington, Esquires.

His Honour laid before us many Letters and Answers from the Congress, General Washington, General Schuyler, &c.

Dr. Church having arrived in this Town yesterday, sent by General Washington, under guard of Captain Putnam, a Sergeant, and seven men, pursuant to a Resolve of the General Congress of the following tenor, (enclosed by said General,) viz:

"Philadelphia, November 6, 1775.

"Resolved, That Dr. Church be closely confined in some secure Jail in the Colony of Connecticut, without the use of pen, ink, and paper, and that no person be allowed to converse with him, except in the presence and hearing of a Magistrate of the Town, or the Sheriff of the County where he shall be confined, and in the English language, until further orders from this or a future Congress.

"By order of Congress:

JOHN HANCOCK, President."Attest: CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

And underwritten:

"SIR: In consequence of the above resolve, I now transmit to your care Dr. Church, under the guard of Captain Israel Putnam, a Sergeant, and seven men. You will please to comply in every particular with the above Resolution of Congress.

"I am, with great respect, Sir, your most humble and obedient servant,

"GEORGE WASHINGTON."

The foregoing being laid before this Board, for advice, &c., on consideration, Voted and Resolved, That said Dr. Church be committed to and confined, and kept in the same manner as ordered by said Congress, in the Jail in Norwich, in the County of New-London, until further orders from said Congress and this Board. (And order is given accordingly.)

On motion and request by Letters from the Committee of New-Haven and Norwalk, and consideration of their circumstances, &c.,

Voted, That six hundred weight of Powder be sent to New-Haven, to the care of Colonel Jonathan Fitch, &c., and that he send two hundred weight of it to the said men and Committee of Inspection at Norwalk, to be considered as Colony stock, and subject to the orders of this Board; and that the said Powder be taken from Saybrook, where it is lodged for the use of the Brig Minerva.

On motion and request from the Town of New-Haven, &c., on consideration, Voted and Resolved, That the men or Companies raised for the protection or defence of said New-Haven, and also those so raised for the defence of New-London, Stonington, and Lyme, whose term would expire on the 1st of December next, be continued to the next session of the General Assembly, or until further orders from this Board.

The Congress of New-York being moved and directed by the General Congress to provide and establish proper and expeditious ways of conveying intelligence in case of any alarm, or invasion, &c., by Beacons, or Posts, &c.; and they moving us to come into similar methods with them, &c.,

Voted, That His Honour the Governour be desired to write to and employ sundry proper persons in the western Towns of this Colony, to engage and provide proper persons, to be in readiness at a minute's warning, to carry any intelligence of alarm or invasion to every proper Town and place, as occasion may require; and that he be also desired to advise the honourable Congress of New-York of this provision.

Colonel Elderkin, having been heretofore appointed, &c., laid in his Report about fortifying at the Harbour of New-London, recommending the same to be done at Mammicoch, Winthrop's Point, and Groton Hill, stating the circumstances, &c., of each.

And thereupon, Voted, That the men stationed at and for the defence of New-London be employed, during their continuance in said service, in erecting and making proper works of defence, in or at the Harbour of said New-London, either at Groton Hill, Winthrop's Point or Mammicoch, that is to say, at such one or more of said places as can be best undertaken and completed in this advanced season of the year, under the direction and conduct of Colonel Saltonstall, Ebenezer Ledyard, Esq., Captain John Deshon, Mr. Nathaniel Shaw, Jun., and Mr. Park Avery, all of New-London and Groton, and Mr. Josiah Watrous, now residing in Windham: that is, the works at Mammicoch to be done with the consent of said Mr. Shaw, who owns the soil where, &c.

On motion and consideration, Voted, That his Honour be desired, in the name and behalf of this Council and Colony, to move and request of the honourable Continental Congress for liberty and order to receive a number not exceeding fifty Cannon, from thirty-two to twelve-pounders, some brass, if it may be, from St. John's, or any other Northern posts lately fallen into the hands of the Continental Army, where they can be spared; to be improved for the defence of New-London, in this Colony, a place and port of great importance for the safety of said Colony, and very capable of defence, and where works are now erecting, but cannot be supplied with Cannon in any other way that can be devised, and for any other use for the protection and safety of the Colony.

Voted, That it be recommended to the honourable County Court of New-London County, that they immediately cause to be erected and built a proper and sufficient yard or fence round and enclosing the Jail, or part of it, at Norwich, so as effectually to prevent any communication from without with any Prisoner committed there; and which is more immediately and especially necessary in order to comply with the requisition of the honourable Continental Congress and General Washington, respecting Dr. Church, who is now in this Town, and by order of the Governour and this Council to be committed there.

And adjourned.

Thursday, November 23, 1775.

At a meeting as aforesaid, present:

His Honour the Governour, Honourable Deputy-Governour Griswold, Jabez Huntington, Samuel Huntington, William Williams, Nathaniel Wales, Esquires.

On motion by the Governour, respecting the disposition of the Prisoners sending to this Colony from St. John's, Voted and Ordered, That the Committee to take care of Prisoners be directed to receive said Prisoners, and distribute them in suitable proportions in the Counties of Litchfield, Hartford, and Windham, for the present; and that they give the preference as to choice and convenience of situation, if any be, to the Officers, &c., of the Twenty-Sixth Regiment, and especially Major Preston; and that they also have regard to the places of assigning mechanicks who may be among the soldiers, so as they may most beneficially employ themselves; and take care that families, if such there be, be not separated. And that said Committee use their prudence and caution in placing the Officers so as the least probable inconvenience may arise from their situation.

Moved by Captain Deshon, That Captain Niles, of the Armed Schooner Spy, informs that there is a Vessel at Sag-Harbour, Long-Island, loading with Provisions, &c., said to be bound to Nantucket, without any proper permit, and is suspected to be designed for the use of the Ministerial Troops. And that he desires direction whether he shall prevent her, &c.

Ordered, That a copy of a Resolve of the Continental Congress, respecting the exportation of Provisions from any of the United Colonies, &c., passed about the 6th of November, instant, be sent to said Niles, for his direction.

It being represented that several Prisoners from Chamblly, or thereabouts, of the inhabitants of Canada, now at Farmington, are turbulent and disorderly, and refuse to give their parole to abide faithful Prisoners, and say they will escape, unless imprisoned, &c., and it is suspected they wish to be imprisoned, they may complain of hard usage, and affect the minds of their Canadian brethren, &c.,

Ordered and Agreed, That the Committee for Prisoners have and cause to be kept a special and vigilant watch over those persons, so as to prevent their escape, even if some extra expense should be incurred thereby. And that they give proper notice of their apprehensions of the designed escape of those persons, describing them, &c., to such Towns and places as they shall judge expedient, and request that they keep out a vigilant eye, to prevent the execution of such design.

And dismissed.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM GENERAL MONTGOMERY TO
ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON.

Montreal, November, 1775.

For the good fortune which has hitherto attended us, I am, I hope, sufficiently thankful; but this very fortune, good as it has been, will become a serious and insurmountable evil, should it lead Congress either to overrate our means, or to underrate the difficulties we have yet to contend with. I need not tell you that, till Quebeck is taken, Canada is unconquered; and that, to accomplish this, we must resort to siege, investment, or storm. The first of these is out of the question, from the difficulty of making trenches in a Canadian winter, and the greater difficulty of living in them, if we could make them; secondly, from the nature of the soil, which, as I am at present instructed, renders mining impracticable, and, were this otherwise, from the want of an engineer having sufficient skill to direct the process; and, thirdly, from the fewness and lightness of our artillery, which is quite unfit to break walls like those of Quebeck. Investment has fewer objections, and might be sufficient, were we able to shut out entirely from the garrison and Town the necessary supplies of food and fuel during the winter; but to do this (the enemy's works being very extensive, and offering many avenues to the neighbouring settlements) will require a large army, and from present appearances mine will not, when brought together, much, if at all, exceed eight hundred combatants. Of Canadians I might be able to get a considerable number, provided I had hard money, with which to clothe, feed, and pay their wages; but this is wanting. Unless, therefore, I am soon and amply re-enforced, investment, like siege, must be given up.

To the storming plan there are fewer objections; and to this we must come at last. If my force be small, Carleton's is not great. The extensiveness of his works, which, in case of investment, would favour him, will, in the other case, favour us. Masters of our secret, we may select a particular time and place for attack, and to repel this, the garrison must be prepared at all times and places; a circumstance which will impose upon it incessant watching and labour, by day and by night, which, in its undisciplined state, must breed discontents that may compel Carleton to capitulate, or, perhaps, to make an attempt to drive us off. In this last idea there is a glimmering of hope. Wolfe's success was a lucky hit, or rather a series of such hits; all sober and scientific calculation was against him, until Montcalm, permitting his courage to get the better of his discretion, gave up the advantages of his fortress, and came out to try his strength on the plain. Carleton, who was Wolfe's Quartermaster-General, understands this well, and, it is to be feared, will not follow the Frenchman's example.

In all these views you will discover much uncertainty; but of one thing you may be sure, that, unless we do something before the middle of April, the game will be up; because, by that time the river may open and let in supplies and re-enforcements to the garrison, in spite of any thing we can do to prevent it; and again, because my troops are not engaged beyond that term, and will not be prevailed upon to stay a day longer.

In reviewing what I have said, you will find that my list of wants is a long one; men, money, artillery, and clothing accommodated to the climate. Of ammunition, Carleton took care to leave little behind him at this place. What I wish and expect, is, that all this be made known to Congress, with a full assurance that, if I fail to execute their wishes or commands, it shall not be from any negligence of duty or infirmity of purpose on my part. Vale; cave ne mandata frangas.

By his Excellency GUY CARLETON, Captain-General and Governour-in-Chief in and over the Province of QUEBECK and the Territories depending thereon, in AMERICA, Vice-Admiral of the same, and Major-General of His Majesty's Forces, commanding the Northern District, &c., &c., &c.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas it has been found expedient to raise and embody a Militia within this City, to co-operate with and to assist His Majesty's Troops in this garrison in the preservation of the City, and of the persons and property of His Majesty's good and faithful subjects resident therein, against certain rebellious persons who have invaded this Province, a number of whom have lately appeared in arms before the walls of this Town: and whereas information has been given me, that some persons resident here have contumaciously refused to enroll their names in the Militia lists, and to take up arms, in conjunction with their fellow-citizens, for the purpose aforesaid; and that others, who have enrolled their names, and had for some time carried arms in the defence and preservation of the City, have lately laid them down; and also that some persons are busy in endeavouring to draw away and alienate the affections of His Majesty's good and faithful subjects of this City from His Majesty's person and Government: for these reasons, and in order to rid the Town of all useless, disloyal, and treacherous persons, I have thought fit to issue this Proclamation. And I do hereby strictly order and enjoin all and every person and persons whatsoever, liable to serve in the Militia, and residing at Quebeck, who have refused or declined to enroll their names in the Militia lists, and to take up arms in conjunction with His Majesty's good subjects of this City, and who shall still refuse or decline so to do, as well as those who, having once taken up arms, have afterwards laid them down, and will not take them up again, to quit the Town in four days from the date hereof, together with their wives and children, and to withdraw themselves out of the limits of the District of Quebeck, before the 1st day of December next, under pain of being treated as rebels or spies, if thereafter they shall be found within the said limits.

And inasmuch as the persons who, in obedience to this Proclamation, are to quit the Town and District, may have bought up a considerable quantity of the provisions brought in for the subsistence of the inhabitants of the Town; and it would be imprudent to suffer those provisions to be carried out, more especially as the country abounds with necessaries of life: I do hereby further order and enjoin all and every such person and persons to deliver in forthwith to the Honourable George Alsop, Esquire, Commissary, a true inventory or list of their provisions and stores, in order that they may be fairly and justly valued, and the full price paid to the respective proprietors before their departure.

Given under my hand and seal of arms, at the Castle of St. Louis, in the City of Quebeck, this twenty-second day of November, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five, in the sixteenth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord George the Third, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth.

GUY CARLETON.

By his Excellency's command:

H. T. CRAMAHE.

God save the King.

PORTSMOUTH (NEW-HAMPSHIRE) COMMITTEE.

Committee-Hall, Portsmouth, November 22, 1775.

Voted, That the Committee of Safety for this Colony, now sitting in this Town, be informed that George Meserve, Esq., has quitted this Town with a design, as they suppose, to go into Boston; and, as he is generally esteemed an enemy to the liberties of America, think some step ought to be taken to prevent the same.

By order of the Committee:

H. WENTWORTH, Chairman.

ADDRESS OF THE GENTLEMEN, ETC., OF THE COUNTIES OF ROSS AND CROMARTY.

Address of the Gentlemen, Heretors, Freeholders, and Clergy of the Counties of Ross and Cromarty, presented to His Majesty by the Right Honourable James Stuart Mackenzie, their Representative in Parliament.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Gentlemen, Heretors, Freeholders, and Clergy of the Counties of Ross and Cromarty, assembled at Dingwall, this 23d day of November, 1775.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

Uninfluenced by the artful chicane of party, unacquainted with the venal prostitution of faction, but firmly attached to your Majesty's person and Government, we, your Majesty's most faithful and loyal subjects, the Gentlemen, Heretors, Freeholders, and Clergy, of the Counties of Ross and Cromarty, though locally distant, presume to approach the throne at this most important and critical period.

The impartial administration of justice, tempered with mildness and mercy, the equitable measures pursued for the good of the whole Empire, and the protection we are blessed with in the enjoyment of our liberties, both sacred and civil, under your Majesty's Government, must distinguish your Majesty's reign in the annals of the British Constitution.

Free and happy as we are, it is therefore with an inexpressible concern we behold many of our fellow-subjects in America, incited and supported by factious and designing men at home, violating all the sacred ties of cordiality and commerce which should subsist between the Mother Country and her Colonies, taking up the arms of unnatural rebellion, and actually engaged in hostilities with the parent who tenderly fostered and supported them with her treasure and blood.

We place the justest reliance upon the wisdom and steadiness of your Majesty's Councils, whereby we soon hope to see re-established the supreme authority of the British Legislature over every part and dependency of its extensive Empire.

Since the lenient measures and moderation hitherto shown have not brought back the deluded sons of America to a sense of their duty, but call for stronger and coercive measures, we therefore beg leave, in the most respectful and dutiful manner, to assure your Majesty, that we will at all times, to the utmost of our power, be ready to support your Majesty, and the honour and dignity of your crown, as well as the legislative authority of these Realms, in defence of our inestimable Constitution; and that, for these ends, we shall have no hesitation in convincing your rebellious and deluded subjects in America, that with the same cheerfulness we so profusely spilled our blood in the last war, in defending them against their and our natural enemies, we are now ready to shed it, if necessary, in bringing them back to a just sense of their duty and allegiance to your Majesty, and their subordination to the Mother Country. And we can assure your Majesty, that these are the sentiments which prevail among all ranks of people in these northern parts of your Majesty's Dominions.

Signed in our presence and by our appointment, by HARRY MUNRO, Præses.

ADDRESS OF THE GENTLEMEN, ETC., OF THE TOWN OF WIGAN.

Address of the Gentlemen, Clergy, Merchants, Manufacturers, and other Inhabitants of the Town of Wigan, in the County Palatine of Lancaster, presented to His Majesty by Sir Richard Clayton, Baronet.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Gentlemen, Clergy, Merchants, Manufacturers, and other Inhabitants of the Town of WIGAN, in the County Palatine of LANCASTER.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's most faithful subjects, the Gentlemen, Clergy, Merchants, Manufacturers, and other Inhabitants of the Town of Wigan, with all dutiful respect beg leave to approach the Throne, to testify our unalterable loyalty and attachment to your Majesty's person and Government, at a time when a most wicked and unnatural rebellion hath made its appearance in your Majesty's Dominions in America.

Fully sensible of the many blessings we enjoy, in common with the rest of our fellow-subjects, under your Majesty's mild and gracious Government, we cannot without horror look on every attempt to disturb the same.

With all the attention we are capable of, we have considered whatever our deluded brethren have urged to palliate the violences they have been guilty of. We have weighed every argument that has been offered by the advocates they have unfortunately met with in this Country. On the maturest deliberation, we cannot find any ground for the outrageous steps they have already taken, and we are lost in wonder and astonishment at their conduct, who have been so far forgetful of their duty to the best of Kings, as to endeavour to justify such proceedings.

We lament that your Majesty's mildness and clemency have hitherto had no good effect on the minds of your infatuated subjects in America; but we cannot help thinking this has been in some degree owing to the artifices of a faction in this Kingdom, that has contributed to keep up the spirit of dissension; and, to serve private views, hath not scrupled to sacrifice the publick interest.

We beg leave to assure your Majesty, that trade has not, in our neighbourhood, suffered any diminution or decay; that our manufactures flourish in the fullest extent; and that we are under no apprehension from any efforts that may be made to lessen or distress them.

In your Majesty and the great Council of the Nation we repose an entire and implicit confidence; and we shall zealously acquiesce in whatever measures may be thought necessary to support the dignity of your Majesty's crown, and the constitutional rights and authority of this Country over every part of the Dominions thereunto belonging.

IRISH HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Thursday, November 23, 1775.

Sir John Blaquiere presented to the House a Message from his Excellency, signifying that "he had His Majesty's commands to acquaint the House, that as the present exigencies of affairs required sending an additional number of Troops to America, he had the firmest reliance on the loyalty of his faithful Commons of Ireland, to admit his sending abroad a number of the Troops on this establishment, not exceeding four thousand men, which shall no longer continue a charge on this Kingdom, but be immediately on their leaving the same in the pay of Great Britain." "And to show His Majesty's gracious regard for the safety and defence of this Kingdom, if the Parliament shall desire it, he will replace the said four thousand men with an equal number of foreign Protestants, (subjects of the Prince of Brunswick and the Prince of Hesse Cassel,) to be continued here, in the pay of Great Britain, as soon as His Majesty shall be enabled to send them by his Parliament of Ireland."

This Message was read again by the Speaker, and ordered on the Journals of the House.

Sir John Blaquiere moved that the House do on Saturday next resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole House, to take his Excellency's Message into consideration.

Saturday, November 25, 1775.

The House was called over, and resolved into a Committee to take into consideration his Excellency's Message, and the instruction to consider on the best mode of defence for this Kingdom, Mr. Malone in the chair.

The order for going into the Committee, his Excellency's Message, and the order for the instruction, were read.

Sir Archibald Acheson rose, and made many eulogiums on His Majesty, whom, he said, we ought to look upon as the father of a much favoured people; and then proposed to offer two Resolutions, but they not being put into proper form, were handed to Mr. Vice-Treasurer; and as they took some time to arrange, Mr. Ogle said the Committee had better adjourn till the Resolutions were drawn. At length they were produced, in substance as follows:

1. Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that in the present exigence of affairs a number of Troops, not exceeding four thousand, out of the number of twelve thousand voted as necessary to be kept in Ireland for the defence thereof, be spared for His Majesty's service abroad, provided that from their quitting this Kingdom they shall be of no charge to the nation.

2. Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that a number of foreign Protestant Troops, not exceeding four thousand, be received into this Kingdom, to replace the like number sent abroad for the security and defence thereof, provided they shall be of no charge to the nation.

Having read these two Resolutions, Sir Archibald Acheson moved the Committee to agree with the first.

Colonel Ross seconded the motion, and observed, this measure would be a saving to the nation of eighty-five thousand Pounds a year.

Mr. Hellen said, the message was the most respectful that ever came from a Sovereign to his people. That it confirmed and allowed the compact for keeping twelve thousand men here at all times, and that it should not be violated by withdrawing one of those men without the concurrence of Parliament; and was a pledge that the men requested of the House would be returned to the nation as soon as the exigency shall cease. This naturally led to an inquiry, whether the exigency was sufficiently great to warrant this requisition. That it was so, he endeavoured to prove, from the present state of American affairs. He then entered into the praise of the foreign troops intended to be sent here, observing they were some of the best in Germany, who had fought along with our forces, and with them had showed their firmness and bravery on the plains of Minden. By admitting those troops, our security was the same, and our expense considerably less. Some gentlemen, said he, may possibly ask, if these troops are so good, why they were not sent to America, and the British and Irish troops kept at home? To this it might be answered, that Great Britain was willing to show the same arm that protected America, while she was dutiful, was able to chastise her when she was seditious.

Mr. Ponsonby allowed that we ought to support Great Britain, if it can be done with justice, prudence, and humanity. That if the troops were sent abroad without asking our consent, then we should not be made parties in the quarrel. But if we give our consent, we shall show we take a determined part against America. To do so would be contrary to justice, for we have had no Parliamentary proof of the delinquency of America, or the state of the present troubles; all we know of either being derived from newspapers. We know, indeed, that the Americans were dutiful and contented till the Stamp Act was passed, for the purpose of internal taxation. At this they murmured; this they opposed; but as soon as it was repealed they cheerfully returned to their duty, and so would they do now if the same expedient was used. To take a part against America would be contrary to prudence; for if we assist to punish them for resisting against being taxed by the British Parliament, we furnish a precedent against ourselves, if ever the like occasion should happen. It would be also imprudent to admit these foreign troops; they are not freemen, but subjects to arbitrary Government, and will not regard us as their master if we do not pay them, for soldiers always look up to the hand that pays them. As this measure is contrary to justice and prudence, so is it also to humanity; for what can be more inhuman than to send our friends, our relations, men we have conversed and eat and drank with, to expose them to the dangers of sea and battle, whilst foreigners live here at ease and safety; and he asked, was it not inhumanity to make widows and orphans of our countrywomen and children, only to spare those of strangers?

Mr. John Fitzgibbons said, before we took any part in a war, we should examine whether it was just. He then entered into a recapitulation of all that had passed between Great Britain and her Colonies, from the last war to the present time, and concluded that the war was unjust, and Ireland had no reason to be a party therein. Some may say, added he, if we refuse these troops to His Majesty's request, it may be of evil consequences; but he thought differently. It would make the King look into the affair, and when he sees we are not inclined to assist in an unjust war, it may be a means of inducing him to put an end to it.

Sir John Blaquiere replied, the resolution before the Committee tended to verify and realize the professions of loyalty made by the House. To this gentlemen might consent, without agreeing to the other, if they thought fit to submit to a short temporary inconvenience, rather than receive foreign troops, which would only be sent at the desire of the House.

Sir Edward Newenham said, as he had given his negative to the address, which denounced vengeance against his fellow-subjects, he could not agree to the sending of more troops, to butcher men who were fighting for their liberty. He said, that we might bid farewell to such as we sent to America; for that if America was conquered, the troops would be kept there to preserve that conquest; for though it might be conquered, the spirit of liberty would not be ever subdued. He was violently against the introduction of foreign mercenaries, and argued that the introduction of them had occasioned the fall of many great Empires and States. He instanced the danger of having foreign troops in any Kingdom where they would not be amenable to the laws, by mentioning the case of a Hessian soldier, who committed a robbery, and was confined by the civil magistrates, but was released and given up to the military. That Hanoverian, Hessian, and Brunswick troops were more dangerous than any others; for that German connections were always fatal to the true interests of Old-England. He entered largely into the present system of affairs in Europe. He insisted upon it, that German influence was so powerful in the Cabinet of Great Britain, that the most valuable interests of these Kingdoms would be given to save the paltry Electorate of Hanover. That he was convinced the destruction of the Elector's Manery at Herenhausen, or the much-admired stud of cream-coloured nags in the stables of Hanover or Zell, would appear, in the eyes of the present Ministry, as a greater misfortune than the desolation of those three once happy, but now distracted sinking nations. He advised the Minister in the House to consider what riots and disorders would be committed in the City of Dublin, if foreign mercenaries were quartered in it. That the sending of our troops to the butchery of our fellow-subjects in America, or bringing over foreign mercenaries, equally militated against true reason and sound policy.

Mr. Gardiner considered the question in a twofold light; first, in regard to the relation in which we stand to Great Britain and America; and secondly, in regard to ourselves. In respect to the first, the question is not whether America resisted first, or whether she was oppressed first; but, at present, it stands only whether America should be forever lost to Great Britain, or not. He heartily wished a reconciliation might take place; but that could only be effected by having a power to enforce it. Men, whose very existence in their offices depend on war, will never be sincere advocates for peace. The greater force sent to America, the less sanguinary will be the measure; and he was clearly of opinion, had there been as many troops in America last spring as there will be the next, not a sword would now have been unsheathed. It is our duty and interest to assist Great Britain, if we can; but we cannot spare so many men from the defence of this country, if they are not somewhere replaced. The dispositions of the nations around us forbid us to leave Ireland defenceless. In his late tour, he had an opportunity of conversing with intelligent persons in divers Courts of Europe, and, by what he could gather, he was assured, they looked upon the contest with America as a means of weakening us; and when our neighbours thought us sufficiently weakened, then they would not fail to attack us in our most defenceless part. The Spaniards had a greater force than ever they had since the time of the Armada, commanded by an Irishman, who would omit no opportunity to invade that country, against which he was embittered by being banished from it. If these troops went away without being replaced, we should be defenceless. By the most accurate accounts, there were but eight thousand five hundred real fighting men in Ireland; and if a fourth part of them were sent abroad, he would ask the right honourable gentleman, (Sir John Blaquiere,) or he would ask the Commander-in-Chief, if he were in the House, whether either would undertake the defence of this Kingdom with the remainder, without any addition. He did not conceive there could be more danger from foreign troops than from natives; they were unacquainted with our language, and unconnected with our people, and therefore less liable to desertion. He also thought the saving from this measure was of great importance; nevertheless, before he would give his assent to the resolution, he must be assured of two things—one, that the men sent abroad will certainly be replaced; the other, that the saving of the four thousand men's pay will not remain a surplus in the Treasury, exposed to the grasp of a Minister, but be deducted from the total of the supplies in the present money bill.

Mr. Carleton spoke a long time, to prove there could be no danger of a precedent making against us; and he enlarged on the evil consequences that would ensue from irritating Great Britain, by refusing this request.

Mr. Warden Flood espoused the measure, as it was not any augmentation, but a lessening of the national expense.

Mr. George Ogle said, he was not to be intimidated by any threats of ill consequences arising from a refusal. He was averse to send men, with swords in their hands, to cut the throats of their American brethren. That the ample supplies given by this exhausted and struggling country were sufficient testimonies of our loyalty; and it was highly improper to send men to punish in others what they would do in the same case. This measure was doubtless determined on the very first day of the session; and that was the cause why the compact of keeping twelve thousand men here was so strictly observed. The foreign troops cannot be called our own troops, if we do not pay them; they will fight for those only who do. A land tax will probably be attempted here; and if it does not succeed, (as certainly it cannot,) then it will be laid on by the British Parliament, and the foreign troops will be left here to enforce obedience. Whilst Parliament here will do all that is absurd, we shall, no doubt, have a Parliament, just as the Romans had a Senate in the times of the Emperors, but only to give a sanction to the Emperor's dictates. He was, he said, alarmed by the manner in which the two resolutions were treated by Administration. The first was the measure of Government, and as such was supported; the last was the measure of Parliament, and as such was slighted by Administration; just as if they said, "grant us the four thousand more, and then take care for your own defence as you please." If men must be sent to America, send these foreign mercenaries, not the brave sons of Ireland. Gentlemen have said, Ministers must have power to enforce conciliation; but we know few Ministers who have power to enforce will attend to the voice of justice; they will act as Brennius, the Gaul, did with the vanquished Romans—he viewed the tribute money exacted from them, and threw his sword in the opposite scale. But if these men must go, why must we have foreign troops for our defence? Why not raise the militia? They are our natural, our constitutional defence, and the raising them is practicable.

Captain Jephson observed, we have no reason to be so tender of the Americans, who had treated us ill; they had resolved in their Congress to receive no commodities from, nor have any commerce with Ireland; and this declaration not only set us at defiance, but fully proves they do not think us so insatuated as to take their parts.

Sir James Cotter asked whether the foreign troops, when they came here, were to be amenable to our laws or their own, and repeated the instance of the Hanoverian soldier at Maidstone.

Mr. Attorney-General answered, that all troops, foreigners as well as natives, were responsible to the laws of this country, as soon as they set foot therein.

Sir James Cotter replied, he was glad to find they were, yet he thought the measure very exceptionable. But if they did come, it would be better to pay them ourselves than not, especially as the expense was already provided for in the establishment.

Mr. Langrishe replied to the objections of sundry gentlemen, and observed that the saving on the military establishment was not the only advantage that would be derived from the foreign troops, but all their pay would be expended in this country, to the great advantage thereof.

Mr. Barry Barry was of opinion the men might be spared without their being replaced with foreign troops.

Mr. Redmond Morres observed, however we might be able to spare these men, yet it would be very improper to do so; and if the foreign troops did come, he hoped they would rather be quartered in the country than in Dublin, where the people would not be so contented with them.

Mr. Mason urged, that by the address of the House to His Majesty, it had expressed its sense that America was in rebellion. He observed, that agreeing to the first resolution did not bind them to agree to the second, though he was of opinion it was proper to agree to both.

Mr. Yelverton declared it was still his opinion, as it was at the opening of the session, that the resistance of the Americans was not rebellion. And how could he consent to aid the fate of America, which depended on the decision of that night? The question, indeed, was important, and decision very delicate. If we refuse His Majesty's request, we incur the displeasure of Great Britain; if we comply, we aid the arbitrary designs of a despotick Ministry. In this dilemma, what can guide us? Nothing but reason and justice. We have two acts of Parliament, declaring that twelve thousand men are necessary for the defence of the Kingdom; and we have just resolved the same in the Committee of Supplies. Now, if we agree to part with a third part of that number, when there is no rebellion or invasion in Great Britain, we contradict these acts of the Legislature, and belie our own resolutions. Great Britain pretends to a supreme authority over all her dominions, as well in regard to internal taxation as to commercial regulations. Does not this assertion include Ireland? It certainly does, and nothing is wanting but a plausible pretext or a proper opportunity to enforce it. This has been enforced in America; this caused the war, and therefore the war is unjust. Let Great Britain enjoy the wealth of both the Indies. Let London be the grand emporium of Europe; let her exert her commercial power over the sea, from pole to pole; but let us say to it as to the sea, "hither thou shalt come, and no farther." If these bounds are exceeded, human nature will not submit without murmuring, nor freeborn British subjects without resistance. The changes have been long rung about taxation and representation; but men have bewildered themselves on that subject, for want of setting out on proper and legal grounds; representation is not a representation of persons, but of property. At first, writs were issued to all who held of the Crown in capite. These were about seven hundred and thirty in number, and sat in the right of their property, held in feudal tenure, and not by any election. As commerce increased, property was purchased, and extended into many hands. The property of seven hundred became disseminated amongst numbers too great to convene and sit in their own rights; those who possessed what was the property of one great Baron elected one or more of their own number to represent the whole of the property thus divided, and thence derived the right of representation. The case became the same in Cities and Corporations which held by capite from the Crown. The whole Corporation could not come to vote, therefore the Corporation elected its representatives. This proves how true that assertion was of Lord Chatham, "that every blade of grass in Great Britain was represented." But not one American blade of grass is represented in the British Parliament, therefore it cannot be justly taxed there; and this shows the folly and absurdity of the so much talked of virtual representation, and saying that many thousands in Britain were not represented more than the Americans. Many English persons may not indeed, but the whole English landed property is. Englishmen surely did not lose their spirit as well as their rights by crossing the Atlantick. No! They did not; they carried thither their freeborn spirit, before it was contaminated with an influx of Asiatick wealth. From all this it appears, the war of Britain with her Colonies is unjust; nor is it likely it should succeed under the auspices of that Ministry who so unjustly raised it; for we see twelve Colonies united, who are different in situation, different in interests, different in religion, different in manners, different in every thing but spirit. What has been the success of the British arms against these people? We have seen the British Navy, the terror of the world, who used to carry thunder to every part of the globe, now sailing from one little island to another, for the glorious purpose of pilfering a few cattle. We have seen the British Troops pent up in Boston Neck; we have seen a Ministry plotting and purchasing counter addresses, to cover their disgrace, and sending troops abroad in the most dangerous season of the year, to encounter tempests which seem to have been raised by Providence, on purpose to prevent more from imbruing their hands in their brethren's blood. But if even it was just to send our troops, and they were likely to succeed, yet it would be inexpedient; for if we should join to subdue resistance, would it not be a precedent against ourselves, if ever we should resist against a like oppression. Had we foreseen or been acquainted with this measure, and that we should have saved so much on the military establishment, before we had voted the Tontine scheme, we might have spared sixteen thousand Pounds; but it seems to have been kept in petto, till all the demanded supplies had been granted.

Captain Trench spoke next against the measure, and Mr. Prime Serjeant for it.

Mr. Foster said, the only point to be considered was, whether this measure would bring on a reconciliation, which he thought it would. It was clear that the wish of America was a total independence; and if we refuse to send these troops, we prevent a reconciliation, by hindering Great Britain from enforcing reasonable terms, which, if properly enforced, the Americans might agree to. But if we even agree to send these troops, we do not thereby condemn the Americans; we only assist Great Britain in her time of need. In regard to the supplies, though they are voted, the money bills are not passed, and gentlemen may make such retrenchments in them as they think necessary.

Mr. Chapman said, that he did not expect to hear such a message, after the many assurances of the Minister, that the twelve thousand men were completely in this Kingdom, and should remain so inviolably; and after the promises of Administration, that nothing should be expected from this country to America, but the address to the Throne. That notwithstanding the Committee of Supply had resolved twelve thousand men to be necessary for our defence, and had provided for them accordingly, yet, while the very sound of these assurances yet tingles in our ears, the Minister forgot himself in the messenger of the Crown, not to bring to their longing eyes the olive branch, the emblem of much wished for peace, but he lays his hand on his sword, and becomes the harbinger of war. That he congratulated Administration on at length finding out that hitherto invisible deity of theirs, but on closer inspection, he was sorry to discover that deity, like the god of the Egyptians, plainly and simply, a bull. That if the Minister was serious when he promised economy, he ought to lessen the supply in proportion to that economy; to content himself with fewer taxes, and to diminish his demands. That he called on him to do so, but he found him silent on that point; and therefore must conclude no real economy was in his contemplation. That one year's saving was the utmost that was mentioned. That such reduction was paltry indeed, contrasted with the probable loss of four thousand gallant countrymen, devoted sacrifices to appease the fury of an incensed, a despairing people, in defence of their rights, confident against the world in arms; that the tears of the forlorn widow, the cries of the helpless orphan, could not be weighed in the money scale of a Minister. That this Kingdom would be left exposed to every enemy, allured by such prospects. That the asking the consent of Parliament was a farce in politicks, and an undermining of a positive act of Parliament. That it was well known that the Crown always desired the consent of a dean and chapter to the appointment of an intended bishop, but it was never yet known that the person nominated did not succeed to the episcopal dignity.

Mr. Solicitor-General said, as the expense to be incurred was the chief argument used against the augmentation, so no gentleman, who voted then against it, can consistently oppose the measure by which the expense is taken away. He begged the first resolution might be disposed of before they entered into the consideration of the second; adding, that if we refused the request of the Crown, we should hurt the Americans, by misleading them to their ruin.

Mr. James Brown spoke in defence of the measure.

Mr. Conolly urged his fears for Ireland, from establishing a precedent, and mentioned that the King's speech, at opening the British Parliament, declared the supremacy over all his dominions. He repeated and enforced what had been said about a land-tax laid on by England, and enforced by foreign mercenaries. He took notice of the intelligence an honourable gentleman (Mr. Gardiner) had derived of the hostile intentions of foreign powers, from the cabinets of foreign Courts. [Here Mr. Gardiner said the right honourable gentleman had mistaken him; he had only said courts, not cabinets.] Mr. Conolly replied, he had indeed mistaken, but the mistake was easily made, as he knew no gentleman more fit for a lady's or a Privy Counsellor's cabinet than the honourable gentleman.

Mr. Hussey Burgh then rose, and introduced his opinion relative to the question with observing, that although he had generally voted on that side of the House which is called Opposition, yet he had set it down as a maxim, never to give his support to a motion which was calculated to harass the Minister, and not to serve the people. That when there was a considerable majority evident on the part of Government, he thought it best not to hazard a question which there was a certainty of losing; that he made, for this reason, fewer motions than any man in the House; that he had no enemies to persecute, no partisans to serve; and that this might account for his silence during the present session. But he said the present question was of the greatest importance, a question arising from a message sent by the King to his Parliament, to which an answer must be given; that, without passion, without prejudice, and without fear, he would deliver his opinion; and that the man did not live, who knew on which side of the question that opinion would turn. He then entered largely into the consequences which might attend the putting this measure into execution; took a short view of the American war, which he termed unjust, as it not only militated against the law of nations, the law of the land, the law of humanity, but against the law of nature. He mentioned the imbruing our hands in the blood of our kinsmen and near relations; and that the saving, which was mentioned as a motive to induce our supporting the Ministry, was no more than a bribe to purchase our assistance to cut the throats of the Americans; that if the war was just, there was no necessity to bribe our concurrence; that the right of taxation demanded by Great Britain was unjust, for that it was contrary to all reason that a people who are the subjects of Great Britain should, in respect to their property, be at the mercy of two powers, and acknowledge a right of taxation both in their own Assemblies and in the British Senate; that if this was the case, they could not boast any property, for every shilling they enjoyed might by one act of a Parliament, in which they were not represented, be taken from them forever; that instead of a saving, this measure would in all probability become a burden, and observed our civil establishment would always increase whenever the military decreased; and that the present saving would be only a temporary relief, which would bring on a future evil; for that when our own troops returned, then our military would fall back into the original expense, with the additional burden of what the civil establishment may have increased. He then mentioned our defenceless state, and insisted that we had not more than nine thousand fighting men, men who marched on their legs, and not on paper; men who could stand fire, and not calculation. He disposed very judiciously the arrangement of our troops, and clearly proved that we must be open to the insurrection of the White Boys in the South, and the Steel Boys in the North; and that then the murdering and maiming of our wives and children would fall on our own heads. That France looked on this quarrel with a peculiar pleasure, and that we had a security in their promises no longer than the hopes of accommodation with the Colonies existed; for whenever they disappeared, and that by this war we were weakened, then it was possible and probable, with a very small force, they would do such a signal mischief to this Kingdom as might be irreparable. He took a view of the commercial interest of France with America, and mentioned how probable it was they would sacrifice their friendship to England for a lucrative connection with America, and pictured the consequences in striking figures of reasoning. He mentioned the disturbances which might arise from the importation of these foreign troops, and asked by what laws they were to be tried for offences in this Kingdom? Whether they were to be subject to a jury of this country, or to a court-martial among themselves? And if the latter, what dreadful consequences might follow! He then returned to the justice on which this request was founded, and said such was his opinion of it, he would not vote a single sword against America, without an address to accompany it, recommending conciliatory measures; that he foresaw the consequences of this war; and that if the Ministry were victorious, it would only be establishing a right to the harvest, when they had burned the grain; it would be only establishing a right to the stream, when they had cut off the fountain.

Sir John Blaquiere said he was totally ignorant of this measure when the session opened; that it would have been wrong to have deducted the saving from the votes of supplies, before it was known whether the troops would be sent or not; that if the supplies are raised, and there is a redundancy on account of this measure, it would be liable to the disposal of Parliament next sessions.

The question was then put on the first Resolution, and the Committee divided, ayes 121, noes 76; majority 45.

It being then near midnight, the consideration of the second Resolution was adjourned till Monday.

Monday, November 27, 1775.

The Committee of the Whole House accordingly sat again this day, the Right Hon. Anthony Malone in the chair; when the second of the Resolutions proposed last Saturday, by Sir Archibald Acheson, to wit: "That it is the opinion of this Committee, that a number of foreign Protestant Troops, not exceeding four thousand, be received into this Kingdom, to replace the like number going abroad, for the security and defence thereof, provided they shall be of no charge to the nation," was read, a long debate ensued, in the beginning of which Sir John Blaquiere declared, that he was of opinion his taking a part in this business would not be treating His Majesty's message with that respect it deserved; he would not give his voice one way or other.

The resolution was supported by the Attorney-General, General Cunningham, Mr. Forster, Colonel Burton, and Barry Barry, whose arguments tended to prove that in the arrangement offered them by His Majesty, the sum of eighty-five thousand Pounds per annum would be saved to the nation, besides the pay of the foreign troops sent among us; that the Hessian and Brunswick forces were composed of industrious, docile men, most of them manufacturers; that many of them would probably settle in this Kingdom, and add to the Protestant strength thereof; that when the four thousand men now permitted to leave the Kingdom would go, there would not remain above six thousand five hundred effective men—too small a number to repel a foreign invasion, or keep quietness at home; that even the number now in the Kingdom was scarce sufficient to protect the revenue, and repress the riotous disposition of the lower class of inhabitants, who were ever rising in divers parts of the Kingdom; and that it would seem very odd to the British Minister to find that this House, ever since the augmentation, had every session, and even a month ago, voted that twelve thousand effective men were necessary for the defence of this Kingdom, should now, when Britain, at her own expense, offered to replace the forces which the exigency of affairs called abroad, should reject the proffered favour.

On the other hand, it was contended by Mr. Redmond Morris, Mr. Vice-Treasurer Flood, Mr. Hussey, Mr. Yelverton, Mr. Bushe, Mr. Boyle Roche, &c., that the introduction of foreign troops into this Kingdom was a dangerous measure, pregnant with ruin to the liberty of this country. What would be the consequence when this House would find themselves surrounded by foreign mercenaries, who, not being paid by them, would not be under their command? That these troops, unacquainted with either the language or manners of the people, would be equally unfit for garrison or country duty; that it would be exposing the weakness of this Kingdom, and when these troops returned home, its defenceless situation would be the topic in all the coffee-houses on the Continent; that when the Regiments remaining here, after the four thousand men were gone, would be complete, we should have eight thousand men in the Kingdom—a force, until the late augmentation, thought sufficient for its defence, ever since the year 1690, though two foreign wars, and two rebellions in Great Britain, had happened since that time; that the payment of twelve thousand men being already provided this session, the saving of near two hundred thousand pounds in the two years would be only putting the means of corruption into the hands of Administration. Lastly, Mr Ogle observed that there was an effectual and constitutional method of defence and security, by a national militia; that two hundred men thus raised in every County, would be a sufficient force to answer every purpose.

Mr. Flood adopted the idea of a militia, and showed it was a favourite wish of his to see it carried into execution.

Several amendments to the Resolution were proposed, but all rejected without a division. It being now eleven o'clock at night, the question on the Resolution itself was put, when there appeared, ayes, for the Resolution, 68; noes 106: majority 38.

Mr. Ogle then moved that the following Resolution be agreed to, in lieu of the rejected one:

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that a Militia not exceeding six thousand men is necessary for the defence of this Kingdom.

It being now too late to enter into the merits of this question, it was agreed the Committee should report the Resolution they had agreed to last Saturday, and ask leave to sit again.

TO THE EMIGRANTS LATELY ARRIVED FROM THE HIGHLANDS OF SCOTLAND.

Williamsburgh, November 23, 1775.

FRIENDS AND COUNTRYMEN: A native of the same island, and on the same side of the Tweed with yourselves, begs, for a few moments, your serious attention. A regard for your happiness, and the security of your posterity, are the only motives that could have induced me to occupy your time by an epistolary exhortation. How far I may fall short of the object I have thus in view, becomes me not to surmise. The same claim, however, has he to praise (though, perhaps, never equally rewarded) who endeavours to do good, as he who has the happiness to effect his purpose. I hope, therefore, no views of acquiring popular fame, no partial or circumscribed motives, will be attributed to me from this attempt. If this, however, should be the case, I have the consolation to know that I am not the first, of many thousands, who have been censured unjustly.

I have been lately told that our Provincial Congress have appointed a Committee to confer with you, respecting the differences which at present subsist between Great Britain and her American Colonies; that they wish to make you their friends, and treat with you for that purpose; to convince you, by facts and argumentation, that it is necessary that every inhabitant of this Colony should concur in such measures as may, through the aid of a superintending Providence, remove those evils under which this Continent is at present depressed.

The substance of the present contest, as far as my abilities serve me to comprehend it, is, simply, whether the Parliament of Great Britain shall have the liberty to take away your property without your consent. It seems clear and obvious to me that it is wrong and dangerous they should have such a power; and that if they are able to carry this into execution, no man in this Country has any property which he may safely call his own. Adding to the absurdity of a people's being taxed by a body of men at least three thousand miles distant, we need only observe that their views and sentiments are opposite to ours, their manners of living so different that nothing but confusion, injustice, and oppression could possibly attend it. If ever we are justly and righteously taxed, it must be by a set of men who, living amongst us, have an interest in the soil, and who are amenable to us for all their transactions.

It was not to become slaves you forsook your native shores. Nothing could have buoyed you up against the prepossessions of nature and of custom, but a desire to fly from tyranny and oppression. Here you found a Country with open arms ready to receive you; no persecuting landlord to torment you; none of your property exacted from you to support court favourites and dependants. Under these circumstances, your virtue and your interest were equally securities for the uprightness of your conduct; yet, independent of these motives, inducements are not wanting to attach you to the cause of liberty. No people are better qualified than you, to ascertain the value of freedom. They only can know its intrinsic worth who have had the misery of being deprived of it.

From the clemency of the English Nation you have little to expect; from the King and his Ministers still less. You and your forefathers have fatally experienced the malignant barbarity of a despotick court. You cannot have forgot the wanton acts of unparalleled cruelty committed during the reign of Charles II. Mercy and justice were then strangers to your land, and your countrymen found but in the dust a sanctuary from their distresses. The cries of age, and the concessions of youth, were uttered but to be disregarded; and equally with and without the formalities of law, were thousands of the innocent and deserving ushered to an untimely grave. The cruel and unmerited usage given to the Duke of Argyle, in that reign, cannot be justified or excused. No language can paint the horrors of this transaction; description falters on her way, and, lost in the labyrinth of sympathy and woe, is unable to perform the duties of her function. This unhappy nobleman had always professed himself an advocate for the Government under which he lived, and a friend to the reigning monarch. Whenever he deviated from these principles, it must have been owing to the strong impulses of honour, and the regard he bore to the rights of his fellow-creatures. "It were endless, as well as shocking, (says an elegant writer,) to enumerate all the instances of persecution, or, in other words, of absurd tyranny, which at this time prevailed in Scotland. Even women were thought proper objects on whom they might exercise their ferocious and wanton dispositions; and three of that sex, for refusing to sign some test drawn up by tools of Administration, were devoted, without the solemnity of a trial, to a lingering and painful death."

I wish, for the sake of humanity in general, and the royal family in particular, that I could throw a veil over the conduct of the Duke of Cumberland after the last rebellion. The indiscriminate punishments which he held out equally to the innocent and the guilty, are facts of notoriety much to be lamented. The intention may possibly, in some measure, excuse, though nothing can justify the barbarity of the measure.

Let us, then, my countrymen, place our chief dependence on our virtue, and, by opposing the standard of despotism on its first appearance, secure ourselves against those arts in which a contrary conduct will undoubtedly plunge us. I will venture to say, that there is no American so unreasonable as even to wish you to take the field against your friends from the other side of the Atlantick. All they expect or desire from you is, to remain neutral, and to contribute your proportion of the expenses of the war. This will be sufficient testimony of your attachment to the cause they espouse. As you participate of the blessings of the soil, it is but reasonable that you should bear a proportionable part of the disadvantages attending it.

To the virtuous and deserving among the Americans, nothing can be more disagreeable than national reflections; they are, and must be, in the eyes of every judicious man, odious and contemptible, and bespeak a narrowness of soul which the virtuous are strangers to. Let not, then, any disrespectful epithets which the vulgar and illiterate may throw out, prejudice you against them; and endeavour to observe this general rule, dictated at least by humanity, "that he is a good man who is engaged in a good cause."

Your enemies have said you are friends to absolute monarchy and despotism, and that you have offered yourselves as tools in the hands of Administration, to rivet the chains forging for your brethren in America. I hope and think my knowledge of you authorizes the assertion that you are friends to liberty, and the natural and avowed enemies of tyranny and usurpation. All of you, I doubt not, came into the Country with a determined resolution of finishing here your days; nor dare I doubt but that, fired with the best and noblest species of human emulation, you would wish to transmit to the rising generation that best of all patrimonies, the legacy of freedom.

Private views, and offers of immediate reward, can only operate on base and unmanly minds. That soul in which the love of liberty ever dwelt must reject, with honest indignation, every idea of preferment, founded on the ruins of a virtuous and deserving people. I would have you look up to the Constitution of Britain as the best and surest safeguard to your liberties. Whenever an attempt is made to violate its fundamental principles, every effort becomes laudable which may tend to preserve its natural purity and perfection.

The warmest advocates for Administration have candour sufficient to admit that the people of Great Britain have no right to tax America. If they have not, for what are they contending? It will, perhaps, be answered, for the dignity of Government. Happy would it be for those who advance this doctrine to consider, that there is more real greatness and genuine magnanimity in acknowledging an error, than in persisting in it. Miserable must that state be, whose rulers, rather than give up a little punctilio, would endanger the lives of thousands of its subjects in a quarrel, the injustice and impropriety of which is universally acknowledged. If the Americans wish for any thing more than is set forth in the Address of the last Congress to the King and people of Great Britain—if independence is their aim—by removing their real grievances, their artificial ones (if any they should avow) will soon appear, and with them will their cause be deserted by every friend to limited monarchy, and by every well-wisher to the interest of America. I have endeavoured, in this uncultivated homespun essay, to avoid prolixity as much as possibly I could. I have aimed at no flowers of speech, no touches of rhetorick, which are too often made use of to amuse, and not to instruct or persuade the understanding. I have no views but your good, and the credit of the Country from whence you came.

In case Government should prevail, and be able to tax America without the least show of representation, it would be to me a painful reflection to think, that the children of the land to which I owe my existence, should have been the cause of plunging millions into perpetual bondage.

If we cannot be of service to the cause, let us not be an injury to it. Let us view this Continent as a country marked out by the great God of nature as a receptacle for distress, and where the industrious and virtuous may range in the fields of freedom, happy under their own fig-trees, freed from a swarm of petty tyrants, who disgrace countries the most polished and civilized, and who more particularly infest that region from whence you came.

FAIRFAX COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE TO THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Fairfax County, Virginia, November 23, 1775.

SIR: The Committee of this County, informed of the present scarcity of salt in this Colony in general, and in this part of it in particular, sensible of the difficulty, perhaps impracticability of procuring it, if not done this winter, and apprehensive of the great distress and discontent that the want of this necessary article may occasion among the people, as well as the impossibility of furnishing proper provisions for the regiments of minute-men and draughts from our militia which may be called into service next spring, have directed us to apply to the honourable the Continental Congress, praying them to encourage the importation of salt, either by permitting the exportation of country produce in return, in such manner as is allowed upon the importation of military stores, or in such other manner as that honourable Board shall judge best. We beg leave, Sir, through you, to lay this request, as a matter of the utmost importance to the good people of this Colony and the publick service, before the gentlemen of the Congress; and are, with the greatest respect, Sir, your most obedient servants,

G. MASON, JOHN CARLYLE,
JOHN DALTON, JOHN MUIR,
WM. RAMSAY, JAMES KIRK,

Committee of Correspondence for Fairfax County.
To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the Congress in Philadelphia.

Williamsburgh, November 23, 1775.

MR. PURDIE: Permit a farmer, more versed in matters of husbandry than politicks, but anxious for the success of America, in the present contest with Great Britain, to lay before the publick some plain observations relating to our commercial opposition. We have seen the non-importation agreement zealously supported, and generally submitted to. The non-exportation has now taken place, and demands our vigilant attention. In the prosecution of this measure, success is almost certain. In war, the event is doubtful; and the measure, however just, to be lamented by the friends of humanity and their country. It has been shown, it can be demonstrated, that the direct and circuitous commerce of Britain with her Colonies amounts to more than a third of her whole trade. Deprive her of this great and constant stream of wealth, and you hazard her bankruptcy. No country upon earth can, at this time, furnish the materials Great Britain used to draw from her Colonies, and which afforded such ample employment for her ingenious artists. Where can she suddenly find a vent for the large quantities of manufactures America used to consume? New channels of commerce are not hastily opened. In this operation, other States, now in possession of the business, must be supplanted. In her American trade, Britain stood alone and unrivalled. For many years past, great part of Europe has depended on America for bread. Ireland has been greatly beholden to her, and Great Britain not a little. I would not be understood to insinuate that Great Britain does not produce grain enough for her own use. I know that generally she doth, and to spare; but it is well known, that, for a number of years past, Britain hath not yielded her usual abundance, or foreign demand has been so great as to encourage large exports; otherwise the price of wheat would not, communibus annis, fluctuate between five shillings and six pence and eight shillings per bushel, and sometimes, in particular counties, higher. In the best years, Britain does not produce more grain than sufficient to feed her inhabitants fifteen or sixteen months, and in unfavourable years, she has little or none to spare. Suppose, then, a total stop of American wheat and flour. What will probably be the consequence? The probable consequence will be, an increased demand for those articles in the different markets of Europe; the increased demand creates competition; competition raises the price, (already the subject of complaint,) bread being extravagantly dear, trade languishing, and a number of hands are idle for want of the employment afforded by the American commerce. Discontent, clamour, and commotion will ensue. These consequences naturally beget each other, and will inevitably happen, if the American produce is kept from market six months. I bring not under consideration the consequence of this measure to the inhabitants of the West-India Islands, whose existence as a people depends upon supplies from the Continent, and in whose prosperity Britain is deeply interested. Had the last proved a bad year of harvest in Europe, the consideration, under a stop of American exports, would be truly afflicting to every benevolent mind. As, therefore, so much depends on our keeping the American produce from market, let us show we have the virtue to make the sacrifice, and decline selling our commodities, unless for internal consumption; but, lest there should be among us those who, preferring private interest to publick good, shall dispose of their provisions to enterprising traders, the Committees of the several Counties and Corporations should exert their authority in preventing such practices, by prohibiting any of these articles from being water-borne, which will effectually suppress the mischief. In this measure, however, the confederated Colonies should act in concert; for which purpose something of the sort should come recommended from the Congress, if the Delegates think the temper of their constituents will bear the restriction; otherwise, it would be partial, injurious, and ineffectual.

JOHN ADAMS TO JAMES OTIS.

Philadelphia, November 23, 1775.

SIR: I had the honour of your letter of November 11th, by express, and am very sorry to learn that any difference of sentiment has arisen between the two honourable Houses respecting the militia bill, as it is so necessary, at this critical moment, for the publick service.

If I was of opinion that any resolution of the Congress, now in force, was against the claim of the honourable House, as the honourable Board have proposed that we should lay the question before Congress, I should think it my duty to do it. But it appears to me that, supposing the two resolutions to clash, the last ought to be considered as binding; and as, by this, it is left in the "discretion of the Assembly either to adopt the foregoing resolutions, in the whole or in part, or to continue their former, as they, on consideration of all circumstances, shall think fit," I think it plain that the honourable Board may comply with the desire of the honourable House, if, in their discretion, they think fit. I am the more confirmed in the opinion that it is unnecessary to lay this matter before Congress, as they have lately advised the Colonies of New-Hampshire and one more, if they think necessary, to establish such forms of Government as they shall judge best calculated to promote the happiness of the people. Besides, the Congress are so pressed with business, and engaged upon questions of greater moment, that I should be unwilling, unless in a case of absolute necessity, to interrupt them by a question of this kind, not to mention that I would not wish to make known so publicly and extensively that a controversy had so soon arisen between the branches of our new Government. I have had frequent consultations with my colleagues, since the receipt of your letter, upon this subject; but, as we are not unanimous, I think it my duty to write my private sentiments as soon as possible. If either of my colleagues shall think fit to propose the question to Congress, I shall there give my candid opinion, as I have done to you.

I have the honour to be, with great respect to the honourable Board, Sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN ADAMS.

The Hon. James Otis, Esq.

SAMUEL ADAMS TO JAMES OTIS.

Philadelphia, November 23, 1775.

SIR: Having very maturely considered your letter of the 11th of November, written in the name and by order of the honourable the Council of Massachusetts-Bay, and directed to the Delegates of that Colony, I beg leave to offer it as my opinion, that the resolve of Congress, passed on the 9th of July last, must be superseded by the subsequent resolve of the 8th of July following, so far as they appear to militate with each other. By the last of these resolves, the Conventions or Assemblies of the several Colonies, annually elective, are, at their discretion, either to adopt the method therein pointed out, for the regulation of their militia, either in whole or in part, or to continue their former regulations, as they, on consideration of all circumstances, shall think fit. It therefore seems to me manifest that the honourable Council are under no restraint from yielding to the honourable House a voice with them in the choice of the militia officers in the Colony. I am prevailed upon to believe that this is the sense of the Congress, because they have lately recommended it to the Colony of New-Hampshire to set up and exercise Government in such form as they shall judge to be most conducive to the promotion of peace and good order among themselves, without laying them under restrictions of any kind.

As the honourable Board have been pleased to direct us to give our opinions, with or without consulting our brethren of the Congress, I hope I shall be justified, after having conferred with my colleagues on the subject, in declining, on my part, to have the matter laid before Congress, for reasons which were of weight in my mind; and, indeed, I am of opinion that the Congress would not choose to take any order of that kind, they having divers times of late declined to determine on matters which concerned the internal police of individuals of the United Colonies. It is my most ardent wish that a cordial agreement between the two Houses may ever subsist, more especially in the establishment of the militia, upon which the safety of the Colony so greatly depends.

I am, with all due regards to the honourable Council, Sir, your most humble servant,

SAMUEL ADAMS.

THE MONITOR, NO. III.

New-York, November 23, 1775.

So great is the infirmity of the human mind, that, even in matters of the most intimate concern, men are extremely apt to forget circumstances of the greatest moment towards the due regulation of their judgment and conduct, or, at best, to retain too faint and confused a remembrance of them fully to answer that valuable end, their minds being distracted with the multiplicity of interesting occurrences that constantly crowd upon their attention, from whence it becomes necessary frequently to refresh their memories, in order to keep them steady to their purposes, and uniform in their sentiments and practices. I shall, therefore, dedicate this paper to a compendious review of those events which have brought us to a crisis big with the most important consequences to the future existence of this immeasurable Continent.

It is customary, when one set of men or one society, in the prosecution of their ambition or avarice, have adopted the intention to usurp the rights and annihilate the privileges of another, sedulously to seek out some pretext for the imputation of a crime on the devoted victims, by which they may seem to have forfeited their rights, and their spoilers may at least give a colour of justice to their proceedings. But the Parliament of Britain, bolder in iniquity, and inebriated with too copious draughts of their own fancied omnipotence, disdained to cloak their projected speculation by any plausible artifices or specious appearances whatever; leaping all the bounds of decency at once, without even the slightest surmise of guilt or demerit on our part, immediately after the most express acknowledgments of our affectionate zeal and generosity, they proudly proclaimed themselves our masters, the absolute disposers of our lives and properties, and attempted, at a single blow, to tumble us from the exalted station of freemen down to the low level of vassals and slaves.

The idea of raising a revenue on the Colonies by Parliamentary grants, was first conceived under the administration of that sagacious financier, Mr. Grenville, and was given birth to by an act of the fourth of George III, imposing certain duties, as the preamble recites, for "improving the revenue of the Kingdom, and for extending and securing the navigation and commerce between Great Britain and His Majesty's Dominions in America." The language of this act was novel, and its principle dangerous in the extremest degree; but as men had been habituated to regard the power of superintending and regulating the trade of the Empire as resident in the Parliament, these impositions, which were a real deviation, partly concealed themselves under the covert of common and familiar notions, and did not give such immediate alarm as the nature of them in reality required. The publick attention, too, was presently engrossed and diverted from the former, by that subsequent and more flagrant symptom of an usurped authority—the Stamp Act—amid the terror of which, lesser grievances were forgotten or overlooked.

This act was passed shortly after, and was so obvious in its principle, and so burdensome in its exactions, that it forcibly struck the imagination of every man, and inflamed every breast with a desire of opposition. It was easily perceived that a resolution had been taken to leave the inhabitants of these Colonies not even the shadow of liberty. The preface runs thus: "Whereas, by an act made in the last session of Parliament, several duties were granted, appropriated, and continued, towards defraying the expenses of defending, protecting, and securing the British Colonies and Plantations in America; and whereas it is necessary that provision be made for raising a further revenue, within your Majesty's Dominions in America, towards defraying the said expenses: we, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons of Great Britain, have resolved to give and grant unto your Majesty the several rates and duties hereinafter mentioned." These rates and duties were so numerous and exorbitant, that the anxiety of the Colonists was stimulated, as well by the apprehension of being overburdened and exhausted for the present, as by the deplorable prospect of losing all the felicitous advantages of freedom for the future. In fact, these Colonies are not yet advanced to that state of maturity and perfection to be capable of supporting any considerable weight of taxes, especially in the present confined state of their commerce, and would have been much drained and impoverished by the constant efflux of their little stock through such various and extended channels.

The magnanimous resistance of the Americans, on this occasion, deserves the highest acclamations of mankind, and the warmest gratitude of posterity. They sent up the most respectful petitions to the Throne; but, like wise men, knowing that intentional injuries and oppressions are not to be eluded or baffled by the feeble force of supplicatory addresses to the justice and humanity of those from whom the evils flow, they corroborated their entreaties, by a suspension of those commercial benefits on which the interests of Britain so much depend. The Ministry, little prepared for such an event, were confounded and abashed. They were obliged, though with all the reluctance and chagrin of disappointed avarice, to recede from their darling scheme, and, with an awkward grace, instead of admitting the justice and propriety of our complaints, which must have restrained their future sallies, they founded a repeal of the act solely upon the principle of inexpediency, because "the continuance of it would be attended with many inconveniences, and might be productive of consequences greatly detrimental to the commercial interests of the Kingdoms."*

* See 6th of George III, Chapter xi.

But to give us the fullest conviction that Parliament intended not to resign any part of her claims in our favour, the famous declaratory act was passed immediately upon the back of the repeal, expressly asserting, that "several of the Houses of Representatives in His Majesty's Colonies and Plantations in America had of late, against law, claimed to themselves, or to the General Assemblies of the same, the sole and exclusive right of imposing duties and taxes, upon His Majesty's subjects in the said Colonies and Plantations, &c.; and that the King in Parliament had, and of right ought to have, full power and authority to make laws and statutes of sufficient force and validity to bind the Colonies and people of America in all cases whatsoever.*"

The claim deemed exceptionable by this act is an exclusive right of taxation to our General Assemblies, which is said to be "against law," "derogatory to the legislative authority of Parliament, and inconsistent with the dependency of the Colonies on the Crown of Great Britain;" and in consequence thereof, it is rejected in the most peremptory terms, by a declaration of Parliamentary right to bind us in all cases whatsoever.

What is the most natural construction that ought to be put upon this claim of unlimited domination? If there was no design to exercise it, where was the policy of holding it out, as it were, in terrorem to the people of America? Why so inflexibly tenacious of an abstract inefficient right, never intended to be made use of, as some men preposterously affect to consider it? At a time when the deepest jealousies and discontents had been fomented, would it not have been prudent and politic to have maintained a profound silence concerning such tremendous pretensions, which must necessarily keep up a suspicious, apprehensive, and dissatisfied temper in the Colonies? It is evident this act was designed as a publick testimony against the exemption demanded by us from the taxing power assumed by the British Legislature, with a view to some future exertions of it; and if we could have entertained any doubt of this at first, the succeeding statute, enacted in the 7th of George III, must be regarded as a clear and unambiguous solution of it.

"Whereas it is expedient that a revenue should be raised in your Majesty's Dominions in America, for making a more certain and adequate provision for defraying the charge of administration of justice, and the support of civil Government, and towards further defraying the expenses of defending, protecting, and securing the said Dominions: we the Commons of Great Britain, have resolved to give and grant," &c. This is the beginning of the act imposing duties on red and white lead, painters' colours, teas, and paper, where the pernicious principle of taxation which pervades the two former is equally predominant. The purpose of raising an American revenue, or, which is perfectly the same thing, of taxing us, is open and avowed. All that perplexity and obscurity in which the minds of some men seem to be involved respecting the true nature of this act, is the result either of extreme ignorance or of extreme hypocrisy. It needs no comment, but explains itself. It is confessedly designed to raise a revenue; and every imposition for that purpose, whether port duty, excise, poll-tax, or land-tax, is equally to be ranked under the general head of taxes, and is constantly and familiarly mentioned as such by all historians and political writers.

Administration expected, that by varying the mode and making it less offensive, by being less cumbrous and more remote in its operation, we might be unwarily detached from a punctual adherence to principles, and might, in that way, be gradually brought to submit to taxation in its fullest latitude. But we were more clear-sighted and cautious than was supposed. We viewed the act in its proper colours, and opposed it with suitable vigour, firmness, and spirit. The expedient employed on the preceding occasion was again revived; our imports ceased, and redress in part attended it. Had we still discontinued them, it is possible we might have been completely successful, and by improving a favourable conjuncture might have obtained a satisfactory and permanent adjustment of the dispute.

In the partial revocation of this act, the ground of inexpediency is still maintained, and the claim and exercise of taxation still preserved. The duties on all the articles except tea, were withdrawn; because "the said duties, in so far as they affect the produce and manufacture of Great Britain, tend to the prejudice and discouragement thereof, and are, therefore, contrary to the true principles of commerce." This reason did not extend to the article of tea, which is a foreign production; and therefore it was resolved to reserve the duty upon that, as an indication that the others were not repealed with any design to forego the arrogated right of taxing us, but with a view to some further more insidious attempts upon our liberties.

The progressive evolutions of this execrable scheme shall be traced in my next paper. In the mean time, suffice it to observe, that one soul animates these and every successive act of Administration—a desire to enslave this Country, and eat up the fruits of our industry in an endless train of taxes.

COMMITTEE OF CONGRESS TO JOHN HANCOCK, PRESIDENT.

Albany, November 23, 1775.

SIR: We arrived the 16th, in the evening, at New-Windsor, having been detained part of a day by Baird. The morning following we rowed down the river about eight miles, to the fortress in the Highlands, where we spent the day in making such observations as we thought would be of most use to the Congress, and wish our time would have permitted us to render them more perfect, without interfering with the other commissions with which we have been honoured.

We found the fortress in the care of Messrs. Bedlow, Grenell, and Lawrence, whom the Convention of New-York had appointed Commissioners to superintend the work, which was carried on under the direction of Mr. Romans, agreeable to his plan presented to the Congress.

The garrison consisted of one hundred men, being the remainder of two Companies from which draughts were made to complete those that were sent up to the northward while they continued recruiting; exclusive of these, there were at the fortress twenty-seven carpenters, sixteen masons, two smiths, and fifty-nine labourers, a clerk, and a steward.

We must own that we found the fort in a less defensible situation than we had reason to expect, owing chiefly to an injudicious disposition of the labour, which has hitherto been bestowed on the barracks, the block-house, and the southwest curtain. This Mr. Romans assured us would be finished in a week, and would mount fourteen cannon; but, when completed, we consider as very insufficient in itself to answer the purpose of defence, though it is doubtless necessary to render the whole fortification perfect; but as it is the least useful, we think it should have been last finished; it does not command the reach to the southward, nor can it injure a vessel turning the West Point; and after she has got round, a small breeze or even the tide, will enable a ship to pass the curtain in a few minutes. The principal strength of the fortress will consist in the south bastion, on which no labour has as yet been bestowed; a vessel turning the point is immediately exposed to its fire. The platform of this will be raised fifty-seven feet above high water mark, when completed, which gives it an elevation of about eleven degrees above the guns of a vessel at the West Point, supposing she carries them twelve feet above the surface of the water, according to Mr. Romans's account. On this bastion it is proposed to mount eleven heavy cannon. The block-house is finished, and has six four-pounders mounted in it, and is at present the only strength of the fortress. The barracks consist of fourteen rooms, each of which may contain thirty men; but they are not yet completed, for want of bricks with which to run up the chimneys.

The fortress is unfortunately commanded by all the grounds about it, and is much exposed to an attack by land; but the most obvious defect is, that the grounds on the West Point are higher than the fortress, behind which point an enemy may land without the least danger. In order to render the pass impassable, it seems necessary that this place should be occupied, and batteries thrown up on the opposite shore, where they may be erected with little expense, as the earth is said to be pretty free from stone. This will indeed render our work very expensive; but we fear nothing short of it will be sufficient to avail us of the winding of the river. Mr. Romans informs us of a place, about four miles lower down the river, which is free from the inconveniency we have mentioned, and where the elevation is much greater. Had we had more time, we should have gone and examined it.

We would submit to the Congress whether it may not be proper to send some persons, better versed in those matters than we are, to take an accurate survey of the Highlands, and to pitch on those spots on which batteries may be most cheaply, expeditiously, and advantageously raised.

We found at the fortress, eight nine-pounders and six carriages; forty-two six-pounders, and eighteen carriages; sixteen four-pounders and four carriages; five three-pounders, one hundred and one nine-pound shot, one hundred and eighty six-pound shot, one hundred and forty four-pound shot, forty-three double headed six-pound shot, nineteen double headed four-pound shot; cannon cartridges: four hundred of nine-pound, four hundred of six-pound, eighty-eight of four-pound; one hundred and eighty-five pounds of match; one hundred pounds of musket balls; one hundred pounds of grape shot; one hundred and seventy pounds of powder.

These are all the particulars which our short stay at the fort enabled us to collect. We offer our own sentiments, in matters with which we are so little acquainted, with the greatest diffidence, and submit them implicitly to the Congress; but cannot help wishing, when we consider the importance of the object, that they would take the opinion of those who are capable of giving them more useful information.

We congratulate you and the Congress in the happy success of our arms; and remain, with the greatest respect, your and their most obedient humble servants,

ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON,
ROBERT TREAT PAINE,
JOHN LANGDON.

P. S. We propose to set out to-morrow for Ticonderoga.

WILLIAM WATSON TO STEPHEN MOYLAN.

Plymouth, November 23, 1775.

SIR: Your favours of the 16th and 17th instant came to hand; that of the 16th, directing me to deliver to Charles Coffin, &c., their bedding and wearing apparel, shall be punctually complied with. White only has as yet applied. I shall take every necessary precaution before I deliver any article to them. I have received the seven half joes of Captain Coit, and shall add them to the sales of the cargo, and shall, when completed, forward the accounts to his Excellency General Washington.

You are pleased to ask my opinion relative to giving prisoners the cash found in their pockets. It really appears to me that there can be no general rule established for this matter. Circumstances may make that mode of conduct proper, which, admitting other circumstances, would be very injurious to the publick interest; add to this the uncertainty whether the cash found in the pockets of prisoners belongs to themselves or to the cargoes. His Excellency can, if he thinks proper, refer matters of this nature to Committees of Inspection, who will be most likely to come at circumstances.

Captain Coit has had much difficulty, and has been greatly perplexed with an uneasy set of fellows, who have got soured by the severity of the season, and are longing for the leeks and onions of Connecticut. He has, through his difficulties, conducted well; I think no man could have managed better. He, with Captain Martindale, sailed this morning, and are now out of sight. It is fine weather, and I hope soon to be able in some measure to alleviate his Excellency's anxiety respecting them, by giving him some good accounts of their success. Captain Coit has got some men from these parts, who are pilots, and can take charge of any prizes he may take. The severe cold weather has very much retarded our getting these vessels to sea, but it is a consolation to think that this same severe weather has put back supplies from England, and that we are as likely to meet with them now as if we had sailed a fortnight sooner.

I am, Sir, your most humble servant,

WILLIAM WATSON.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

In Committee of Safety at Portsmouth, November 23, 1775.

This may certify that Mr. John Stavers has been before us; declared that he believed the late acts of the British Parliament, complained of by the Americans, to be unconstitutional and unjust; and that he was determined, to the utmost of his power, to oppose them, and join with the people of this Colony in defending themselves against their now declared enemies, or words to the like purpose. Therefore, this Committee are of opinion that he ought not to be molested or hindered from his business by any person, on suspicion of his being unfriendly to the American cause, unless his future conduct should give occasion therefor.

ADDRESS OF THE TOWN OF AXBRIDGE.

Address of the Recorder, Alderman, Burgesses, and principal Inhabitants of the Town of Axbridge, in the County of Somerset, presented to His Majesty by Thomas Hotchkin, Esq., Recorder of the said Town.

The dutiful Address of the Recorder, Alderman, Burgesses, and principal Inhabitants of the Town of Axbridge, in the County of Somerset.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

At a time when we think every individual who has enjoyed the happiness of your Majesty's paternal care should stand forth in vindication of those measures which, we doubt not, are the result of sound and good policy, however misrepresented by wicked, designing, and factious men, receive, Sire, this dutiful Address of your Majesty's ancient and loyal Corporation of the Borough of Axbridge, who lament, even unto sadness, that, at a time when the success of your Majesty's arms had gained, and the wisdom of your Councils had taught us to look up to the blessings of a long and lasting peace, a set of fratricides should have arisen up among your own people, who wish to destroy that happiness of which they cannot partake; men, whose circumstances being wretched, whose expectations still worse, hope to gain, from anarchy and confusion, that relief which decency and order never can afford them.

The conduct of your Majesty's American subjects is painful to the feelings of the human heart; that those who ought to have been the first to have stood forth to vindicate the honour of your Majesty's crown, and the happiness of their fellow-subjects in Great Britain, should, wantonly and unprovoked, exert the first efforts of their strength to wound the breast which warned them into the power to hurt, is an extreme of wickedness unknown to past times and Countries.

Sensible of the blessings we have ourselves enjoyed under your Majesty's most excellent Government, trusting that our posterity may be as happy and blessed in your royal descendants as we have been in you, may it please your Majesty to be assured of our inviolable attachment and loyalty to your person and family, and to our present Constitution, both in church and state; for the support of which we will most cheerfully contribute every assistance in our power, conscious that whatever we may advance will be received as humble dews from the earth, and returned in showers of plenty and increase.

We are, may it please your Majesty, your Majesty's ever dutiful subjects.

VIRGINIA COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

A DECLARATION.

Whereas divers reports have been propagated, that the Army destined to guard and protect the inhabitants of the Counties of Norfolk and Princess Anne, and the parts adjacent, were empowered and directed to destroy the houses and properties of particular persons in some of the Towns in those parts, who have been justly alarmed by such false and malicious reports: In order, therefore, to do justice to the publick in general, and to satisfy all private persons in particular, the Committee of Safety think it necessary to declare, in the most solemn manner, that the abovementioned reports have been propagated without having the least foundation in truth, it having been determined, and the Army aforesaid being instructed, particularly to support and protect the persons and properties of all friends to America, and not wantonly to damage or destroy the property of any person whatsoever.

By order of the Committee:

EDMUND PENDLETON, President.

November 24, 1775.

FREDERICK COUNTY (MARYLAND) COMMITTEE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read December 1, 1775.]

Frederick County, Maryland, November 24, 1775.

SIR: I am directed, by the Committee of this County, to transmit to you copies of the examinations of Allan Cameron, John Smith, John Connolly, and a letter to one Gibson, from Connolly, and Lord Dunmore's speech to White Eyes, and proposals by Connolly, to General Gage, for raising an army for the destruction of the liberties of the Colonies. Any orders relative to the prisoners will be strictly observed, the Committee and inhabitants of this County being determined to pursue every measure which the Congress may recommend to them as necessary for the preservation of these Colonies, at this time of imminent danger.

I am, very respectfully, Sir, your most humble servant,

JOHN HANSON, JUN., Chairman.

The Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the Congress.

In Committee Chamber, Fredericktown, Maryland, }
November 23, 1775. }

Allan Cameron, Dr. John Smith, and John Connolly, being taken into custody, were brought before the Committee, and the following examinations were taken.

Allan Cameron, a native of Scotland, which he left for an affair of honour, and came to Virginia with an intention to purchase back lands, and intended to go to Henderson for that purpose; but finding it difficult to pass through the back country, encouraged by Lord Dunmore and promise of advancement, he agreed to accept a commission as First Lieutenant in the Regiment to be raised by Colonel Connolly.

Dr. John Smith, a native of Scotland, left Charles County, Maryland, for political reasons, and intended to go to the Mississippi; but finding it impracticable, he returned to Norfolk; and being induced by Lord Dunmore, with promises of preferment, he accepted the appointment of Surgeon to Colonel Connolly's Regiment.

John Connolly, a native of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, admits his letter to Gibson, a copy being shown him. He went, the 25th of July, from Fort Dunmore to Lord Dunmore, and delivered him proposals in substance the same with that found in his possession, and in his handwriting. That he was sent by Lord Dunmore to General Gage, with letters and his proposals to Gage; that he left Boston the 14th or 15th of September, and returned to Lord Dunmore in the middle of October; that he brought instructions from General Gage to Lord Dunmore, who granted him a commission of Lieutenant-Colonel commandant of a Regiment to be raised in the back parts and Canada, with powers to nominate officers, who were to be confirmed by Lord Dunmore; that he is now on his way to Detroit, where he was to meet his commission and instructions; that he left Lord Dunmore about ten days ago, who had with him one sloop of sixteen guns, and another of eighteen; that the ship in which Lord Dunmore is on board is armed with six or eight guns; that a vessel of twenty guns is daily expected from Jamaica; that John Smith never was appointed Surgeon; and that he told Smith if he was the man he represented himself to be, it was possible he would appoint him.

Resolved, That the said Allan Cameron and John Connolly be kept in close and safe custody until the orders of the Congress be known; and that the Chairman transmit copies of the examinations and papers to the honourable the President of the Congress, and to the Conventions or Councils of Safety of the Colony of Virginia, and this Province.

Resolved, That Dr. John Smith be kept in custody till the further orders of this Committee.

Proposals for raising an Army to the Westward, and for effectually obstructing a communication between the Southern and Northern Governments.

As I have, by directions from his Excellency Lord Dunmore, prepared the Ohio Indians to act in concert with me against His Majesty's enemies in that quarter, and have also despatched intelligence to the different officers of the militia on the frontiers of Augusta County, in Virginia, giving them Lord Dunmore's assurance, that such of them as shall hereafter evince their loyalty to His Majesty, by putting themselves under my command, when I should appear amongst them with proper authority for that purpose, of a confirmation of titles to their lands, and the quantity of three hundred acres to all who should take up arms in support of the Constitution, when the present rebellion subsided, I will undertake to penetrate through Virginia, and join his Excellency Lord Dunmore, at Alexandria, early next spring, on the following conditions and authority:

First. That your Excellency will give me a commission to act as Major commandant of such troops as I may raise and embody on the frontier, with a power to command to the westward, and employ such serviceable French and English partisans as I can engage, by pecuniary rewards or otherwise.

Secondly. That your Excellency will give orders to Captain Lord, at the Illinois, to remove himself, with the garrison under his command, from Fort George to Detroit, by the Auabache, bringing with him all the artillery, stores, &c., &c.; to facilitate which undertaking, he is to have authority to hire boats, horses, Frenchmen, Indians, &c., &c.; to proceed with all possible expedition on that route, as the weather may occasionally permit, and to put himself under my command on his arrival at Detroit.

Thirdly. That the Commissary at Detroit shall be empowered to furnish such provisions as I may judge necessary for the good of the service, and that the commanding officer shall be instructed to give every possible assistance in encouraging the French and Indians of the settlement to join me.

Fourthly. That an officer of artillery be immediately sent with me, to pursue such route as I may find most expedient to gain Detroit, with orders to have such pieces of light ordnance as may be thought requisite for the demolishing of Fort Dunmore and Fort Fincastle, if resistance should be made by the Rebels in possession of those garrisons.

Fifthly. That your Excellency will empower me to make such reasonable presents, to the Indian chiefs and others, as may urge them to act with vigour in the execution of my orders.

Sixthly. That your Excellency will send to Lord Dunmore such arms as may be spared, in order to equip such persons as may be willing to serve His Majesty at our junction, in the vicinity of Alexandria, &c., &c.

If your Excellency judges it expedient for the good of the service to furnish me with the authority and other requisites I have mentioned, I shall embrace the earliest opportunity of setting off for Canada, and shall immediately despatch Lord Dunmore's armed schooner, which now awaits my commands, with an account of what your Excellency has done, and that I shall be ready, if practicable, to join his Lordship by the 20th of April, at Alexandria, where the troops under my command may fortify themselves, under cover of the men of war on that station.

If, on the contrary, your Excellency should not approve of what I propose, you will be good enough to immediately honour me with your despatches to the Earl of Dunmore, that I may return as early as possible.

Portsmouth, August 9, 1775.

I have safely arrived here, and am happy to the greatest degree in having so fortunately escaped the narrow inspection of my enemies, the enemies to their Country, to good order and Government. I should esteem myself defective in point of friendship towards you, should I neglect to caution you to avoid an over-zealous exertion of what is now so ridiculously called patriotick spirit; but, on the contrary, to deport yourself with that moderation for which you have been always remarkable, and which must, in this instance, tend to your honour and advantage. You may be assured from me, Sir, that nothing but the greatest unanimity now prevails at home, and that the innovating spirit amongst us here is looked upon as ungenerous and undutiful; and that the utmost exertions of the powers of Government, if necessary, will be used, to convince the infatuated people of their folly. I could, I assure you, Sir, give you such convincing proofs of what I assert, and from which every reasonable person may conclude the effects, that nothing but madness could operate upon a man so far as to overlook his duty to the present Constitution, and to form unwarrantable associations with enthusiasts, whose ill-timed folly must draw upon them inevitable destruction.

His Lordship desires you to present his hand to Captain White Eyes, and to assure him that he is very sorry that he had not the pleasure of seeing him at the treaty, or that the situation of affairs prevented him from coming down.

Believe me, dear Sir, that I have no motive in writing my sentiments thus to you, further than to endeavour to steer you clear of the misfortunes which, I am confident, must involve, but unhappily, too many.

I have sent you an address from the people of Great Britain to the people of America, and I desire you to consider it attentively, which will, I flatter myself, convince you of the idleness of many declamations, and of the absurdity of an intended slavery.

Give my love to George, and tell him he shall hear from me, and I hope to his advantage. Interpret the enclosed speech to Captain White Eyes, from his Lordship. Be prevailed upon to shun the popular error, and judge for yourself; act as a good subject, and expect the reward due to your services.

I am, dear Sir, your sincere friend and servant,

JOHN CONNOLLY.

To Mr. John Gibson, near Fort Dunmore.

Brother Captain WHITE EYES:

I am glad to hear your good speeches, sent me by Major Connolly; and you may be assured I shall put the one end of the belt, which you have sent me, into the hands of our great King, who will be glad to hear from his brothers the Delawares, and will take a strong hold of it. You may rest satisfied that our foolish young men shall never be permitted to have your lands; but, on the contrary, the great King will protect you, and preserve you in the possession of them. Our young people in the country have been very foolish, and done many imprudent things, for which they soon must be sorry, and of which I make no doubt they have acquainted you. But I must desire you not to listen to them, as they would be willing that you should act equally foolish with themselves; but rather let what you hear pass in at one ear and out at the other, so that it may make no impression on your heart, until you hear from me fully, which will be so soon as I can give further information, who am your friend and brother.

Captain White Eyes will please to acquaint the Corn Stalk with these my sentiments, also, as well the chiefs of the Mingoes and the other Six Nations.

Your sincere friend and elder brother, DUNMORE.

A true copy from the minutes:

UPTON SHEREDINE, Clerk pro tem.

JOHN HANCOCK AND THOMAS CUSHING TO THE COUNCIL OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Philadelphia, November 24, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Mr. Revere, the express, informs us this morning he is setting out for home, so that by his return we are not able to give you any advice with respect to the subject of your letter of the 11th instant. The determination of the question referred to in that letter, either one way or the other, so nearly affects the interests of, and will be so important in its consequences to the Colony we have the honour to represent, that we dare not venture our opinions what would be the sentiments of Congress upon such a measure as the House proposes, and therefore are clearly of opinion the matter ought to be laid before the Congress, and their sentiments taken upon the same; but we have been so crowded with the consideration of so many interesting and important matters since Mr. Revere's arrival, that there has been no opportunity for this as yet, and therefore must defer at present giving you the advice you request. Your application for money is now under the consideration of a Committee of Congress.

We conclude, with great respect, your Honours' most obedient humble servants,

JOHN HANCOCK,
THOMAS CUSHING.

To the Honourable the Council of Massachusetts-Bay.

WALTER LIVINGSTON TO THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

[Read November 30, 1775.]

Albany, November 24, 1775.

SIR: Before the receipt of your letter respecting the disposition of the prisoners taken at Chambly and St. John's, those from the former place were arrived in Connecticut, and there distributed in the several Townships, by order of his Honour Governour Trumbull; those taken at St. John's were sailed from this about four hours, and were ordered to land at Hoffman's, in Dutchess County, and to proceed from thence to Canaan, there to be subject to the directions of Governour Trumbull. On the receipt of the orders from Congress, I immediately wrote, by express, to Captain Mott, who commanded the guard, not to land the men, but to proceed with his sloop to New-Windsor, and there disembark them. I was under apprehensions, if they were suffered to pass our fort in the Highlands, they would rise and sail down to the man-of-war; therefore ordered them to stop on this side, to prevent their passing the fort unnoticed. I sent to the commanding officer in that garrison not to let any sloops pass downwards, without previously sending on board, till he had an account of the prisoners being landed; and to send the women, children, and baggage to Amboy, from thence to Bordentown and Philadelphia, will save at least three hundred Pounds. Captain Mott will want his whole guard to march the prisoners through a woody country. I therefore ordered him to apply for a party of Minute-Men, to be commanded by a Captain, to escort the officers to Lebanon.

I sent Captain Mott a copy of my letter and of the resolves of Congress, both of which I desired him to send to Governour Trumbull, that he might know why Major-General Schuyler's orders were not complied with. Captain Mott took with him eight days' provisions, which will not be sufficient; yet, as matters were circumstanced, I could not send an additional supply, without detaining them, as there was no sloop ready to sail from hence. I have requested Captain Mott to put the commissioned officers on their parole, according to the first resolve. I have ordered two months' provisions, for one thousand men, to be landed at the fort in the Highlands, in compliance with a late resolve of Congress.

I am your and the Congress's most obedient and most humble servant,

WALTER LIVINGSTON, Dep. Com. Gen.

To the Hon. John Hancock.

P. S. On receiving my commission, I wrote a letter to Congress returning them thanks for the employment; which letter I always imagined they had received, till yesterday, when I was informed by Robert R. Livingston, Jun., Esq., one of the members, and to whom I enclosed it, that it never came to his hands. I hope none of the members will impute my seeming negligence to want of respect.

Yours, &c.,

W. L.

JACOB BAYLEY TO COLONEL LITTLE.

Newbury, November 24, 1775.

SIR: Means have been taken, I don't doubt, to secure the conquest at Canada, and also to connect that Colony with ours; yet, as I am nigh to it, and somewhat acquainted with that country, would beg leave to let you know my thoughts of the matter. I say to you, as I need some one of my acquaintance who may be able to assert my sincerity, I am not able any other way to improve the one talent I have, being settled in so remote a part of the country, and since the war applying myself wholly in carrying on the settlement of this country, so that of late I have had but little acquaintance with gentlemen who now are at the head of Colony affairs.

I must suppose that it will be needful that a body of men are the next spring stationed in Canada; for, if the whole is not subdued this season, it must be done. If taken, must be kept from France, as well as England. It would not surprise me, if, after the French had assisted us to drive off the Regulars, they should take it out of our hands for France. Of what vast importance to us is that country, and how easy it is defended; but one fortress commands the whole from any foreign power, and whatever nation or people holds that fortress commands all the back settlements of the United Colonies, and the most extensive fur and skin trade in the universe; I cannot but be thankful. The counsels of our adversaries are turned into foolishness, in respect to Canada; for if they had taken possession of Quebeck and New-York, with what strength they brought to Boston, how would the matter have been by this time with the Colonies? But Providence has interfered in our behalf. I would not lose so precious a jewel as Canada. The great difficulty we have, or shall have, to keep it, is for want of a communication, by land, into that country, altogether by land; which we may have from the St. John's, which will not exceed ninety miles—by which quick intelligence and an army may be thrown into that country from this in six days. No danger then of a fleet and army from Britain or France. We can provide here for any number on their march, and when in Canada, there is no want of a road; also will connect these people with ours. Trade might be carried on, or proposed, which will secure the trading part. Our people, doubtless, are amongst them, which will wear out their Popish bigotry; until that is the case, no great trust to the French. Supposing we set up for independency, how much value is the fur and skin trade of that vast extensive river, lakes, and country, (doubtless a million a year.) On the whole, considering every circumstance, convenience, and situation, I could heartily urge that you use your endeavour that such a road be thought of and done early, as early as April. I would do all in my power to forward it. The course from this is nearly forty degrees northwest to Montreal. We are sixty miles east of Crown Point; nearly north from Hartford; northwest from Boston one hundred and forty miles; from Newbury northwesterly one hundred and twenty-five miles; about the same distance from Portsmouth. But the maps will inform. Dr. Langton's is a very good one. If you remember, it is but two years last October that you, Esquire Stevens, and myself, sent a surveyor, chainman, &c., who measured and marked a road to Missisquoi Bay; and it is undoubtedly good for a road, so far, which is two-thirds of the way. Indeed, our line terminated forty-five degrees north latitude. I had thoughts that the road could be carried to the east of Missisquoi Bay. But there is danger of drowned land: should it be so, a ferry at the mouth of Missisquoi River, which will be but three-quarters of a mile; cross Windmill Point another ferry of the same width; then a good road may be had to Canada, at thirty miles distance, about six miles above Montreal. But I would, if practicable, make a road without being troubled with water. Water carriage is good, and answers an excellent end; but what I would is, that if we have a sudden call from Canada, we may repair thither without any hinderance. For suppose Canada to be in our hands next May or June, we are certain a fleet and army are in the mouth of the St. Lawrence, destined to reduce Quebeck. An army sufficient to repel might be sent this way seasonable; and I must think that in the hands of the Ministry it is their greatest advantage against, and in our hands as much and more, if can be: and I have always wondered that the wise heads against us, if any there be, had not struck on New-York and Quebeck, which would have cut off the communication between the north and south Colonies, and harassed our frontiers, which are of a great extent. The Indians would have been in their favour. We could not have stood out till now; therefore let us make by the advantage they have given us. I don't know the situation of the entrance into York, but I should think, if possible, that harbour ought to be secured, for divers reasons. York is of more consequence to us than all the harbours to the east. How easy would it have been for the King's Troops and shipping to have cut off the communication between the North and South Colonies, by taking possession of New-York and the North River; and would not numbers have joined them at York, and will not the King take possession there this winter? I trow not. I believe that if the King had possession of Canada, before next June there would be a communication open for them by Albany. Even now, in the winter, fortifications ought to be built at Sandy-Hook, to keep out, &c. I only speak of this as it comes in my way. I have sent Colonel Bedel to see to the road on that side; but I am afraid the post will not get there, it is so bad crossing the lake at this season. If this road was done, in four days would come tidings. The affair of this road must be soon concluded upon, as provisions should be provided in the winter, and it is much easier got now than in April or May. I should be glad to have a return from you, as soon as possible, how your publick affairs stand. I would be willing to do any thing that might contribute to so glorious a cause as we are now engaged in. I have wrote, in a broken manner, my thoughts. You may pick out what of mine you like, and add to your own; perhaps you will, in so much, find something. When you go to Boston, save your and our Scotch people, if they are friends. I would recommend that you continue in the service, if you are like to be of service. I don't say that I will not join the Army in the spring, if health remains. I am now in good health. All are well here. My best regards to the honourable gentlemen in the Army.

I am your humble servant,

JACOB BAYLEY.

To Colonel Little.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO AARON WILLARD.

By His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esquire, Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the UNITED COLONIES.

To AARON WILLARD, Esq.:

The honourable Continental Congress having lately passed a resolve, contained in the following words, viz: "That two persons be sent, at the expense of these Colonies, to Nova-Scotia, to inquire into the state of that Colony, the disposition of the inhabitants towards the American cause, and the condition of the Fortifications, Dock-Yards, the quantity of Artillery and Warlike Stores, and the number of Soldiers, Sailors, and Ships of War there, and transmit the earliest intelligence to General Washington," I do hereby constitute and appoint you, the said Aaron Willard, Esq., to be one of the persons to undertake this business; and as the season is late, and this a work of great importance, I entreat and request that you will use the utmost despatch, attention, and fidelity, in the execution of it. The necessity of acting with a proper degree of caution and secrecy is too apparent to need recommendation. You will keep an account of your expenses, and, upon your return, will be rewarded in a suitable manner for the fatigue of your journey and the services you render your Country by conducting and discharging this business with expedition and fidelity.

Given under my hand, this twenty-fourth day of November, 1775.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

[The same to Moses Child, Esq.]

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE COMMITTEE OF COUNCIL OF MASSACHUSETTS-BAY.

Cambridge, November 24, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Captain Aaron Willard recommends Mr. Moses Child to be his colleague in the journey to Nova-Scotia. As I know nothing of this gentleman, I cannot approve or disapprove of him. Mr. Willard informs me he is well known unto Doctor Taylor. If you think him trustworthy, you will please to fill up the instructions with his name, which Captain Willard will give unto you.

I am, with great respect, yours, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. Committee of Council of Massachusetts-Bay.

P. S. You will please to furnish Captain Willard with letters to Captain O'Bryan and to Colonel Cargill to give every assistance to him and his companion on their tour.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. III.

STEPHEN MOYLAN TO SAMUEL FREEMAN.

Cambridge, November 24, 1775.

SIR: I have it in command from his Excellency to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the 17th instant. He approves much of what has been done by the General Court for the defence of your port, which he hopes will have every necessary effect.

Should any thing more be wanting, it is incumbent on the people of the country to exert themselves for their and the publick defence. The Congress are so much of that opinion, that they have recommended it to each of the Colonies to provide for their particular internal safety.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

STEPHEN MOYLAN.

To Samuel Freeman, Esq., Falmouth.

ADDRESS FROM THE GENERAL OFFICERS TO THE SOLDIERY OF THE GRAND CONTINENTAL ARMY.

Cambridge, November 24, 1775.

The Generals flatter themselves that the new establishment of the Army will be not less agreeable to the men in general, than it is calculated for action and economy; that they shall find in them the same forwardness and zeal to continue in the service of their Country at this critical juncture, which they demonstrated when they were first called out. It gives them great concern that the circumstances of the Continent renders it absolutely necessary to lay aside so many deserving officers and worthy citizens; but the vast expense attending the maintenance of so many Regiments might have disabled the Continent from persevering in its resolution of defending their liberties, if the contest should be of any continuance. With this view, therefore, the Regiments have been reduced from thirty-eight to twenty-six. No prejudice or partiality has had place in the appointment of the officers. Those who have appeared the best qualified to perform all the duties, and undergo all the fatigues of a military life, have been chosen. In the formation of a new Army, though courage, integrity, and zeal for their Country, are requisites, they are not sufficient alone; a tolerable constitution, a certain degree of bodily vigour, and activity of mind, must be joined to these qualities. Men subject to bodily complaints, or who are possessed of a vivacity of disposition, though brave, and in all other respects unexceptionable, are totally unfit. The present campaign, far from a hard one, furnishes many instances of this truth; for it is notorious that a very considerable number of the officers have, from a puny habit of body, found themselves incapable of fulfilling the duty of their station; that they have, from time to time, been obliged to absent themselves from their post, and that consequently the duty has fallen very heavily upon those that remained. These considerations, alone, have weighed in the present selection of the officers. The affairs of America have now (thanks to the Almighty God) a most promising aspect. The Ministerial Army, with three of their most esteemed Generals at their head, have been able to effect nothing. Instead of overrunning and ravaging the Continent, from north to south, as they boasted they would do, they find themselves ignominiously cooped up within the walls of a single town, (and even that they possessed themselves of by treachery,) suffering all the distresses of a siege. Instead of the defection of any of the Provinces, which the Ministry pledged themselves to the deluded people of England would be the case, the union grows stronger every day. Georgia has acceded to the General Association; Nova-Scotia is manifestly well affected to the same cause; and Canada, from whence your tyrants proposed to pour forth whole hosts for your destruction, keeps pace with, if not surpasses the English Colonies themselves, in zeal and ardour for the common rights of America. Considering, therefore, all these happy circumstances, so much transcending our most sanguine hopes and expectations, it may be affirmed, that nothing but your backwardness and want of perseverance can open the least prospect of success to your enemies.

The cause of liberty is undoubtedly the cause of all; but if any distinction is to be made, the four New-England Provinces are more immediately concerned than the rest. You are the chief object of ministerial hatred and vengeance; you, therefore, are more nearly interested to stand forth. There is the greatest reason to think that if the Southern Colonies were base enough to bargain with these tyrants, they might, by sacrificing you, make what terms they please for themselves. It has been indirectly proposed to them, but they have magnanimously rejected all idea of such distinction. They have determined to stand and fall with you; and, on these principles, have taxed themselves most heavily for the establishment of an army, equal to the purposes of the general defence. But as you were more immediately attacked, as this is the scene of action, but above all, as they have ever placed the greatest confidence in your zeal and valour, they did not think it necessary to raise any bodies, in the other Provinces, for this particular service, which more naturally fell to your lot. Had they supposed it possible that you could be backward or lukewarm, they possibly would have looked out for other means of defence; but as they never entertained a thought so dishonourable to the character of New-England men, no such preparation is made.

We will suppose, for an instance, that a considerable or greater part of you should withdraw yourselves from the service, at this crisis, when victory is, as it were, in your hands, and only waits for your grasping. We will suppose that the post we at present occupy, fortified and secured by such infinite labour, should be abandoned in consequence of your desertion. Would it sit easy upon your consciences; when your villages are plundered and burnt, your wives and children abused or grossly treated, and your whole Provinces laid waste with fire and sword? Would it sit easy on your consciences, we demand, to reflect that these calamities can be only imputed to your want of constancy and perseverance? But to descend from the greater obligation you stand in towards your Country, it may be said that the ease and affluence of your circumstances, as soldiers, might alone prompt you to remain. Never were soldiers whose duty has been so light, never were soldiers whose pay and provision has been so abundant and ample. In fact, your interest and comfort have been so carefully consulted, even to the lowest article, by the Continental Congress, that there is some reason to dread that the enemies to New-England's reputation may hereafter say, it was not principle that saved them, but that they were bribed into the preservation of their liberties.

To conclude, soldiers, concerns of the last importance to you depend on the post you now take. Your reputation and property, your safety, your very existence, is at stake. If you withdraw yourselves from the service, those instruments of ministerial villany will be at liberty to stalk at large, to satiate and glut their brutality, avarice, and cruelty, and the name of a New-England man, now so respectable in the world, become equally contemptible and odious, who, with the certain means of defence in their hands, rather than undergo a few fatigues of war, could patiently see themselves robbed of every thing that men hold most dear; but if you firmly adhere to the righteous standard under which you are arranged, not only your characters will have the highest rank amongst the nations of the earth, but your rights and liberties will be secured against the attempts of tyranny, to the latest posterity.

TO THE WORTHY OFFICERS AND SOLDIERS IN THE AMERICAN ARMY.

Honour will crown every defender of liberty.

GENTLEMEN: Your exertions in the cause of freedom, guided by wisdom, and animated by zeal and courage, have gained you the love and confidence of your grateful countrymen; and they look to you, who are experienced veterans, and trust that you will still be the guardians of America. As I have the honour to be an American, and one among the free millions who are defended by your valour, I would pay the tribute of thanks, and express my gratitude, while I solicit you to continue in your present honourable and important station. I doubt not America will always find enough of her sons ready to flock to her standard and support her freedom: but experience proves that experienced soldiers are more capable of performing the duties of the camp, and better qualified to face the enemy, than others; and, therefore, every friend to America will be desirous that most of the gentlemen who compose the present Army may continue in the service of their Country until liberty, peace, and safety, are established. Although your private concerns may call for your assistance at home, yet the voice of your Country is still louder; and it is painful, to heroic minds, to quit the field when liberty calls, and the voice of injured millions cries, to arms! to arms! Never was a cause more important or glorious than that which you are engaged in. Not only your wives, your children, and distant posterity, but humanity at large, the world of mankind, are interested in it; for if tyranny should prevail in this great Country, we may expect liberty will expire through the world; therefore, more human glory and happiness may depend upon your exertions than ever yet depended upon any of the sons of men! He that is a soldier, in defence of such a cause, needs no title. His post is a post of honour; and although not an Emperor, yet he shall wear a crown of glory, and blessed will be his memory!

The savage and brutal barbarity of our enemies, in burning Falmouth, is a full demonstration that there is not the least remains of virtue, wisdom, or humanity, in the British Court, and that they are fully determined, with fire and sword, to butcher and destroy, beggar and enslave, the whole American people. Therefore, we expect soon to break off all kind of connection with Britain, and form into a grand Republick of the American United Colonies; which will, by the blessing of Heaven, soon work out our salvation, and perpetuate the liberties, increase the wealth, the power, and the glory, of this western world. Notwithstanding the many difficulties we have to encounter, and the rage of our merciless enemies, we have a glorious prospect before us, big with every thing good and great. The farther we enter into the field of independence, our prospect will expand and brighten, and a complete Republick will soon complete our happiness. "Blindness seems to have happened to Britain, that the fullness of America might come in;" and we have every encouragement to "stand fast in the liberties wherewith Heaven has made us free." Persevere, ye guardians of liberty! May success be your constant attendant until the enemies of freedom are no more; and all future generations, as they successively tread the stage of time, and taste the joys of liberty, will rise up and call you blessed.

A FREEMAN.

Cambridge, November 24, 1775.

ADDRESS OF THE BOROUGH OF NEW-WINDSOR.

Address of the High Steward, Mayor, Aldermen, Bailiffs, and Burgesses of the Borough of New-Windsor, in the County of Berks, transmitted to the Right Honourable Lord Viscount Weymouth, one of His Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, and presented to His Majesty.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the High Steward, Mayor, Aldermen, Bailiffs, and Burgesses of the Borough of NEW-WINDSOR, in the County of BERKS.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

At this juncture of publick affairs, while we observe the hostile proceedings of your Colonies in America, and the bold attempt made by them to become independent of the British Legislature; and, at the same time, when we consider how much they have been encouraged in this their rebellious behaviour, by many factious spirits at home, we cannot, on this occasion, remain silent spectators of these transactions without betraying a great want of duty to your Majesty, as well as inattention to the welfare of our Country.

Permit us, Sire, therefore, to approach your sacred Majesty, and to declare our utter detestation of the unnatural conduct of your American subjects, and of the traitorous designs of those at home, who abet and countenance their opposition to your Majesty's Government.

When we reflect, as we frequently do, upon the peculiar blessings we enjoy under your Majesty's wise and just administration, (and greater blessings, we believe, none of our ancestors ever experienced under any monarch who hath swayed the British sceptre,) we cannot but lament that your Majesty's repose should be disturbed by such mischievous commotions, exerted in the remote parts of your Empire; and knowing so well the tender care of your Majesty, for the prosperity of all your subjects, we cannot but wonder that the Colonists should be so unhappily seduced from their duty, as to act repugnant to those laws and that sovereign power which have so long protected them in the enjoyment of all they are possessed of.

Impressed, as we are, with a lively sense of your Majesty's great wisdom and goodness, and of your constant attention to the interest and happiness of your people, we have entire confidence that your Majesty will exert the power intrusted to you by the Constitution, in convincing the disobedient and obstinate of their errors, and in punishing those who shall be found the instigators of a rebellion, which portends such mischief to your Majesty's faithful subjects.

And we are persuaded, as it essentially concerns the honour and dignity of this Country to maintain the just rights of your Majesty over all your subjects in your extensive Dominions, so we trust that all your loyal subjects at home will concur and cheerfully unite in enabling your Majesty to maintain the authority of your Parliament over the Colonies, as the most effectual way, in our apprehensions, to secure their dutiful allegiance to their King, and proper subordination to the Parent State. And, to obtain these desirable ends, we, on our parts, profess ourselves ready, to the utmost of our abilities, to support your Majesty in all such measures as, in your great wisdom, you shall judge expedient; not doubting that when our fellow-subjects in America shall become sensible of their error, and return to their duty, your Majesty, from the benevolence of your mind, will graciously extend your clemency to them.

That the supreme disposer of all events may give success to your Majesty's Councils, and disappoint the secret designs of your enemies, both at home and abroad; and that your Majesty, the great guardian of our laws and liberties, may long reign over a happy and united people; and may the crown of these realms flourish in your royal offspring, to the latest posterity, is the ardent wish and prayer of, may it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects.

COMMITTEE OF NORTHAMPTON (VIRGINIA) TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read December 2, 1775.]

Northampton County, Virginia, November 25, 1775.

SIR: The Committee of this County have transmitted an exact copy of the enclosed to the Committee of Safety at Williamsburgh; but as there is some risk of our boats being intercepted and our despatches destroyed, we thought it prudent to acquaint you of our situation immediately, without loss of time.

I am, by order and in behalf of the Committee, your obedient humble servant,

SAMUEL S. McCROSKEY.

To the Honourable John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

Northampton County, Virginia, November 25, 1775.

SIR: The following information, being gathered from intercepted letters and other authentick testimony, we beg leave to lay the same before you, and hope you will judge it deserving the most serious attention, and lay the same before the Congress:

That Lord Dunmore, on the 14th instant, with a party of Regulars and a number of volunteers, inhabitants of Norfolk, had attacked a party of Provincials near Kemp's Landing, when the latter retreated with the loss of a few men killed and taken, amongst whom is Colonel Joseph Hutchings, made prisoner; that his Lordship had erected the King's standard in Norfolk, and proclaimed all slaves free who would join him and take up arms; that a number of about two hundred slaves immediately joined him, and were furnished with arms and — crowding to him, when the advice came from thence; that the inhabitants of Norfolk and Princess Anne had every one appeared, and taken an oath, of which the enclosed paper (No. 1) is a copy; insomuch, says the writer, that "treason had not one abetter in the extensive County of Princess Anne;" that on the 18th, forty volunteers and forty soldiers set off to take possession of the Great Bridge, and that one hundred men were to join them from Princess Anne, headed by Colonel Jacob Ellgood; that Colonel Willoughby had ordered in all the Princess Anne militia; and that the Governor was at the head of twelve hundred men, and it was expected in a few days would have at least two thousand, all determined to guard the passes to Norfolk and Princess Anne Counties.

This intelligence has exceedingly alarmed the Committee, as we have reason to believe Lord Dunmore will soon pay us a visit here, where we are totally unprepared at present to receive him. Our County forms a peninsula, bounded on the east by the sea, and on the west by Chesapeake Bay, with a number of rivers and navigable creeks for large tenders; our coast eighty miles in extent; our slaves numerous, being more than double the number of whites; our militia not exceeding four hundred men; our people with few arms and less ammunition, for which reason we fear few of them would attempt any resistance; and we even have reason to think, that if Lord Dunmore was to demand our persons, that the people around us would deliver us up, rather than be exposed to the fury of his soldiers and our slaves. A people acting upon such principles certainly deserve but little assistance from the publick; but we beg leave to represent to you in what manner the possession of this place would affect the common cause, and increase his Lordship's influence. Should his Lordship land any troops here, we can have no assistance from the western shore of Virginia, while the coast is guarded by his tenders; and after making himself master of this place, he, no doubt, as he has done in Princess Anne, would compel the people to take up arms, and lead them against the adjacent Counties. In the mean time, the slaves would crowd to his standard, and his Army become formidable in number; and, what we conceive to be most material, he would have possession of near half a million of bushels of grain, by which means he might open exports to the West-Indies and the Army at Boston. In such a situation, those who have manifested their attachment to the American cause would first be exposed to his Lordship's resentment; and we fear the more numerous body of the people would stand censured by their Country, and at a future day be exposed to its vengeance.

In this critical situation, we think it our bounden duty to inform you of our danger, and the danger to which the common interest is exposed, and to pray such immediate assistance and direction as you, in your great wisdom, shall think the importance of the case requires, to encourage the friends of America, and keep the disaffected in awe.

At the last Convention held in this Colony, a number of Minute Companies were directed to be raised in this District, but have never been completed; people in general being averse to the minute service. None of our people have ever been in actual service, and therefore have no officers of experience, on whom they can rely. Great pains have been taken to debauch their minds, and to keep them totally pacifick. Lord Dunmore's tenders have frequently come upon our coast, and have insinuated to our fishermen, and all the lower class of people, that they had nothing to fear, that no harm was intended against them, that they never would injure any other than their Committee men and other principal people, and persuaded many, by these means, that those who advise them to take up arms are their greatest enemies; and perhaps, if matters should soon come to an extremity, we should be exposed to the fury of the people. Many gentlemen here, in short, almost every man of considerable property, is well affected to the American cause; but many forbear openly to declare their sentiments, or take an active part, till they can see some force ready to assist them, and afford a reasonable expectation of succeeding. In such a case, we have reason to believe that some companies of regulars might be instantly raised in these two Counties of Northampton and Accomack, and that the greatest part of the militia might be drawn into service in case of alarm. But as matters at present stand, this Committee having little authority, and we should not be surprised if exports are immediately opened to the West-Indies. This the people of Norfolk have already determined upon, and that County affords great quantities of lumber. This place can, and we fear may be obliged to supply them with grain, if some effectual measures are not taken to prevent it. We have, in this critical and alarming state, in which the general interest of America, the safety of our persons, and all others here who are well affected to the cause, are so deeply interested, thought it most proper to lay this information before your honourable Board, not only as it is a matter of Continental concern, but as troops (in case you should judge it necessary to send any here) can be drawn much quicker and with more safety from the northward than from the western shore of Virginia. Until some active step is taken, this Committee must put up with several enormities; but when they can be properly adjusted or supported, your honourable Board may rely upon their acting with zeal and unanimity; and we hope, if any troops are sent, such directions may be given, that it may appear that this Committee possess the confidence of your body, and have acquitted themselves in the best manner their dangerous and critical situation would admit of.

His Lordship's landed force, exclusive of the Norfolk and Princess Anne volunteers and the negroes, is not considerable. His naval force at present consists of four ships, from sixteen to twenty-two guns each, and a number of sloops, schooners, and boats. His small vessels are often scattered, and at a distance from the ships; and since he has attempted expeditions on shore, we learn that part of the men belonging to the vessels are often absent from their duty on board.

We impatiently wait the result of your deliberation, and in the mean time we are, with the greatest respect, your obedient humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

SAMUEL S. McCROSKEY, Chairman.
GRIFFIN SEITH, JUN., Clerk.

We, the inhabitants of Princess Anne County, being fully sensible of the error and guilt into which this Colony hath been misled, under colour of seeking redress of grievances, and that a set of factious men, styling themselves Committees and Congresses, have violently, and under various pretences, usurped the legislative and executive powers of Government, and are thereby endeavouring to overturn our most happy Constitution, and have incurred the guilt of actual rebellion against our most gracious Sovereign; we have, therefore, taken an oath, abjuring their authority, and solemnly promising, in the presence of Almighty God, we bear faith and true allegiance to his sacred Majesty George III; that we will, to the utmost of our power and ability, support, maintain, and defend his crown and dignity, against all traitorous attempts and conspiracies whatsoever.

And whereas armed bodies of men are collected in various parts of this Colony, without any legal authority, we wish them to be informed that, however unwilling we shall be to shed the blood of countrymen, we must, in discharge of our duty to God and the King, and in support of the Constitution and laws of our Country, oppose their marching into this country, where their coming can answer no good end, but, on the contrary, must expose us to the ravages and horrors of a civil war; and for that purpose we are determined to take advantage of our happy situation, and will defend the passes into our country and neighbourhood, to the last drop of our blood.

Whereas a set of factious men, under the names of Committees, Conventions, and Congresses, have violently, under various pretences, usurped the legislative and executive powers of Government, and are thereby endeavouring to overturn our happy Constitution, and have incurred the guilt of actual rebellion against our most gracious Sovereign, I, A B, do therefore abjure all their authority, and solemnly promise, in the presence of Almighty God, to bear faith and true allegiance to his sacred Majesty George III, and will, to the utmost of my power and ability, support, maintain, and defend his crown and dignity, against all traitorous attempts and conspiracies whatsoever. So help me God.

GENERAL HOWE TO THE EARL OF DARTMOUTH.

Boston, November 26, 1775.

On the 9th instant, by His Majesty's ship Phoenix, I had the honour of your Lordship's separate letter, of the 5th of September, with duplicates of your Lordship's letters of the 2d August, to General Gage and myself; also, a letter from Mr. Secretary Pownall, of the 8th September, containing two enclosures, and a copy of a secret letter of the 5th September, intended for your Lordship's signature.

The removal of the troops from hence before the winter season should set in, being the principal object of your Lordship's letter of the 5th September, it is with great reluctance I am to inform you, that His Majesty's intentions in this particular, from the late arrival of the orders, cannot be carried into execution.

By the estimate, No. 1, your Lordship will observe the insufficiency of the tonnage of transports now in port, to carry the troops, the artillery, the stores of all denominations, the well disposed inhabitants, with their effects, and such merchandise as it may be thought prudent to remove. If all our vessels were in port, the whole could not have gone at one embarkation, by a deficiency of eleven thousand six hundred and two tons, even with the addition of the ships and small craft to be procured in the harbour. And when I reflect upon a division of the Army for two embarkations, in its present weak state; upon the situation this garrison and the troops sent to New-York would be in, with respect to the enemy, it appears to me, that more would be hazarded than prudence could justify, especially as I should, in that case, be dependant upon the return of transports, at a season when the navigation on this coast, from the violence of northerly winds, is so very precarious.

The Generals Clinton, Burgoyne, and Lord Percy, concurring in opinion with me, upon the inexpediency of evacuating this place before the spring, I am encouraged to hope my determination to remain here will not meet with the King's displeasure.

We are not under the least apprehension of any attack upon this place from the Rebels, by surprise or otherwise, as taken notice of in your Lordship's letter; on the contrary, it were to be wished that they would attempt so rash a step, and quit those strong intrenchments to which alone they may attribute their present security; but when I say this, I must add that, from sickness, the extended defence of this Town and collateral posts, our force for the winter will not be adequate to any other undertaking of consequence to His Majesty's service, such as the possession of Rhode-Island, New-York, Philadelphia, or Charlestown, in South-Carolina; yet, in the course of the winter, should any operations, from exchange of circumstances, be thought advisable, the opportunity will not be neglected.

Having transmitted to the Treasury, by this conveyance, several returns, specifying what may be wanted for carrying His Majesty's commands into execution in the spring, I have, for your Lordship's information, sent copies of them in a separate letter. And for the operations of the ensuing campaign, after receiving from your Lordship His Majesty's pleasure upon that head, I beg leave to propose, that the part of the Sixty-Fifth Regiment here be sent to Halifax in the spring, which, with Lieutenant-Colonel Goreham's corps, now there, and some recruits of Lieutenant-Colonel Maclean's, added to the militia intended to be raised in that Colony, by information received on the 15th October, from Governour Legge, will, I hope, put the dock yard and Town in perfect security from any attacks. By my last accounts from thence, of the 18th October, the temporary works intended to strengthen the dock were very forward, and it was proposed to have an intrenchment and block-houses upon the Citadel-Hill, for the future protection of the Town, if it could be done before the winter.

The detachment of the Fourteenth Regiment now at Halifax, upon the junction of the Sixty-Fifth, will be ordered here; and, as I apprehend the other parts of that corps would be more essentially employed with the Army than where they now are, shall therefore give directions accordingly, unless I receive your Lordship's orders to the contrary, or in the mean time some assurance of the necessity of their remaining to the southward.

For the blockade of this harbour, if such a measure is judged expedient, I would propose the intrenching one Battalion at a place where ships of war can securely winter; it being, as I am informed, better situated for the object required than Castle William, which will be totally destroyed, agreeable to His Majesty's orders, by mines, which are ready to be loaded upon the evacuation of this Town.

The next object I would mention is the taking hold of Rhode-Island with ten Battalions, under the command of Major-General Clinton, having a fleet adapted to this service, with directions to push forward for Providence.

There will then remain sixteen Battalions for New-York, according to the enclosed distribution, the Sixth, Fourteenth, and Sixteenth Regiments not included—the latter being stationed in West-Florida, and the Sixth not likely to arrive until late in the campaign.

But this Army, though complete in the spring, must have between six and seven thousand recruits, and of the worst kind; if chiefly composed of Irish Roman Catholics, certain to desert if put to hard work; and, from their ignorance of arms, not entitled to the smallest confidence as soldiers.

To obviate this real grievance, I would most humbly propose that one hundred men, hired from the Hanoverian and Hessian armies, be incorporated, without officers, into each of the twenty-seven Battalions of Foot—the Forty-Second Regiment, esteemed equal to two Battalions, and the Marines, not being included. Such of these men as remain, after the service is at an end, to be returned to their respective States.

That one hundred men be also added to each Battalion, to be volunteers from the substitutes of the English Militia, and to serve no longer than the existence of this most unnatural rebellion.

The Regiments might then want, to complete them, about seven hundred recruits in the spring, making a small allowance for casualties that may happen in the winter, by sickness, desertion, and service.

In this state, the Army would be respectable for the number it would consist of, and may be kept up in future, without difficulty, by the two additional Companies per Battalion. But unless this or some better considered plan be adopted, the increase of the King's troops by recruits, for the ensuing campaign, which in its consequences may be exceedingly important, will give little or no superiority over the Rebel bands, who, though raw as soldiers, are nevertheless accustomed to the use of arms.

I beg leave further to add my opinion, that this force will not be adequate to an active offensive campaign on the side of New-York and Rhode-Island, paying no other regard to this place than the blockade of the harbour. The numbers, as aforementioned, will not amount to more than five thousand fighting men for Rhode-Island, and eight thousand for New-York; out of which last division, not less than two thousand should be left for the defence of the Town and posts necessarily to be occupied. I would therefore humbly propose a re-enforcement of four thousand Russians, of which fifteen hundred to join General Clinton, and two thousand five hundred the corps to act at New-York.

To combat these armies, I apprehend the Rebels would not have less than ten thousand men on the side of Rhode-Island, and perhaps twenty thousand in the Province of New-York, to act against General Carleton on one hand, and the New-York corps on the other. The last may probably begin the campaign by the siege of New-York, as recent accounts from thence mention a body of four thousand men being ordered by the Continental Congress from Philadelphia, to proceed thither immediately as a garrison; and it is to be expected that they will fortify it in the best manner they are able, from the infinite consequence the possession of it is to them.

By Mr. Secretary Pownal's letter of the 8th September, I am informed that the removal of the effects and merchandise from hence, belonging to the enemies as well as friends of Government, has occurred to the King's Ministers to be an advisable measure; but the commands for the effects of the ill-disposed not being positive, I am to beg your Lordship's further directions, lest Government, by my determinations, may be engaged in future disputes and expense. I am particularly led to this, as Mr. Pownal, in his letter, mentions, "that he is directed to say, I must in this, and every case of the like kind, be the best judge, and must therefore use my own discretion." At the same time, I beg leave to remark the great convenience and relief such goods and merchandises would be to the Rebels taking possession of this Town; upon which ground, I humbly apprehend the measure might be justified, as a distress to the enemy.

Your Lordship having been pleased to signify the King's pleasure to me, that I should, if I found occasion, appoint an Adjutant-General and a Quartermaster-General to this Army, I shall pay the utmost attention to His Majesty's service, in the appointment I am so unworthily intrusted to make.

A letter from Major Rogers, at New-York, to General Gage, being directed to the Commander-in-Chief, came to my hand since the General's departure, wherein he has made offers of his services; to which I have given encouragement, by desiring him to make his proposals, and by giving an assurance that I am well inclined to do every thing in my power to afford him an opportunity of recommending himself to His Majesty's future favour. I find, from Governour Tryon, that the Rebels have made considerable overtures to him.

I beg leave to assure your Lordship, that I am truly sensible of the confidence the King has been pleased to repose in me, by intrusting the important command of this Army, for the ensuing campaign, to my direction; in which distinguished situation, every means will be exerted to forward His Majesty's intentions.

General Burgoyne, having received the King's leave to return to Britain, will deliver these despatches; and it is needless for me to add, that he can give to your Lordship the fullest information relative to His Majesty's service in this part of America. If His Majesty has not more essential service for him, and it should be his inclination to return to this Country, I hope I may not be deprived of an officer of his experience and ability for the ensuing campaign.

I am, &c., W. HOWE.

JOHN JAY TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, November 26, 1775.

SIR: I have the honour of transmitting to you the enclosed resolutions of Congress, relative to the Island of Bermuda.

We have not yet had the pleasure of hearing that you had made a House, and are not without some anxiety on that head. In a few days, we shall write to you collectively, and should be glad frequently to be informed of the state of the Province.

The New-England exploit is much talked of, and conjectures are numerous as to the part the Convention will take relative to it. Some consider it as an ill compliment to the Government of the Province, and prophesy that you have too much Christian meekness to take any notice of it. For my own part, I don't approve of the feat, and think it neither argues much wisdom or much bravery; at any rate, if it was to have been done, I wish our own people, and not strangers, had taken the liberty of doing it. I confess I am not a little jealous of the honour of the Province, and am persuaded that its reputation cannot be maintained without some little spirit being mingled with its prudence.

I am, Sir, with respect and esteem, your most obedient servant,
JOHN JAY.
To Colonel Nathaniel Woodhull, at New-York.

RICHARD HENRY LEE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, November 26, 1775.

DEAR GENERAL: As Mr. Custis can furnish you with an exact account of our affairs in Virginia, it will be unnecessary for me to say any thing on that subject. Proper persons will certainly and presently be appointed, under proper regulations, to determine on sea captures.

I heartily congratulate you on the surrender of St. John's. That of Montreal must, I think, quickly follow, because it is quite defenceless, and because the far greater part of the Canadians are surely on our side. If Colonel Arnold meets with success at Quebeck, we shall be in a fine posture to receive our enemies next spring. I have been strongly inclined to think that the design of this last reinforcement to Boston is intended for something decisive this fall. Their credit, their necessities, and many other considerations, seem to render an attempt on the lines probable. I make no doubt but the most effectual guard will be taken to render this attempt fatal to its authors. It is impossible that vice can so triumph over virtue, as that the slaves of tyranny should succeed against the brave and generous asserters of liberty and the just rights of humanity.

We expect every day to hear from England, but no intelligence has come from thence since I wrote you last.

I heartily wish you a happy meeting with your lady, who leaves this place to-morrow, for Cambridge.

I am, with singular esteem, dear Sir, your most affectionate and obedient servant,
RICHARD HENRY LEE.
To General Washington.

P. S. We have sent a Committee to Canada, to invite Delegates here, and to settle the affairs of that Army.

COLONEL KNOX TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-York, November 27, 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: I arrived here last Saturday morning, and immediately made inquiry whether Colonel Reed had done any thing in the business with which he was charged. I found his stay had been short, during which time the Committee that sit during the recess of Congress could not be gotten together, so that he went away without being able to forward the matter. The Committee met yesterday, and, after having considered of your Excellency's letter to them, Colonel McDougall waited upon me, and gave such reasons for not complying with the requisition for the heavy cannon as would not be prudent to put on paper. He has promised me that he will use his utmost influence in the Congress, which meets to-morrow, and has no doubt of success; that twelve exceeding good iron four-pounders, with a quantity of shells and shot, shall be directly sent to camp; and, also, he has promised the loan of two fine brass six-pounders, cast in a foundry in this City. They have finished six. I very sincerely wish your Excellency had been acquainted with this circumstance, and charged me with a commission to have had a number cast for the camp. They turn out cheaper than the ones imported from England: these cost three shillings and nine pence, New-York currency, per pound; the English, two shillings and six pence, sterling, per pound. They weigh about six hundred pounds apiece. If, Sir, you should think proper to have some done, and will give orders to Colonel McDougall, or some other gentleman of this City, the founder will execute one in two days after he shall receive the orders, and so any number in proportion. He also can cast brass mortars. Colonel McDougall has promised me that these articles shall be forwarded to the camp with the utmost expedition. You will please, Sir, to give orders to Colonel Burbeck to get light field carriages and appurtenances made for these guns.

I shall set out, by land, to-morrow morning, for Ticonderoga, and proceed with the utmost despatch, as knowing our whole dependence for heavy cannon will be from that post. Perhaps, by my return to camp, the reasons which now operate against my getting them here may then cease to exist.

I am, most respectfully, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,
HENRY KNOX.
His Excellency General Washington.

EDWARD MOTT TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Kingston, November 26, 1775.

HONOURED SIR: The bearer, Mr. Smith, is a gentleman officer of the Artillery, who was taken at St. John's, and likewise Dr. Sandon, who is in company with Mr. Smith. These two gentlemen, with the whole garrison of St. John's, I had orders from General Schuyler to march to Connecticut, with a guard of one hundred men; but received orders, while at Mr. Hoffman's landing, from the Continental Congress, to march the men to Lancaster, in the Province of Pennsylvania, and the officers to Lebanon and Windham, in Connecticut. But by a previous engagement of General Schuyler's to the gentlemen officers, that they should see their men quartered, I am now marching them all, both officers and privates, to Lancaster, except Mr. Smith and his corps of artillery-men. The sea officers and their men, who, with the greatest part of their baggage, and part of the men, and all their officers, went off by land from Albany, for Connecticut, on which I have thought proper to consent that the remainder should go and join them.

Mr. Smith and the Doctor I have been intimate with in our whole route, to this day; take them to be gentlemen of honour, and will punctually observe any restrictions your Honour may lay on them. Should wish that they may be gratified in any request they may make, consistent with the good of the Country. I should have wrote more to you, but want of time.

Subscribe myself, Sir, at command, your most obedient humble servant,
EDWARD MOTT.
To his Honour Governour Trumbull.

ADDRESS OF THE GENTLEMEN, ETC., OF THE COUNTY PALATINE OF LANCASTER.

Address of the High Sheriff, Gentlemen, Clergy, and Freeholders of the County Palatine of Lancaster, presented to His Majesty by Sir Watts Horton, Bart., the High Sheriff, accompanied by the Right Honourable Lord Stanley, and Sir Thomas Egerton, Bart., the Representatives in Parliament of the said County.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the High Sheriff, Gentlemen, Clergy, and Freeholders of the County Palatine of LANCASTER.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's faithful and loyal subjects, the High Sheriff, Gentlemen, Clergy, and Freeholders of the County Palatine of Lancaster, humbly beg leave to approach the throne with all the sentiments of veneration and attachment due to the father of his people.

Deeply impressed ourselves with a grateful sense of the blessings derived from your Majesty's truly paternal Government, the spirit of which has been ever directed by the most sacred attention to the happiness and liberty of your people, we cannot, without astonishment and horror, behold a great part of our American fellow-subjects so regardless of these blessings, and ungrateful to the fountain from whence they flow, as to violate, in the most hostile and daring manner, every principle of legal authority and just subordination.

From the whole tenor of your Majesty's mild and auspicious reign, as well as the gracious assurances which have proceeded from the throne, we are fully convinced, that nothing on your Majesty's part has been wanting to remedy these disorders, by methods consistent with the honour of this Country, and the felicity of its several members.

That these deluded people still persist in their rebellious opposition to the constitutional authority of these Realms, must be imputed to the unwarrantable and criminal intentions of those who have usurped the rights and sovereignty amongst them; intentions which the most vigorous exertions may be required to defeat.

To your Majesty, and the only rightful legislative body of these Dominions, we cheerfully confide the arduous task of restoring order and tranquillity, by every means which brave and loyal subjects can put into your hands; and we implore the Divine assistance on your counsels and exertions.

For our parts, happy in expressing to your Majesty the duty, gratitude, and affection to your royal person and family, which animate this populous, commercial, and manufacturing County, we desire thus publickly to testify our determined resolution to support, by every assistance in our power, such measures as your Majesty and the Parliament shall think it necessary to adopt for the suppression of these daring and licentious attacks upon the peace of your Majesty's Government, the vigour of the laws, and the dignity of the Constitution.

ADDRESS OF THE GENTLEMEN, ETC., OF THE TOWN OF BOLTON.

Address of the Gentlemen, Clergy, Tradesmen, and Manufacturers of the Town and neighbourhood of Bolton, in the Moors in the County Palatine of Lancaster, presented to His Majesty by the Right Honourable Lord Stanley, accompanied by Sir Thomas Egerton, Baronet, the Representatives in Parliament of the said County.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Gentlemen, Clergy, Tradesmen, and Manufacturers of the Town and neighbourhood of BOLTON, in the Moors in the County Palatine of LANCASTER.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Gentlemen, Clergy, Tradesmen, and Manufacturers of the Town and neighbourhood of Bolton, in the Moors, humbly beg leave to approach your royal presence, and, with hearts filled with gratitude, to express the just sense we have of your many kingly virtues, and of the numberless blessings we enjoy under your mild and auspicious Government.

We consider as not the least of these the constant encouragement given by your Majesty to commerce, and, in consequence thereof, the greatly increased and flourishing state of the trade of this Town, the centre of the extensive cotton manufacture of this populous County.

Thus bound by every tie of duty and affection, we should think ourselves highly criminal, were we backward in joining with the rest of your Majesty's faithful subjects, in expressing our abhorrence of that groundless and unnatural rebellion now raging in many of your American Colonies.

We have the greatest confidence that your Majesty, whose wisdom, clemency, and paternal goodness we have so long experienced, will employ the most effectual means to reduce to obedience our misguided fellow-subjects.

Your Majesty may at all times rely upon our fidelity and firm attachment to your sacred person and family, and our utmost exertions in support of the legislative authority of these Realms.

ADDRESS OF THE GENTLEMEN, ETC., OF THE TOWN OF BLACKBURN.

Address of the Gentlemen, Clergy, Manufacturers, and principal Inhabitants of the Town of Blackburn, in the County Palatine of Lancaster, presented to His Majesty by Sir Thomas Egerton, Bart., accompanied by the Right Honourable Lord Stanley, the Representatives in Parliament of the said County.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Gentlemen, Clergy, Manufacturers, and principal Inhabitants of the Town and neighbourhood of BLACKBURN, in the County Palatine of LANCASTER.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, presume to approach the throne, to express our unfeigned gratitude for the blessings we have enjoyed under the paternal influence of your Government, and to testify our detestation of the unnatural and rebellious conduct of your American subjects, who, forgetful of the constant protection afforded them in all times of danger, at an immense expense, by their Parent Country, have, with unexampled ingratitude, set her at defiance, and most audaciously usurped the dominion of her Colonies.

To the benignant care and affection which your Majesty hath shown to your people, in the protection of their liberties and the laws of the Constitution, and in the encouragement of trade and commerce, we attribute the great increase and extension of the manufactures carried on in this Town and neighbourhood, by which many thousands of your subjects are supported. And as reports have been industriously propagated, that the trade of this Kingdom is reduced to the most ruinous state, in consequence of the American rebellion, we think it our duty to contradict such assertions, so far as they respect the trade of this populous County.

We rely, with the greatest confidence, on the wisdom of the Legislature, for the execution of such measures as shall be thought most conducive to the suppression of this dangerous conspiracy, in which we beg leave to assure your Majesty of our utmost support. And when the Americans shall be sensible of their misconduct, and make a proper submission to that authority which they have so daringly opposed, we humbly presume to wish, that the protection of Government may be again extended to them, under such regulations as shall be thought necessary for the preservation of their future fidelity.

GENERAL HOWE TO THE EARL OF DARTMOUTH.

Boston, November 27, 1775.

MY LORD: I have the honour to inform your Lordship, that the Whitby, transport, from Cork, with four Companies of the Seventeenth Regiment of Foot; two transports, having on board four Companies of the third Battalion of the Royal Regiment of Artillery, and two ships with ordnance stores, are safely arrived. The Brig Nancy, with ordnance stores, was spoke to by one of the King's cruisers the 15th instant, and is the only ordnance store-ship missing, that sailed under convoy of the Phoenix, man-of-war; but none of the transports from Cork, with the Seventeenth, Twenty-Seventh, Twenty-Eighth, Forty-Sixth, and Fifty-Fifth Regiments, have yet made their appearance, except the Whitby, above mentioned, which occasions some apprehensions that they have been driven far to the southward by the violence of the late northerly winds. It is much to be wished that they were arrived, not only for the use they may be of, but on account of the advanced season of the year, and the dangers vessels must run by coming on this coast, in the present situation of things, without convoy or force, and having no friendly port but this to receive them, while the Rebels' cruisers are watchful to take the advantage of their weakness or necessities, wherein they have already been too successful, and will probably do much more mischief, unless the King's ships can contrive to cut them off.

A remarkable instance of daring spirit was shown on the 25th instant, within a short distance of the light-house, and within view of His Majesty's ships, by a schooner that had actually taken one, and would have taken two transports loaded with forage, had it not been for the vigilance of Lieutenant Bourmaster, of the Navy, and agent of transports, on this service, who cut his cables, rescued the vessel taken, and drove off the Rebel, in an armed transport, stationed for the protection of the light-house. In justice to this gentleman's merit, I beg leave to report to your Lordship, that he has, during General Gage's command, and since that time, invariably acted with the greatest alacrity and attention to the service in his own line, and upon other occasions.

In consequence of your Lordship's letter to the Master-General of the Ordnance, due attention shall be paid to the return of the officers belonging to the third Battalion Royal Artillery.

When I had last the honour of writing to your Lordship, I flattered myself that the Army would have been in quarters at this time; but, to my great disappointment, the works necessary for the winter defence of Charlestown heights have been so much retarded by an unusual wet season, and want of artificers, that they are not yet perfect for the detachment intended to remain there; that corps, therefore, is still in the field. A part of the troops on this side have quitted the camp, and the whole Army, I think I can assure your Lordship, will be under cover in a few days.

I have been under the necessity of taking off the men employed upon the fortification within Boston-Neck, which was begun before General Gage's departure, in order to employ them in throwing up redoubts for a better defence on the side of the Common.

The sickness of the Army has rather increased of late, from the severity of the season; but hope, since there is nothing epidemical among us, that we shall quickly recover in quarters, provided we do not wait too long for the flocks, bedding, blankets, &c., expected from England. In the mean time, the utmost attention will be had to the preservation of health.

Your Lordship having been pleased to take notice of the loss this Army has suffered by desertion during the campaign, I have the satisfaction to acquaint you, that only thirty-three men have deserted since the 19th of April.

By information, the Rebel Troops are in great want of clothing, and much dissatisfied on other accounts; their agreements to serve will expire for the most part by the last of December, and there is reason to believe that many of them will decline entering into new engagements; in the mean time, they have got into barracks, having a range of them at every post, the most extensive of which are at Cambridge.

The light-house at the mouth of this harbour, so necessary for the safety of vessels bound to this port, is now, I hope, effectually secured, and a detachment of troops will be kept there for its future defence; the lantern is repaired, and was lighted the 23d instant.

I beg leave to remark, the great want of seamen experienced this summer, for the navigating of transports, for manning armed vessels and boats on particular services, and on many other occasions, which induces me to urge the necessity of sending out seamen to complete the transports to their proper number, a return whereof is enclosed. It is also to be wished, that the King's ships had their war establishments, as they would then be able to spare men for extra services, and not have the same reason for pressing out of the vessels from Europe and other parts, coming with supplies for the Navy and Army—a practice which may greatly affect us in future, unless your Lordship will be pleased to direct that protections be given to vessels sailing from Britain, and exemptions to others who may bring such supplies.

Before the departure of General Gage, an expedition was concerted by the General and Admiral, for the destruction of Cape Ann and Falmouth, two sea-port towns on the coast to the eastward, that were distinguished for their opposition to Government. The Canceau, and an armed transport, having a small detachment of troops on board, were to execute it. From circumstances, it was found inexpedient to make any attack upon Cape Ann, whereupon they proceeded to Falmouth, which place, after giving timely warning to the inhabitants, for the removal of themselves and their effects, was destroyed on the 18th of October, burning about five hundred houses, fourteen sea vessels, taking and destroying several others, without any loss on our part.

On the return of this detachment, the 5th instant, I received confirmation, that the party from the Rebel Army, under the command of a Colonel Arnold, of which I presume your Lordship would have advice from General Gage, had gone up the Kennebeck River, intending to enter Canada by the River Chaudiere; that they had got to Fort Halifax, about sixty miles from the mouth of the Kennebeck, from whence they had sent back about two hundred sick; nothing further has been since heard of them.

General Gage would of course acquaint your Lordship, that a vessel arrived express from Quebeck, on the 10th of October, with letters to him from General Carleton and Lieutenant-Governor Cramahé, copies of which are herewith enclosed. In consequence, I determined to send, and had ordered a Battalion of Marines to embark immediately on board transports, and proceed to Quebeck, under the convoy of the Cerberus, frigate, as had been settled by Admiral Graves declaring the attempt unadvisable and impracticable for transports; upon which I wrote to him, that I should drop the idea of sending the troops in transports, upon his representations, as your Lordship may observe by a copy of my letter enclosed, (No. 2,) intending at that time to procure smaller vessels, better adapted to work their way up the River St. Lawrence; but not being able to have them fitted for sea in reasonable time to undertake the voyage with the least prospect of succeeding, I judged it most prudent to decline sending the re-enforcement, and despatched the express vessel back to Quebeck, on the evening of the 13th of October.

A variety of contradictory reports have since come, by the way of New-York, relative to the transactions on the part of Canada, and mostly favourable to His Majesty's arms, until the 20th instant, when a few days past a Rebel paper was brought in here, giving an account of the surrender and capitulation of Chambly and St. John's, by which the garrison are to remain prisoners in Connecticut, or elsewhere, as the Continental Congress shall direct; Major Stopford, of the Seventh Regiment, commanded at the first, and Major Preston, of the Twenty-Sixth, at the latter place. A vessel from Quebeck, bound to Europe, which was spoke with lately at sea, having given the same information, I fear there is too much truth in the intelligence.

I am, &c.,

W. HOWE.

London, November 27, 1775.

This day, a few minutes after three o'clock, in the House of Commons, Mr. Alderman Oliver made his motion; he was seconded by the Lord Mayor of London. It was couched in the following terms: "That an humble address be presented to His Majesty, requesting that His Majesty would be graciously pleased to impart to the House who were the original authors and advisers of the following measures, before they were proposed by Parliament: the taxing America without consent of its Assemblies, for the purpose of raising a revenue; for the extending the jurisdiction of the Courts of Admiralty and Vice-Admiralty; for taking away the Charter of the Province of Massachusetts-Bay; for restraining the American fishery; for exemptying murderers from trial in America; for transporting accused Colonists to England, to be tried for offences committed in America; and, more especially, for establishing popery and despotism in Canada." A little after six, the main question was put, and it was rejected on a division; one hundred and sixty-three against it, and ten for it.

ALBEMARLE COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

Albemarle, November 27, 1775.

Resolved, That this Committee are affected with the deepest anxiety on account of the distressed situation to which many of the poor inhabitants in the lower parts of this country are or may be reduced, by being driven from their habitations, and do therefore earnestly recommend to all the good people of this County to furnish all such as may be in need thereof with such lands, houses, and other accommodations as may be in their power to spare; and each member of this Committee doth, for himself, resolve to enter cordially into this humane design.

Ordered, That the above Resolution be published in the Virginia Gazette.

JOHN WALKER, Chairman.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Ticonderoga, November 27, 1775.

SIR: In my letter of the 20th instant, I observed that about six hundred and fifty or seven hundred of the troops raised in Connecticut remained in Canada. I have not had a return from thence, but, from the best information I have been able to procure, and from former returns, I am convinced they do not exceed two hundred. The enclosed state, though imperfect, will exhibit nearly our force in Canada.

It may be asked why Warner's Regiment were suffered to come away, and some other of the troops raised in this Colony, as the term for which they were engaged would not expire until the last day of next month. The unhappy cause is this: at St. John's the Connecticut troops were so very importunate to return home, that General Montgomery was under the necessity of promising that all those that would follow him to Montreal should have leave to return. This declaration he could not confine to the Connecticut troops, as such a discrimination would have been odious. It might have been expected that men influenced by a sense of liberty would not have required such a promise, and that others, to whom it was not immediately intended, would not have taken the advantage of it; but all this flows from the same unhappy source with the other disorders too prevalent in our troops—a want of subordination and discipline, an evil which may prove fatal to us.

Few of the troops now in Canada will be able to come away until they can cross upon the ice; but as soon as that happens, I believe the greater part will return; and should we not be able to possess ourselves of Quebeck, which it is probable we will not if Colonel Arnold met with any opposition, as the weather has been so exceedingly severe that no troops could lie out, the consequences may be very deplorable. Perhaps it may be thought necessary, all circumstances considered, to raise three thousand men in Pennsylvania and New-Jersey, and order them to rendezvous with all possible despatch at Albany, to prepare and be ready to march as soon as the lakes are passable, conducted by whatever officer Congress shall appoint to command in that quarter.

General Washington writes me that he is in very great want of powder, lead, mortars, cannon, and most sorts of artillery stores, and begs that I will send him all that can be spared from this quarter. What operations Congress may intend to carry on this way, I do not know, and consequently cannot determine if any can be spared; but at present none can be sent, as we must wait until lake George is frozen over, in order to transport them. The little powder here is going to New-York, agreeable to the order of Congress. Lead we have little left, and all the ordnance and military stores in Canada are either carried off or destroyed by General Carleton, except what was taken at St. John's, and what was sent from hence.

As the Ministry seem determined to carry on the war with spirit, would it not be advisable, as soon as there is good sledding, to remove all the prisoners from Connecti- cut to some of the interior Towns in Pennsylvania; both because it will enable the former Colony to oppose more men, and save the expense of transporting provisions from Hudson's River for the supply of the eastern Armies, which I think I can foresee must be the case in the next campaign.

27th, two o'clock.—I have this moment received a letter from General Montgomery, copy of which I do myself the honour to enclose you. In a note of the 20th, he advises me that he hoped to proceed towards Quebeck the next day; but complains that the troops leave him in great numbers, and of the Green Mountain Boys especially, who had promised to go down with him.

I could wish Mr. Mason to be confirmed as Postmaster at Montreal. I shall make a temporary appointment of one at Albany; but I did not think that the army letters should pay postage, and have therefore wrote to Mr. Hazard to deliver them gratis, until he receives orders from the Postmaster-General on this head.

I am informed that all the vessels in which Mr. Carleton had embarked himself, his troops and stores, have surrendered by capitulation; that Carleton got on shore, and was gone towards Quebeck. I believe it to be true, and hope soon to give you authentick intelligence of it.

The schooner and row-galley taken at St. John's are just arrived here, together with our sloop and schooner, full of prisoners and their baggage. I am much distressed to get them on, my cattle fairly worn out, and only six horses, which I sent for from my own stables, and the boats that go from the landing to Fort George do not return above once in eight days from thence, as I have few men there, and the troops that are going home will not by any means send a few hands to bring them back.

I have issued warrants for raising three Companies. I hope they will be up before the first of January, as I cannot get any of the few men here to re-engage.

The gentlemen of the Committee are not yet arrived.

28th.—At four this afternoon I was agreeably surprised with the sight of Brigadier-General Prescott and the officers taken with him from on board the vessels. Enclose you the several returns sent me by General Montgomery, who was so hurried with his preparations for descending to Quebeck, that he could not find time to send me the terms which he gave Prescott.

I am happy to learn by the gentlemen of the Committee, who arrived here at seven this evening, that Congress has ordered the prisoners to Pennsylvania. As those still here and on their way from Montreal will not be able to go down Hudson's River in vessels, I propose sending them to Ulster County, for the present, as the expense of wheel carriages runs very high, and that they may be moved thence in sleds at a much cheaper rate, as soon as we have a fall of snow.

General Carleton stole from on board the vessels with six Canadians, and dressed like one of them; in this disguise he hopes to get into Quebeck; but if he does, the weather has been so severe that I trust he will not be able to leave it, and then he must fall into our hands in the course of this winter, if not immediately.

I find that it is the intentions of the New-York Congress that the troops raised in that Colony should pay for their underclothes that were given them. I cannot learn that the troops expected to have any thing stopped out of their wages on that account. The greatest part of them are now in Canada, and I fear that few of them will remain in the service if that should be the case. I could wish, therefore, for the immediate determination of Congress on this head.

I am, Sir, with sentiments of the most profound respect, your most obedient and very humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., &c.

GENERAL MONTGOMERY TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Montreal, November 19, 1775.

DEAR GENERAL: I wrote to you the other day, in a great hurry, by express, sending a letter for General Washington, from Colonel Arnold. I have this morning had another express from Colonel Arnold, acquainting me he has crossed the river to the Quebeck side; that he has been near surprising the Town; that it was closely invested; that they were in the greatest confusion within, the inhabitants having refused to take arms. A scarcity of provisions and wood must bring the garrison to terms, were a blockade alone to be the measure adopted. Mr. Carleton is in statu quo, about fifteen miles on this side Sorel, where I hope they will not let him pass. I suppose Mr. Carleton is on board the fleet, which left this upon my arrival, as I never have had any account of his making his escape.

I have not yet been able to adjust the new formed corps, or get our warm clothing ready to go down, touching which I am exceedingly impatient, Arnold having no artillery, and being in want of warm clothing.

I have appointed a Mr. Mason (one of our friends in this Town) Postmaster, till the pleasure of Congress be known, to be recommended to Dr. Franklin.

I find Mr. Price so active and intelligent, so warm a friend to the measures adopted by Congress, that I wish to have him mentioned in the strongest terms to Congress. I have set a Regiment on foot of Canadians, James Livingston, Colonel; to be engaged for twelve months, should this unhappy controversy last so long.

I have made the inhabitants acquainted with the views of Congress relative to this Province, declaring I should call a convention upon my return from Quebeck. I have had some conversation with Pierre Flacquet, a Jesuit, at the head of the society here, and esteemed a very sensible fellow. He complained of some little indignities shown their order, particularly in making part of their house the common prison, by His Majesty's Governours. I promised redress, and hinted, at the same time, the great probability of that society enjoying their estate, (notwithstanding Sir Jeffery Amherst's pretensions,) should this Province accede to the general union. I hope this hint may be of service, the Priests hitherto having done us all the mischief in their power; in many Parishes they will not yet give the people absolution. However, I have shown all the respect in my power to Religion, and have winked at this behaviour in the Priests, for fear of giving malice a handle.

I wish I could have apprized you in time of your obligations to Captain McKay. He generously offered Mr. Carleton, if he would give him two hundred men, to go and burn the new church at Sartigan, last summer; he is so inveterate a fellow, that I think if the other prisoners should be indulged in returning to their families this winter, he ought not to be permitted to enter this Province. When a convention is assembled, I propose requesting the return of the other gentlemen on their parole.

The inhabitants are our friends on both sides of the river to Quebeck; our expresses go without interruption backwards and forwards; a young man who has got out of Quebeck informs me that the Lieutenant Governour, the Chief Justice, and several others, have put their baggage on board ship, and that no ship is permitted to sail: this looks as if they despaired of making a defence. Colonel Macleán has threatened a sortie. Arnold is apprized of it, and his troops wish for it.

I hear there is a considerable quantity of powder at Niagara; perhaps this may be thought an object worthy of attention. They have been very apprehensive of an attack from the Virginians in that quarter all this summer. I fear Carleton has thrown a great quantity of powder into the river. I have desired a severe message to be delivered to him on that subject.

Farewell, my dear Sir, and believe me, with all regard and respect, your most obedient servant,

To General Schuyler. RICHARD MONTGOMERY.

P. S. Hard money, if possible, should be sent down. I can get some thousands here from Price, though not sufficient to answer all expenses, and it is too soon to offer paper.

Montreal, November 15, 1775.

The General embraces this happy occasion of making his acknowledgments to the troops, for their patience and perseverance during the course of a fatiguing campaign. They have merited the applause of their grateful countrymen. He is now ready to fulfil the engagements of the publick. Passes, together with boats and provisions, shall be furnished, upon application to commanding officers of Regiments, for such as choose to return home. Yet he entreats the troops not to lay him under the necessity of abandoning Canada; of undoing in one day what has been the work of months, and of restoring to an enraged and hitherto disappointed enemy the means of carrying a cruel war into the very bowels of their Country. Impressed with a just sense of the spirit of the troops, their attachment to the interest of the United Colonies, and of their regard to their own honour, he flatters himself that none will leave him at this critical juncture, but such whose affairs or health absolutely require their return home. He has still hopes, notwithstanding the advanced season of the year, should he be seconded by the generous valour of the troops, hitherto highly favoured by Providence, to reduce Quebeck, in conjunction with the troops which have penetrated by way of the Kennebeck River, and thereby deprive the Ministerial Army of all the footing in this important Province.

Those who engage in this honourable cause shall be furnished completely with every article of clothing necessary for the rigour of the climate, viz: a blanket coat, coat, vest, breeches, one pair stockings, two shirts, leggins, socks, shoes, mitts, and cap, at the Continental charge, and one dollar bounty. The troops are only requested to engage till the 15th of April. They shall be discharged sooner, if the expected re-enforcements arrive before that time.

JAMES VAN RENSSELAER, Aid-de-Camp.

GENERAL MONTGOMERY TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Montreal, November 20, 1775.

MY DEAR SIR: In my letter of yesterday I omitted to speak of Captain Lamb, of the artillery; I have had some difficulty in persuading him to stay. He says the pay is such a trifle that he is consuming his own property to maintain himself, and that by and by his family must starve at home.

He is absolutely necessary with this Army, if we are to have artillery. He is active, spirited, and industrious; and I do think he should have an appointment adequate to the services he has rendered. I have entreated him to stay, with assurance that I would represent his circumstances to Congress; in the mean time, I have given him a little money on account.

I hear of your bad health with the most real concern: don't despair. Yours,

RICHARD MONTGOMERY.

To General Schuyler.

GENERAL MONTGOMERY TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Montreal, November 22, 1775.

MY DEAR SIR: Colonel Easton has shown so much zeal and activity in the important service he has been employed upon, that I think myself obliged to speak of him in the warmest terms of acknowledgment; and, as his character has suffered in the publick opinion by some unfortunate transaction last summer, I hope you will be kind enough to do him the justice his conduct with me has merited.

I am, &c.,

RICHARD MONTGOMERY.

To General Schuyler.

COLONEL ARNOLD TO GENERAL MONTGOMERY.

Colvil-Place, 1½ miles from Quebeck, Nov. 14, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I wrote you yesterday from Point Levi, by an express sent from Sorel by Colonel Easton, of my intention of crossing the St. Lawrence, which I happily effected between nine and four in the morning, without being discovered, until my party of five hundred men were nearly all over, when a frigate's barge coming up, discovered our landing, and prevented our surprising the Town. We fired into her and killed three men. I am this minute informed, by a gentleman from Town, that Colonel Macleán had determined to pay us a visit this morning, with six hundred men and some field-pieces. We are prepared, and anxious to see him. Others from Town inform me that the inhabitants in general had laid down their arms. By the best information, they are in the greatest confusion; very short of wood and provisions, much divided, and refused provisions from the inhabitants; and if blocked up by a superior force, must, as soon as the frost sets in, surrender. I have thought proper to despatch the bearer to inform you of my situation, as also with a request I have to make. I must refer you to him for particulars: as I have been so unfortunate in my former letters, I do not choose to commit every intelligence to writing. It is the current report here that you have invested Montreal and cut off their retreat. This I hope is true, and that I shall soon have the pleasure of seeing you here.

I am, dear Sir, with great respect, your obedient humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

Brigadier-General Montgomery.

P. S. Since writing the foregoing, the enemy found means to make prisoner of one of our out sentinels. I immediately invested the Town as near as possible with my troops, which has occasioned them to set fire to the suburbs of St. John's, and several of the houses without the wall are now in flames.

B. A.

COLONEL ARNOLD TO GENERAL MONTGOMERY.

Camp before Quebec, November 16, 1775.

DEAR SIR: My last was of the 14th inst., advising you of my crossing the St. Lawrence, and being before Quebec; since which, I have not had the pleasure of hearing from you. I then informed you of my situation and prospects. Fearing that may have miscarried, I have thought proper to despatch the bearer, a merchant of Quebec, and particular friend of mine, who has been kind enough to offer his service, and will inform you more fully than in my power to write. I am very anxious to hear from you, and much more so to see you here.

I am, dear Sir, with great esteem, your obedient humble servant,

BENEDICT ARNOLD.

Brigadier-General Montgomery.

COLONEL ARNOLD TO LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOUR CRAMAHÉ.

Camp before Quebec, November 15, 1775.

SIR: I yesterday sent the enclosed with a flag and officer, who, approaching near the walls of the Town, was, contrary to humanity and the laws of nations, fired on, and narrowly escaped being killed. This I imputed to the ignorance of your guards, and ordered him to return this morning, and, to my great surprise, he was received in the same manner as yesterday. This is an insult I could not have expected from a private soldier, much more from an officer of your rank; and, through me offered to the United Colonies, will be deeply resented; but at any rate cannot redound to your honour or valour. I am informed you have put a prisoner, taken from me, into irons. I desire to know the truth of this, and the manner in which he is treated. As I have several prisoners, taken from you, who now feed at my own table, you may expect that they will be treated in the same manner, in future, as you treat mine.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

BENEDICT ARNOLD.

To the Honourable H. T. Cramahé.

Camp before Quebec, November 14, 1775.

SIR: The unjust, cruel, and tyrannical acts of a venal British Parliament, tending to enslave the American Colonies, have obliged them to appeal to God and the sword for redress. That Being, in whose hands are all human events, has hitherto smiled on their virtuous efforts. And as every artifice has been used to make the innocent Canadians instruments of their cruelty, by instigating them against the Colonies, and oppressing them on their refusing to enforce every oppressive mandate, the American Congress, induced by motives of humanity, have, at their request, sent General Schuyler into Canada for their relief. To co-operate with him, I am ordered by his Excellency General Washington to take possession of the Town of Quebec. I do therefore, in the name of the United Colonies, demand immediate surrender of the Town, fortifications, &c., of Quebec, to the forces of the United Colonies under my command; forbidding you to injure any of the inhabitants of the Town in their persons or property, as you will answer the same at your peril. On surrendering the Town, the property of every individual shall be secured to him; but if I am obliged to carry the Town by storm, you may expect every severity practised on such occasions; and the merchants, who may now save their property, will probably be involved in the general ruin.

I am, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

BENEDICT ARNOLD.

Hon. Hector T. Cramahé, Lieutenant-Governour of Quebec.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM RHODE-ISLAND TO A GENTLEMAN IN PHILADELPHIA, DATED NOV. 27, 1775.

You most justly observe that America can only look for safety in a vigorous, determined defence. The die is cast. The union of the Colonies with Britain is at an end. It is as easy to bring the two poles together as to bring about an accommodation. The King is absolute master of the Parliament, of the Treasury, of the Army, of the Navy, and of a still greater host of pensioners, placemen, and expectants, and is unalterably determined to be as absolute master of America. The people of Britain, even supposing them averse to the measures pursued by the King, are disarmed, spiritless, and without leaders, and consequently will do nothing effectual in our favour, unless they should meet with some signal misfortunes. In short, the only thing I hope for from them is, that, as it is impossible to raise the supplies within the year, the moneyed men will be afraid to advance the necessary sums for carrying on the war. In this situation, we may be assured that we shall have the whole force of Britain to contend with; and, considering the immense debt under which the Nation staggers, the loss of trade and revenue, the great danger of a war with the house of Bourbon, (who will not let slip so glorious an opportunity of revenging the losses and disgraces of the last war,) and the greater danger of the failure of publick credit, I think it highly probable that their whole force will be exerted in the next campaign. The Ministry know that if the war be protracted, it will finally prove unsuccessful; and, of course, they must and will adventure their whole upon a single cast. You mentioned to me, in a letter, some time since, your opinion that the enemy will act next year with three armies in America. If you have truly conjectured their plan, as I believe you have, they will not have less than thirty-five thousand men, well appointed, besides their naval force. Do not let us flatter ourselves that the Ministry will not be able to procure so great a number of men; for one year they can make still more powerful efforts. But let us not be discouraged; we have men enough, and plenty of provisions, and all things necessary for our defence. I trust we have a great share of publick spirit, and what is wanting in that will be amply supplied by a manly resentment of intolerable injuries, scorn, and contempt. Let us be fully prepared for one warm campaign, and, although the war may continue longer, the Colonies will be out of danger. We have, perhaps, the greatest resources of any people upon earth. We begin the war free from debt; the population is very rapid; we have an immense vacant territory, which may be filled with inhabitants, even during the war, and which, with the Crown rents, will be a sufficient fund for the payment of any debts we may contract; besides, the debt contracted by three millions of people will be probably paid by six millions. Nor will our children have reason to censure our conduct. We shall leave them a glorious patrimony, encumbered only with an insignificant debt. The great question between America and Britain is now reduced to a point: we must be independent or slaves. No man can hesitate a moment in his choice. With vigour and prudence, the whole force of America may be united and exerted. We must declare ourselves free. While we continue humble petitioners, professing loyalty, duty, and obedience, what nation upon earth will enter into alliance with us, or take any measures, unless to our prejudice, in consequence of the present quarrel? A federal, not an incorporating union, must be completed as soon as possible. Above all, the authority of the Congress must be established; for there is no other name given under heaven whereby we can be politically saved. Sufficient quantities of warlike stores and provisions must be seasonably collected for armies, to consist, in the whole, of not less than sixty thousand men. Our furnaces and smiths' shops must be employed in making cannon, cannon ball, and muskets; and other stores must be collected this winter. In short, we have immense preparation to make, and but a little time to do it in. These are some of the measures that appear to me of the utmost importance. They are striking at first view, and need not any arguments to enforce them, even if I had time.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO RICHARD HENRY LEE.

Cambridge, November 27, 1775.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 13th, with the enclosures, (for which I thank you,) came to this place on Wednesday evening—part of which, that is, the night, I was engaged with a party of men throwing up a work upon a hill called Cobble-Hill, which, in case we should ever be supplied with such things as we want, may prove useful to us, and could not be delayed, as the earth here is getting as hard as a rock. This, and the early departure of the post, prevented my giving your letter an answer the next morning.

In answer to your inquiries respecting armed vessels, there are none of any tolerable force belonging to this Government. I know of but two of any kind; those very small. At the Continental expense, I have fitted out six, per the enclosed list, two of which are upon the cruise directed by Congress: the rest ply about Capes Cod and Ann; as yet, to very little purpose. These vessels are all manned by officers and soldiers, (except, perhaps, a master, pilots, &c. ;) but how far, as they are upon the old establishment, which has not more than a month to exist, they can be ordered off this station, I will not undertake to say; but suppose they might be engaged anew. Belonging to Providence, there are two armed vessels; and, I am told, Connecticut has one: which, with one of those from Providence, is, I believe, upon the cruise you have directed.

I have no idea that the troops can remove from Boston this winter, to a place where no provision is made for them; however, we shall keep the best look out we can, and upon that, and every occasion where practicable, give them the best we have. But their situation in Boston gives them but little to apprehend from a parting blow, whilst their ships can move and floating batteries surround the Town.

Nothing of importance hath happened since my last. I am glad to find that our noble Secretary has, at length, met with a check; was one of our bullets aimed for him, the world would be happily rid of a monster, without any person sustaining a loss. This is my opinion, at least. It gives me great pleasure to hear that the Ohio Indians have entered into a firm treaty of friendship with us; for I had been informed that they were very restless, and had destroyed the houses, &c., upon the Great Kanawha, and that the improvements which I had been making there, to save my lands, valued at one thousand five hundred and sixty-eight Pounds, eighteen Shillings, and seven Pence half-penny, were all destroyed, as far as they could be so by fire. The last I believe to be true, as I have it from Mr. L. Washington, who lives with me, (by the last post,) and who adds that the Indians had also destroyed the fort which was built last year, at the mouth of the Great Kanawha. For God's sake, hurry the signers of money, that our wants may be supplied. It is a very singular case that their signing cannot keep pace with our demands. I heartily congratulate you and the Congress on the reduction of St. John's. I hope all Canada is in our possession before this. No accounts from Arnold since those mentioned in my last letter to the Congress. Would it not be politick to invite them to send members to Congress? Would it not be also politick to raise a Regiment or two of Canadians, and bring them out of the country? They are good troops, and this would be entering them heartily in the cause. My best regards to the good families you are with.

I am, very affectionately, your obedient servant,
GEORGE WASHINGTON.

STEPHEN MOYLAN TO JOHN BROWN.

Cambridge, November 27, 1775.

SIR: His Excellency is surprised that you had not received an answer to your letter of the 3d, which he wrote to you the 8th instant. He then informed you that, as you had made an offer of the powder to the Legislature of the Colony, he would not interfere; that Colonel Gridley had received orders for providing the cannon, &c., for the use of this Army. What this gentleman had bespoke and provided, with a large quantity expected from New-York and Canada, his Excellency thinks will be sufficient. In your letter of the 21st you make an offer of one ton of good pistol powder, at six shillings per pound. The General will take it, though it is a most exorbitant price. He is willing to encourage the importation of that necessary article.

By his Excellency's command:

STEPHEN MOYLAN.

To John Brown, Esq., Providence.

P. S. There are two Companies ordered from your quarter to this place. Governour Cooke will inform you when they march. You will please to send the powder under their guard, in a covered wagon. Should they have set out before this reaches you, you must get a few of the minute or militia-men of your Colony to guard it to this place.

ADDRESS OF THE FREEHOLDERS, ETC., OF THE COUNTY OF HEREFORD.

Address of the Sheriff, Gentlemen, Clergy, and Freeholders of the County of Hereford, presented to His Majesty by John Freeman, Esq., the High Sheriff, being introduced by the Lord of His Majesty's Bed-Chamber in waiting.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

Deign to accept this humble Address of your dutiful subjects, the Sheriff, Gentlemen, Clergy, and Freeholders of the County of Hereford, as an assurance of their firm and inviolable allegiance and loyalty, at a time when rebellion has erected her standard in the distant Provinces of your Empire.

With affection we regard your person; with gratitude we acknowledge the justice and benignity of your mild and merciful government; with detestation we abhor the professions of attachment to the former, by those who resist your authority and oppose your laws.

To confirm the liberties of Britain, by the establishment of the legislative powers of Parliament, our ancestors sacrificed their blood, and, to secure those liberties to their posterity, transferred the succession to the crown to your Majesty's family. To defend and maintain those powers, we look up to your Majesty as the great guardian of our Constitution; and permit us to assure your Majesty that we shall cheerfully concur in every support which our duty may call for, or our abilities can furnish, towards the success of your Majesty's arms over your rebellious subjects; at the same time most ardently wishing that your Majesty's gracious offers of mercy, together with the firm support of your dutiful and loyal subjects, may influence the hearts of the rebellious to return to their duty and allegiance; and that your whole people reunited may, with us, be convinced, that to be a British subject, with all its consequences, is to be the freest member of any civil society in the world.

And we pray to God that your Majesty and your progeny may long reign over these realms, in undisturbed peace and undiminished splendour.

ADDRESS OF THE CITY OF ELGIN.

Address of the Provost, Magistrates, Council, Burgesses, and Inhabitants of the City of Elgin, North-Britain, presented to His Majesty by Colonel Staates Long Morris, their Representative in Parliament.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Provost, Magistrates, Council, Burgesses, and Inhabitants of the City of ELGIN, NORTH-BRITAIN.

Most Gracious Sovereign :

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Provost, Magistrates, Council, Burgesses, and Inhabitants of your ancient City of Elgin, beg leave, upon this occasion, to approach your throne, and humbly to assure your Majesty of our firm and inviolable attachment to your sacred person and Government.

Deeply impressed with a grateful sense of the many valuable blessings and privileges we enjoy, in common with the rest of our fellow-subjects, under your Majesty's wise and mild administration, we should think ourselves greatly wanting in that respect, duty, and allegiance, we owe to the best of Kings, if we omitted this opportunity of testifying our utmost abhorrence and detestation of the unnatural and ungrateful rebellion that presently exists in some of your Majesty's Colonies in America; and to assure your Majesty that we will, to the utmost of our power, support all such measures as shall be judged necessary, by your Majesty and Parliament, to put a speedy end to this unprovoked rebellion, which, we apprehend, has been greatly encouraged and abetted by the seditious practices of a turbulent and discontented faction at home. It is our sincere and ardent prayer, to the supreme disposer of all things, that the distractions amongst your misguided and deluded American subjects may subside; that peace, good order, and a just and constitutional dependance upon the Mother Country may again be restored, without the further effusion of human blood; and that your Majesty may have a long and prosperous reign, over a free, happy, and united people.

Signed in our name, presence, and by our appointment, by JOHN DUFF, Provost.

ADDRESS OF THE NOBLEMEN, ETC., OF THE COUNTY OF ELGIN.

Address of the Noblemen, Freeholders, Justices of the Peace, and Commissioners of the Land Tax of the County of Elgin, presented to His Majesty by the Hon. Arthur Duff, their Representative in Parliament.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Noblemen, Freeholders, Justices of the Peace, and Commissioners of the Land Tax of the County of ELGIN.

Most Gracious Sovereign :

We, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Noblemen, Freeholders, Justices of the Peace, and Commissioners of the Land Tax of the County of Elgin, sensible of the blessings we enjoy under your Majesty's mild and constitutional government, beg leave to approach your royal person, to testify our abhorrence of that avowed rebellion which exists in the Colonies in America.

We humbly beg leave to assure your Majesty, that we will support your Majesty, to the utmost of our power, in maintaining the dignity of your crown, and the authority of the Legislature, over every part of the British Dominions.

We pray God to return the Colonies to a sense of their duty and allegiance, and that your Majesty may reign long, to diffuse the blessings of liberty and peace to a grateful, free, and united people.

Signed in our name, presence, and by our appointment, at Elgin, the 28th day of November, 1775, by our Præses.

FIFE.

ADDRESS OF THE BURGH OF INVERARY.

Address of the Magistrates and Town Council of the Burgh of Inverary, presented to His Majesty by Colonel Staates Long Morris, their Representative in Parliament.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Magistrates and Town Council of the Burgh of INVERARY.

Most Gracious Sovereign :

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Magistrates and Town Council of Inverary, think it our duty, at this time, to approach the throne, and humbly speak our sentiments on the present most alarming crisis of publick affairs.

While, under your Majesty, we enjoyed all the blessings of the best Government the wisdom of man ever devised, we have seen, with indignation, the malignant breath of disappointed faction, by prostituting the sacred sounds of liberty, too successful in blowing the sparks of a temporary discontent into the flames of a rebellion in your Majesty's Colonies, that we from our souls abhor.

This is now grown to such a daring and dangerous height, that we doubt not the same paternal tenderness that directed the lenient measures, with which the first swellings of this distemper were treated, will apply such forcive remedies to the affected parts, as shall be necessary to restore that union and dependency of the whole on the legislative power, on which the health, strength, and happiness of the British Empire depends. In the prosecution of which, to the wisdom and firmness of your Majesty's Councils, we doubt not, will be joined the hearts and hands of all that love their Country, and that Sovereign who is so truly the guardian of its Constitution and liberty.

May this best, this most abused of human blessings, be long dispensed by your Majesty, and late, very late, may you leave your reign, the rare example of a prince who loved, revered, and strengthened the rights of his people.

Signed by appointment.

GEORGE BURNETT, Provost.

Council-House of Inverary, November 28, 1775.

ADDRESS OF THE MINISTERS AND PRESBYTERY OF IRVINE.

Address of the Ministers and Presbytery of Irvine, presented to His Majesty by the Earl of Loudoun.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble and dutiful Address of the Ministers and Elders of the Presbytery of IRVINE.

Most Gracious Sovereign :

We, your Majesty's most loyal and dutiful subjects, the Ministers and Elders of the Presbytery of Irvine, met here this day, beg leave to approach your throne, deeply sensible of the many blessings, both of a sacred and civil nature, which we enjoy under your Majesty's equitable and mild administration.

We think ourselves called upon, by the present circumstances of publick affairs, to declare unanimously our attachment to your Majesty's person, family, and Government, and our abhorrence of that spirit of licentiousness and rebellion which prevails so extensively in your Majesty's Colonies.

We are happy in being able to assure your Majesty that the numerous people under our care have the same sentiments of loyalty with ourselves, detest that ungrateful and unnatural rebellion, and are disposed to do every thing in their power to strengthen the hands of Government, in taking the most vigorous measures to put a speedy stop to it, and to re-establish peace and harmony upon a solid and lasting foundation.

That Almighty God may direct your Majesty's Councils, and give success to the measures of Government for restoring peace and bringing the rebellious part of your American subjects to a just sense of the invaluable and peculiar blessings that accrue to them from the happy Constitution of the British Empire, is our most earnest prayer.

Signed in name, presence, and by appointment of the Presbytery of Irvine, this twenty-eighth day of November, 1775, by HENRY GRAHAM, Moderator.

CHARLOTTE COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

At a Committee held for Charlotte County, the 28th of October, 1775:

The Rev. Mr. Thomas Johnson being summoned to this Committee, on the information of sundry witnesses, that the said Johnson, on Monday, the 16th of this month, at the Ordinary of Mr. John Tankersly, with a bowl of grog in his hand, drank success to the British arms, appeared, and, after due proof being made of the said charge, the said Johnson was pleased to make a full confession thereof, and, in the most equivocal and insulting manner, attempted to vindicate the said expressions. The Committee being desirous to reclaim Mr. Johnson from such sentiments, and receive him again into friendly communion, expostulated with him on the impropriety of his conduct, and recommended it to him to draw up and sign a recantation of such principles, with a show of contrition for his behaviour, whereby his indiscretion might be forgiven. The said Johnson at length produced a paper, affecting to make amends to his Country for his wishes against it; which being adjudged insufficient, the Committee required some alteration, which Mr. Johnson pretended to make, still treating the inquiry with contempt and disrespect.

The Committee having also called upon him for a justification of his conduct in continuing to deal with a certain Christopher McConnico, of the said County, who was held up as a violator of the Continental Association, and ordered to be published in the Virginia Gazette, on the 8th day of February last, Mr. Johnson confessed he had dealt, and did continue to deal with the said McConnico, since his publication, after sufficient proof had been made thereof. This Committee consider the said Thomas Johnson to have acted as an enemy to America, and ought to be deemed as such by every good member of this community; and, further, do recommend it to all the people of the said County in particular, and Country in general, to withdraw and cease all other and further communication and intercourse with him.

THOMAS READ, Chairman.

LORD STIRLING TO HENDRICK FISHER.

Morris, New-Jersey, November 28, 1775.

SIR: I have this day received two Companies of my Regiment, raised at this place, which, by orders of the Continental Congress, I have put under orders of march for a very consequential purpose, which you well know admits of no delay. In those two Companies I find there is a deficiency of arms. They are to be had in the County, provided money is ready to be paid for them; and, as you have twenty-five hundred dollars in your hand of Continental money for this purpose, I must desire that you will pay to Captain Silas Howel, whom I send express for that purpose, eleven hundred and thirty dollars, for which the men who receive those arms will be put under stoppages of two dollars a month in the Commissary's hands, to repay this advance.

I am well informed that there are about seventy very good arms, with accoutrements, at Hackensack, which I mentioned to the Committee of Safety. It is absolutely necessary we should have them, and if you will send the money to pay for them, I will see that they are forthcoming. This must be done immediately.

To Hendrick Fisher, Esq.

STIRLING.

EGBERT BENSON TO NEW-YORK PROVINCIAL CONGRESS.

Red-Hook, Dutchess County, N. Y., Nov. 28, 1775.

SIR: I am now to acknowledge the receipt of a letter from some individual members of the late Congress, enclosing copies of certain resolutions of the Continental Congress, of the 8th instant, respecting the number of men to be furnished by this County for the use of the fortress in the Highlands. The letter came to hand the 18th instant, and I would immediately have called the County Committee together, but found it would be the saving only of a few days, (the stated meeting being on the 27th;) and therefore, with the unanimous advice of the friends to the cause in the neighbourhood, I thought it proper to defer the matter till that time, especially as the calling a special meeting, the members being dispersed through the County, is attended with considerable expense. There was a circumstance, also, of which I supposed the Congress ignorant, that induced me to think that the business did not require such immediate despatch, namely, that Captain Havens, with fifty men belonging to the Continental forces, (the party that escorted the Chambly garrison to Connecticut,) were on their march to garrison the fortification. I laid the letter before our General Committee on Monday last, who ordered me to write to the Colonels of the two Minute Regiments in the County, desiring them each to hold a Company in readiness to march at a minute's warning, with a request, also, that those gentlemen would immediately write to the commanding officer at the fortress, informing him of the places of rendezvous of their respective Regiments. This measure was advised by three members of the Continental Congress, whom I saw as they passed through this County on their way to the northward. They informed me that they had been at the fort, where they had left part of two Companies, and that when Mr. Havens arrived with his party, there would be men sufficient for its present defence, or, at least, as many as could conveniently be accommodated, and therefore proposed that we should only hold a Company or two ready to march upon an emergency. I have the pleasure to inform the Congress that several Companies have not only turned out, as volunteers, but have, both men and officers, solicited the service.

I remain, by order of the Committee, your very humble servant,

EGBERT BENSON, Chairman.

To Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq., President of the Provincial Congress, New-York.

EGBERT BENSON TO NEW-YORK PROVINCIAL CONGRESS.

Red-Hook, Dutchess County, N. Y., Nov. 28, 1775.

SIR: We have lately elected a new General Committee for this County, which met yesterday. Although the gentlemen have honoured me with the chair, yet, as I reside in the extreme part of the County, we found it very inconvenient that all matters respecting the County should previously come to me, especially when they are of such nature as to render a special meeting of the Committee necessary. We have therefore appointed a Committee of Correspondence for the County, consisting of the following gentlemen, to wit: Colonel Freer, Captain Platt, and Messrs. John Child, Paul Schenck, and Peter Tappen. The residence of those gentlemen being at Poughkeepsie, they can, with more ease and despatch, communicate to the County whatever intelligence they may, from time to time, receive, and summon the members of the Committee, in case of a special meeting, (which we have authorized them to do,) whenever they think it expedient. I am directed to advise the Congress of this matter, with a request that, for the future, all letters, directions, &c., respecting the County, may be sent and directed to our Committee of Correspondence.

I remain, by order of the Committee, your very humble servant,

EGBERT BENSON, Chairman.

To Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq., President of the Provincial Congress.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Ticonderoga, November 28, 1775.

MY DEAR GENERAL: The evening before General Montgomery landed on the Island of Montreal, Mr. Carleton embarked his garrison on board of some vessels and small craft, and made two attempts to pass our batteries, near the mouth of Sorel, but was drove back by Colonel Easton, who has behaved with bravery and much alertness. On the 19th, Mr. Carleton, disguised en Canadien, and accompanied by six peasants, found means to make his escape; Brigadier-General Prescott surrendered next day by capitulation. What terms General Montgomery has given him, I do not know, as he was so hurried, in preparing to move immediately to Quebeck, that he could not find time to send them. Prescott and the officers arrived here at four, to-day. I have just received a return of the officers, men, vessels, and stores, taken, which I do myself the honour to enclose.

Your Excellency's favour, of the 16th November, I received two days ago. I believe some cannon and mortars may be spared; but none, except what I have sent across Lake George, can be got down until that or this lake freezes over. I have a very fine thirteen-inch mortar here, and I will make a push to get her over the lake. But where will you get shells? We have none here.

Mr. Livingston, Mr. Langdon, and Mr. Paine, arrived here at seven, this evening. The season was so far advanced that I could not wait the orders of Congress upon sundry matters which appeared to me absolutely necessary to be carried into immediate execution. I am, however, happy to find that every measure I have pursued corresponds with the instructions given to the Committee.

I am informed that Prescott has used poor Walker and Allen with a shameful brutality. Of this I shall acquaint Governour Trumbull, to whose Colony I shall send him.

I believe our Army in Canada consists of about one thousand and nine hundred men, including Colonel Arnold's corps. I have suggested to Congress that I thought it necessary that they should be completed to three thousand, in the course of the winter, that they may be ready, early in the spring, to put Quebeck (of which I make no doubt we shall possess ourselves) into a proper state of defence, to prevent the enemy from regaining that important place. I have added, that I thought it necessary that preparation should be made here to throw in a re-enforcement early in the spring, if they should be wanted.

I expect to leave this in a few days, for Albany.

I am, Sir, your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To General Washington.

GENERAL MONTGOMERY TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Montreal, November 24, 1775.

MY DEAR GENERAL: I am ashamed of dating my letter from hence. You will not be surprised at my long stay here; but day after day have I been delayed, without a possibility of getting to Arnold's assistance. His last letter I enclose you, together with one for General Washington. To-morrow, I believe I shall sail with two or three hundred men, some mortars, and other artillery. 'Tis with great indignation I hear Lieutenant Halsey, whom I left as Assistant Engineer at St. John's, to put the barracks in a proper state for the reception of a garrison, has run away without leave, taking with him the artificers I had left to carry on the work. This behaviour deserves the severest punishment. I beg he may be made an example of. He is a fit subject of it, and deserved to have been dismissed, with infamy, for endeavouring to persuade the soldiers to return from St. John's, and not to proceed to Montreal. Lieutenant Graham, of the Fourth Regiment, and several others, can prosecute him. It will be necessary to send hard money here immediately, as paper will not yet go down. Price has lent me five thousand Pounds, York money. Walker has been so fortunate as to get home, being retaken in one of the vessels. Poor Allen is sent to England in irons. Should any accident befall him, I hope Prescott will fall a sacrifice to his manes.

I sent, by Schuyler, a return of provisions taken in the vessels. I wish Lee could set off immediately for the command here. I have thoughts of disarming the Tories in this Town; not so much from any apprehensions I have of them, as to quiet the jealous apprehensions of the troops. Several Commissaries, and other officers, are flown without settling their accounts. I hope those people will incur the heavy censure of Congress: one Mr. Waterhouse, who was appointed by Colonel Bedel, and whose conduct must be inquired into, having, I fear, made great waste of publick stores; one Mr. Stewart, who acted at La Prairie; one Mr. Power, who acted at St. John's; Lieutenant-Colonel Warner, I believe, has large accounts unsettled. In short, there are great abuses to be rectified.

I wish, exceedingly, for a respectable Committee of Congress. I really have not weight enough to carry on business by myself. I send you two Indians, taken in Carleton's attack. I forgot to make you this present before.

With respect to the Canadian soldiery, I think you may venture to send them back. The seigneurs, I should imagine, might influence, in some measure, the choice of representation for a Convention.

I am, my dear General, your most affectionate humble servant,

RICHARD MONTGOMERY.*

To General Schuyler.

P. S. The Indians are of the Conosodago. I have not, I believe, more than eight hundred effectives here. However, I can have as many Canadians as I know how to maintain, at least I think so, while affairs wear so promising a prospect.

Montreal, November 23, 1775.

HONOURED SIR: In answer to your favour of yesterday, suffer us to acquaint your Honour that we are exceeding unhappy to find that you have mistaken the motives which induced us to remonstrate against a number of prisoners being suffered to remain in this Town. Be assured, Sir, it proceeded not from a want of confidence in you, as our General—far from it; but being well acquainted with your humane, generous disposition, and knowing how importunate many of those people are, and, at the same time, firmly believing that the publick safety may be in danger from their remaining in this place, we concluded that a dutiful remonstrance, from your faithful officers, might be used as an argument against granting their requests. Suffer us, Sir, as it really proceeded from a sincere regard to our Country as well as to you, to intercede with you, not to think of quitting us at this critical time; we conceive the worst of consequences must almost inevitably follow from it; and also let us beg of your Honour to reconsider the permitting the officers to remain here. We assure you that we are not alone in our fearful apprehensions of the consequences, but all our friends in this country join with us in sentiment.

We are, Sir, your Honour's most obedient and humble servants,

JAMES CLINTON, Colonel.

JOHN NICHOLSON,

LEWIS DUBOIS.

To the Hon. General Montgomery.

COLONEL ARNOLD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Point-aux-Trembles, November 20, 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: My last was of the 14th instant, from Point Levi. The same evening I passed the St. Lawrence without obstruction, except from a barge, on which we fired and killed three men; but as the enemy were apprized of our coming, and the garrison augmented to near seven hundred men, besides the inhabitants, it was *Extract of a Letter from General MONTGOMERY to General SCHUYLER, dated MONTREAL, NOVEMBER 24, 1775.

I am ashamed of staying here so long, and not getting to Arnold's assistance. To-morrow I shall sail with two or three hundred men, some mortars, and other artillery. Lieutenant Halsey, whom I left as Assistant Engineer at St. John's, has run away, and taken the artificers I had left to carry on the works. He deserves the severest punishment. Poor Allen is sent to England in irons. I wish Lee could set off immediately for the command here. Our Commissaries have made great havoc with the publick stores. There are great abuses to be rectified. Several Commissaries and other officers have flown without settling their accounts. I wish exceedingly for a respectable Committee of Congress. I really have not weight enough to carry on business by myself. I have not above eight hundred effectives here; but I can have as many Canadians as I know how to maintain.

An affair happened yesterday which had very near sent me home. A number of officers presumed to remonstrate against the indulgence I had given some of the officers of the King's troops. Such an insult I could not bear, and immediately resigned. To-day they qualified it by such an apology as puts it in my power to resume the command. Captain Lamb is a restless genius, and of a bad temper, and at the head of it. He is brave, active, and intelligent, but very turbulent and troublesome.—Dunlap's New-York.

not thought proper to attempt carrying the Town by storm, but cut off their communication with the country till the arrival of General Montgomery. We accordingly invested the Town with about five hundred and fifty effective men, took possession of a Nunnery, and Major Caldwell's house, about half a league from Town. We marched up several times near the walls, in hopes of drawing them out, but to no effect; though they kept a constant cannonading, and killed us one man.

On the 18th, having intelligence that Captain Napier, in an armed snow, with near two hundred men, having made his escape from Montreal, was very near, and that the garrison, furnished with a number of good field-pieces, intended attacking us the next day, I ordered a strict examination to be made into our arms and ammunition, when, to my great surprise, I found many of our cartridges unfit for use, (which to appearance were good,) and that we had no more than five rounds to each man. It was judged prudent, in our situation, not to hazard a battle, but retire to this place, eight leagues from Quebeck; which we did yesterday, and are waiting here, with impatience, the arrival of General Montgomery, which we expect in a few days. I have been obliged to send to Montreal for clothing for my people, (about six hundred and fifty in the whole,) who are almost naked, and in want of every necessary. I have been as careful of cash as possible, but shall soon have occasion for hard money; as the French have been such sufferers from paper heretofore, and mine so large, I thought it not prudent to offer it to them at present. I have wrote General Montgomery my situation and wants, which I expect will be supplied by him. Had I been ten days sooner, Quebeck must inevitably have fallen into our hands, as there was not a man there to oppose us; however, I make no doubt General Montgomery will reduce it this winter, if properly supported with men; which, in my opinion, cannot in the whole be less than two thousand five hundred, though it may possibly be effected with a less number. The fatigue will be very severe at this season, and in this inclement climate.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest esteem and respect, your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servant,

BENEDICT ARNOLD.

To his Excellency General Washington.

COLONEL ARNOLD TO GENERAL MONTGOMERY.

Point-aux-Trembles, November 20, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I wrote you the 14th and 16th inst., from before Quebeck, which make no doubt you have received. I have this minute the pleasure of yours of the 17th inst. I heartily congratulate you on your success; and hope, as fortune has so far been favourable, and is generally so to the brave, it may, in future, be equal to your warmest wishes.

It was not in my power, before the 18th, to make an exact scrutiny into the arms and ammunition of my detachment; when, upon examination, great part of our cartridges proved unfit for service, and, to my great surprise, we had no more than five rounds for each man, and near one hundred muskets unfit for service; add to this, many of the men invalids, almost naked, and wanting every necessary to make them comfortable. The same day I received advice from my friends in Town, that Colonel Maclean was making preparation, and had determined, in a day or two, to come out and attack us. And as his numbers were greatly superior to ours, with a number of field-pieces, and the limits of Quebeck are so extensive, I found it impossible entirely to cut off their communication with the country, without dividing the small number of men, (I have about five hundred and fifty effectives,) so as to render them an easy sacrifice to the besieged. I therefore concluded it most prudent to retire to this place; and ordered the main body to march at three o'clock, yesterday morning, and waited, with a small detachment, to watch the motions of the enemy until the main body were out of danger; they all arrived here last night. I have procured leather sufficient to shoe them all in a day or two—the only article of clothing to be had in this part of the country. Enclosed is a memorandum of clothing absolutely necessary for a winter's campaign, which beg the favour of your forwarding me as soon as possible. Should it be troublesome, I have desired the bearer, Captain Ogden, a young gentleman and volunteer from the Jerseys, to procure them, and some other articles the officers are in want of, and beg the favour of your order to forward them on.

Captain Napier, in the snow, and a small schooner, passed us yesterday, and are now at Quebeck. The two frigates were laid up the 18th; their guns and men all taken on shore. They are getting all the provisions they possibly can out of the country, and are doubtless determined to make the best defence. From the best accounts I can get, their force is about one thousand men, namely: Landed from the frigate and two transports, from St. John's, one hundred and fifty; recruits, Colonel Maclean's Regiment, one hundred and seventy, irregulars; from the Lizard, two hundred seamen and marines; from the Hunter, sloop, one hundred seamen and marines; on board Captain Napier's, one hundred and fifty—which make seven hundred and seventy: inhabitants, French and English, on their side, one hundred; inhabitants obliged to bear arms against their inclination, and who would join us if an opportunity presented, six hundred; neutrals, four hundred. Total: one thousand eight hundred and seventy.

You will, from the above account, be better able to judge of the force necessary to carry the Town. If my opinion is of any service, I should think two thousand necessary, as they must be divided, at the distance of three or four miles, to secure the passes effectually; and as there is no probability of cannon making a breach in the walls, I should think mortars of the most service, the situation for heaving shells being extremely good, and I think, of course, would soon bring them to compliance; if not, time and perseverance must effect it, before they can possibly be relieved.

Colonel Allen and his party have been, some time since, sent to England in irons. Mr. Walker I have not heard of. I have ordered Captain Ogden to send down all the powder and ball on the road. If he should not be able to procure sufficient, I make no doubt of your forwarding it as soon as possible. The inhabitants are very friendly, and give all the assistance they dare to do at present. Had we a sufficient force to blockade the garrison, I make no doubt of their coming to our assistance in great numbers. As it will doubtless take some time in bringing down your artillery, would it not be better, if you can spare them, to send down five or six hundred men, who, joined to my little corps, will be able to cut off their communication with the country?

I am, dear General, with great esteem, your most obedient and very humble servant,

BENEDICT ARNOLD.

To Brigadier-General Montgomery.

P. S. My hard cash is nearly exhausted; it will not be sufficient for more than ten days or a fortnight; and as the French have been such sufferers by paper money, I don't think it prudent to offer it them at present.

B. A.

COLONEL ARNOLD TO MESSRS. PRINCE AND HAYWOOD.

Point-aux-Trembles, November 20, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: The bearer, Captain Ogden, is a young gentleman of good and opulent family, from Jersey, and a volunteer in the Army. I have sent him to Montreal, to procure some clothing, &c., for the Army. If he has not cash sufficient for his purpose, any articles you are kind enough to furnish him with you will please to place to my account, which I will see duly paid. If he has occasion for any goods out of your way, if you will be kind enough to recommend him, I will be accountable; or the persons who supply him may, by virtue of this letter, charge the same to me. I hope this will find you and family well; and am, with much esteem, Gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

BENEDICT ARNOLD.

Messrs. Prince & Haywood, Merchants, Montreal.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read December 6, 1775.]

Cambridge, November 28, 1775.

SIR: I had the honour of writing to you the 19th inst. I have now to inform you that Henry Knox, Esq., is gone to New-York, with orders to forward to this place what cannon and ordnance stores can be there procured; from thence he will proceed to General Schuyler, on the same business, as you will see by the enclosed copy of instructions which I have given him. It would give me much satisfaction that this gentleman, or any other whom you may think qualified, was appointed to the command of the Artillery Regiment. In my letter to you of the 8th inst., I have expressed myself fully on this subject, which I beg leave to recommend to your immediate attention, as the formation of that corps will be at a stand until I am honoured with your instructions thereon.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. III.

The vessel laden with wine, which I advised you was wrecked on this coast, proves to have been the property of a Thomas Salter, of Philadelphia; the papers, relative to her and cargo, were sent to Robert Morris, Esq., who can give you every information thereon. The schooner with the dry goods, from Boston to Halifax, is given up to the Committee of Safety at Beverly, who will dispose of her and cargo, agreeable to the decision of a Court of Admiralty; and the schooner, carried into Portsmouth by Captain Adams, proves to be a friend—is of course discharged.

There are two persons engaged to go to Nova-Scotia on the business recommended in your last. By the best information we have from thence, the stores, &c., have been withdrawn some time. Should this not be the case, it is next to an impossibility to attempt any thing there, in the present unsettled and precarious state of the Army. Colonel Enos is arrived, and under arrest. He acknowledges he had no orders for coming away. His trial cannot come on until I hear from Colonel Arnold, from whom there is no account since I last wrote you.

From what I can collect, by my inquiries amongst the officers, it will be impossible to get the men to enlist for the continuance of the war, which will be an insuperable obstruction to the formation of the two Battalions of Marines, on the plan resolved on in Congress. As it can make no difference, I propose to proceed on the new arrangement of the Army, and, when completed, inquire out such officers and men as are best qualified for that service, and endeavour to form these two Battalions out of the whole. This appears to me the best method, and will, I hope, meet the approbation of Congress.

As it will be very difficult for the men to work when the hard frost sets in, I have thought it necessary (though of little use at present) to take possession of Cobble-Hill, for the benefit of any future operations. It was effected, without the least opposition from the enemy, the 23d instant. Their inactivity, on this occasion, is what I cannot account for. It is probable they are meditating a blow somewhere.

About three hundred men, women, and children, of the poor inhabitants of Boston, came out to Point Shirley last Friday. They have brought their household furniture, but unprovided of every other necessary of life. I have recommended them to the attention of the Committee of the honourable Council of this Province, now sitting at Watertown.

The number enlisted, since my last, are two thousand five hundred and forty men. I am very sorry to be necessitated to mention to you the egregious want of publick spirit which reigns here. Instead of pressing to be engaged in the cause of their Country, which I vainly flattered myself would be the case, I find we are likely to be deserted at a most critical time. Those that have enlisted must have a furlough, which I have been obliged to grant to fifty at a time, from each Regiment. The Connecticut Troops, upon whom I reckoned, are as backward, indeed, if possible, more so, than the people of this Colony. Our situation is truly alarming; and of this General Howe is well apprized, it being the common topick of conversation when the people left Boston last Friday. No doubt, when he is re-enforced, he will avail himself of the information. I am making the best disposition I can for our defence, having thrown up, besides the work on Cobble-Hill, several redoubts, half-moons, &c., along the bay; and I fear I shall be under the necessity of calling in the Militia and Minute-Men of the country to my assistance. I say I fear it, because, by what I can learn from the officers in the Army belonging to this Colony, it will be next to an impossibility to keep them under any degree of discipline, and that it will be very difficult to prevail on them to remain a moment longer than they choose themselves. It is a mortifying reflection to be reduced to this dilemma. There has been nothing wanting, on my part, to infuse a proper spirit amongst the officers, that they may exert their influence with the soldiery. You see, by a fortnight's recruiting, amongst men with arms in their hands, how little has been the success.

As the small-pox is now in Boston, I have used the precaution of prohibiting such as lately came out from coming near our camp. General Burgoyne, I am informed, will soon embark for England. I think the risk too great to write you by post, whilst it continues to pass through New-York. It is certain that a post has been intercepted, (the beginning of last month,) as they sent out several letters from Boston, with the post-mark at Baltimore on them. This goes by Captain Joseph Blewer, who promises to deliver it carefully unto you.

You doubtless will have heard, ere this reaches, of General Montgomery's having got possession of Montreal. I congratulate you thereon. He has troubles with his troops as well as I have. All I can learn of Colonel Arnold is, that he is near Quebeck. I hope Montgomery will be able to proceed to his assistance. I shall be very uneasy until I hear they are joined.

My best respects attend the gentlemen in Congress; and believe me, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

The Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

ORDERS BY GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 20, 1775.

(Parole, Essex.)

(Countersign, Falmouth.)

The Colonels and Commanding Officers of Regiments upon the new establishment are forthwith to send one officer from each Company upon the recruiting service into the country. They are to take with them a copy of the recruiting instructions, as contained in General Orders of the 12th instant, and comply strictly therewith; care to be taken not to leave any Company under the old establishment destitute of proper officers.

As the General is informed that this is the season in which the people of the four New-England Governments lay in provisions, stores, &c., for the use of their families, he has recommended, in the strongest manner he is capable, the necessity of sending money to camp for the immediate payment of the Troops for the months of October and November; and, in order to enable those who have again enlisted, and such others as are resolved to continue in service, to do this more effectually, he has also recommended them to the Congress for one month's advance pay, and has no doubt himself of its being complied with, if money can be forwarded in time.

No soldier, whenever dismissed, is to carry away any Arms with him that are good and fit for service; if the Arms are his own private property, they will be appraised, and he will receive the full value thereof. Proper persons, when necessary, will be appointed to inspect and value the Arms so detained.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 21, 1775.

(Parole, Gloucester.)

(Countersign, Hampshire.)

The Court-Martial of which Colonel Cleveland was President is dissolved. A General Court-Martial to sit tomorrow morning, in General Sullivan's Brigade, to try such prisoners as shall be brought before them; all evidences and persons concerned to attend the Court.

Mr. Penuel Chiney, Surgeon to the Thirty-Fourth Regiment, tried at a late General Court-Martial, of which Colonel Cleveland was President, for "drawing more Hospital Stores than he had a right to draw, and for vilifying the characters of Major-Generals Lee and Putnam." The Court were of opinion that the prisoner is guilty of speaking words tending to the dishonour of the character of Major-General Putnam, and therefore adjudge him to be cashiered.

John Davidson, of Captain Bancroft's Company, and Thomas Knolton, of Captain Town's Company, Colonel Bridge's Regiment, tried at the above General Court-Martial, for "quitting their post when upon duty." The Court were of opinion that the prisoners are guilty of the crime laid to their charge, and do adjudge them to be punished with fifteen lashes each; but on account of the youth and ignorance of their duty, the Court recommends the prisoners for mercy. The General is pleased, upon the recommendation of the Court, to pardon the prisoners, but at the same time desires it may be noticed that such a crime will not meet with mercy in future.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 22, 1775.

(Parole, Ipswich.)

(Countersign, Kingston.)

The General has been informed, more than once or twice, that an idea prevails amongst some of the First Lieutenants upon the new establishment, that if their Captains do not recruit a Company, the command of it will be taken away and given to such First Lieutenant, provided he can fill it up; which makes the First Lieutenants indifferent and lukewarm in the recruiting business. Whence such an opinion could arise is not easy to say; but if it be possible that there are any officers in this Army actuated by such principles, the General most positively assures them that they not only deceive themselves, but, if proof can be given of such a charge, such guilty enemies to their Country will, with disgrace, be dismissed from the Continental Army and service forever. The General thought it his duty to give them this publick notice.

Whenever the Commanding Officer of one of the new Regiments gives a furlough to a recruit, he is previously to give notice thereof to the Commanding Officer of the Regiment the recruit then belongs to, in order that he may be apprized thereof, and know in what manner to make his weekly return; the doing of which is by no means to be neglected.

The men of the Artillery Regiment are not to be recruited into the other Regiments.

As fast as the men move into barracks, the Colonels are to take especial care that the tents be immediately delivered into the hands of the Quartermaster-General, who, after the present hurry of business is a little over, is to have them washed, repaired, and laid by.

It is expected that the Colonels will frequently visit their men's barracks, and see that they are kept clean and decent, their victuals properly cooked, &c. Nothing contributes more to the health of the Troops, or can add more to the reputation of the officers, than men to be seen healthy, clean, and well dressed.

Those officers who have been all the summer in service, and recommended by the honourable the Council of this Colony for commissions, may now apply for them through their Colonels. It is expected that those who have given in their names to stay, and are appointed to some of the new Regiments, will not apply, as those commissions will be given out by Regiments, so soon as the new establishment takes place.

The General approves the sentence of the General Court-Martial held upon Dr. Chiney, and orders it to take place immediately.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 23, 1775.

(Parole, Lebanon.)

(Countersign, Marshfield.)

The Colonels or Commanding Officers of each new established Regiment may draw to the amount of two months' pay for each officer they send into the country (agreeable to the orders of the 20th instant) a recruiting, and furnish them therewith; abstracts to be made and given in accordingly.

Men recruited out of the old Regiments will continue in pay after the term of their present enlistments, as usual; and all new recruits, that is, men who are not at present in the service, will enter upon pay so soon as they enlist, and will be allowed six pence a day for subsistence, from the time they are recruited until they march for the camp, and one penny per mile, from their usual place of abode to their Regiment, for subsistence and expenses afterwards. The officers are not to keep the recruits they raise in the country a moment longer than they can help; but send them to their respective Regiments as fast as eight or ten of them are enlisted.

The Colonels or Commanding Officers of Regiments may relieve the officers who are first sent into the country upon the recruiting service, as they shall see occasion, and are expressly ordered to recall every one who is negligent or unsuccessful in this duty.

The new enlisted men, upon producing to the Colonel or Commanding Officer of the Regiment they are enlisted into, a Blanket, fit for use, will be entitled to the two dollars allowed by the Continent therefor; and the Colonel or Commanding Officer is to make out a list of the names of such men, that the money may be drawn for them. The Colonel is to keep a copy of such list, to prevent mistakes; the list must specify the Company each man belongs to.

The Major-General, with the Brigadier of his division, are to appoint three persons of character and judgment to value the Arms of discharged soldiers, specifying to whom they belong, whether publick or private property, and what they consist of. They are to fix a reasonable and just price upon them, and to take none but such as are fit for service. They are to enter into a book such valuation, and deliver the Arms so valued to the Commissary of Artillery Stores, and take a receipt for the same.

A General Court-Martial to sit to-morrow, in Cambridge, to try such prisoners as shall be brought before them. The General Court-Martial of which Colonel Poor was President is dissolved.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 24, 1775.

(Parole, Newport.)

(Countersign, Providence.)

Captain William Hubbel, of Colonel Webb's Regiment, tried at a late General Court-Martial, for "behaving in a low, scandalous, and unofficerlike manner." The Court having acquitted the prisoner, the General orders him to be released.

Captain Grey, of Colonel Brewer's Regiment, tried at a General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Enoch Poor was President, for "dissuading the soldiers from enlisting, therein acting the part of tory and enemy to his Country." The Court thinking proper to acquit the prisoner, the General orders him to be released.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 25, 1775.

(Parole, Hampden.)

(Countersign, Pym.)

The commissioned, non-commissioned officers and soldiers, lately arrived in camp from Kennebeck River, are to join their respective Corps. A return of them, signed by the Commanding Officers of their respective Regiments, to be sent to the Adjutant-General Monday morning.

At the request of the honourable the General Court of this Colony, the General directs that the Colonels or Commanding Officers of the Massachusetts Regiments, do respectively order each of their Captains to make out a Muster and Pay-Roll of his Company, up to the first day of August last, from the time of each man's enlistment. This is to be done agreeable to the form of a return, which is lodged with, and may be had of the Adjutant-General. The Court desires these Rolls may be confirmed, upon oath, and lodged, as soon as possible, (with the original certificates,) in the Secretary's office of the Colony, that all the Massachusetts Regiments may be paid up to the 1st of August, aforesaid. For further particulars, relative to this resolution of the General Court, the General refers to their resolve of the 3d instant; it being too long to insert in these Orders.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 26, 1775.

(Parole, Wilkes.)

(Countersign, Liberty.)

The Colonels and Commanding Officers of Regiments upon the new establishment to order the men to be recruited to be paraded every morning, at ten in the forenoon, before the Brigadier-General of their respective Brigades, who will reject such as are unfit for service, or do not come within the description of the recruiting orders. The Brigadier will sign a certificate of the recruits he approves of, and deliver it to each of the Colonels, that the blanket money due may be paid, and no more.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 27, 1775.

A Court of Inquiry to sit to-morrow morning, to examine into the conduct of Lieutenant-Colonel Enos, who appears to have left Colonel Arnold, his commanding officer, without leave. Major-General Lee, President; Brigadier-General Greene, Colonel Stark, Major Durkee, Brigadier-General Heath, Colonel Nixon, Major Sherburne, Members.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, November 28, 1775.

(Parole, Montgomery.)

(Countersign, Montreal.)

An express last night from General Montgomery brings the joyful tidings of the surrender of the City of Montreal to the Continental arms. The General hopes such frequent favours from Divine Providence will animate every American to continue to exert his utmost in the defence of the liberties of his Country, as it would now be the basest ingratitude to the Almighty, and to their Country, to show any the least backwardness in the publick cause.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL JOSEPH REED.

Cambridge, November 28, 1775.

DEAR SIR: Your favours of the 15th and 17th are come to hand. In one of them you justly observe, that the sudden departure of Mr. Randolph must cause your absence to be the more sensibly felt. I can truly assure you that I miss you exceedingly, and if an express declaration be wanting to hasten your return, I make it most heartily, and with some pleasure, as Mr. Lynch, in a letter of the 13th, gives this information: "In consequence of your letter by Colonel Reed, I applied to the Chief Justice, who tells me the Supreme Courts are lately held, and that it will be some time before their term will return; that he knows of no capital suit now depending, and that it is very easy for Colonel Reed to manage matters so as not to let them prevent his return to you. I am sure Mr. Chew is so heartily disposed to oblige you, and serve the cause, that nothing in his power will be wanting." I could wish, my good friend, that these things may give a spur to your inclination to return, and that I may see you here as soon as convenient; for I feel the want of your ready pen greatly.

What an astonishing thing it is that those who are employed to sign the Continental bills should not be able, or inclined, to do it as fast as they are wanted. They will prove the destruction of the Army, if they are not more attentive and diligent.

Such a dearth of publick spirit and such want of virtue, such stockjobbing and fertility in all the low arts to obtain advantages of one kind or another in this great change of military arrangement, I never saw before, and pray God's mercy that I may never be witness to again. What will be the end of these manœuvres is beyond my scan. I tremble at the prospect. We have been till this time enlisting about three thousand five hundred men. To engage these, I have been obliged to allow furloughs as far as fifty men to a Regiment; and the officers, I am persuaded, indulge as many more. The Connecticut troops will not be prevailed upon to stay longer than their term, saving those who have enlisted for the next campaign, and are mostly on furlough; and such a mercenary spirit pervades the whole, that I should not be at all surprised at any disaster that may happen. In short, after the last of this month, our lines will be so weakened, that the Minute-men and Militia must be called in for their defence; and these, being under no kind of government themselves, will destroy the little subordination I have been labouring to establish, and run me into one evil whilst I am endeavouring to avoid another: but the less must be chosen. Could I have foreseen what I have experienced, and am likely to experience, no consideration upon earth should have induced me to accept this command. A Regiment, or any subordinate department, would have been accompanied with ten times the satisfaction, and, perhaps, the honour.

The Congress already know, from the general estimate given in for a month, what sum it will take to supply the Army, and that little less than two hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars will answer the purpose. Pray impress this upon the members, and the necessity of forwarding the last sum voted, as one hundred thousand dollars will be totally inadequate to our demands at this time.

I wish that matter respecting the punctilio hinted at by you could come to some decision of Congress. I have done nothing yet in respect to the proposed exchange of prisoners, nor shall I, until I hear from them or you on this subject. I am sorry Mr. White met with a disappointment in the Jerseys, as I could wish not to be under the necessity, from any former encouragement given him, of taking him into my family. I find it absolutely necessary that the aids to the Commander-in-Chief should be ready at their pen, (which, I believe, he is not,) to render that assistance which is expected of them. It would give me singular pleasure to provide for those two gentlemen mentioned in your letter; but, believe me, it is beyond the powers of conception to realize the absurdities and partiality of these people, and the trouble and vexation I have had in the new arrangement of officers. After five, I think, different meetings of the General Officers, I have, in a manner, been obliged to yield to the humour and whimsies of the people, or get no Army. The officers of one Government would not serve in the Regiments of another, although there was to be an entire new creation; a Captain must be in this Regiment, a Subaltern in that Company. In short, I can scarce tell, at this moment, in what manner they are fixed. Some time hence strangers may be brought in; but it could not be done now, except in an instance or two, without putting too much to hazard.

What can your brethren of the law mean, by saying your perquisites, as Secretary, must be considerable? I am sure they have not amounted to one farthing. Captain Blewer waits, and therefore I shall add no more than that I am, dear Sir, your most obedient and affectionate servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Colonel Joseph Reed.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO MAJOR-GENERAL WARD.

Cambridge, November 28, 1775.

SIR: I am to acquaint you, by his Excellency's command, that, from the returns made of the Connecticut troops, he has no dependence in their enlisting anew, and continuing here. He therefore desires that you, with Generals Thomas and Spencer, will be at Head-Quarters as early to-morrow as you conveniently can, to take such measures as may be judged expedient, in case of their departure. You will please to communicate this to Generals Thomas and Spencer.

I am, Sir, &c., R. H. HARRISON, Aid-de-Camp.
To Major-General Ward.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO MAJOR-GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Cambridge, November 28, 1775.

DEAR SIR: You may easily conceive that I had great pleasure in perusing your letter of the 18th instant, which, with the enclosures, I received last evening. It was much damped by my finding that General Montgomery had the same difficulty to encounter with the troops under your command, that I have with these here. No troops were ever better provided or higher paid; yet their backwardness to enlist for another year is amazing. It grieves me to see so little of that patriotick spirit which I was taught to believe was characteristic of this people.

Colonel Enos, who had the command of Arnold's rear division, is returned, with the greater part of his men, which must weaken him so much as to render him incapable of making a successful attack on Quebeck, without assistance from General Montgomery. I hope he will be able to give it him, and, by taking that City, finish his glorious campaign.

I have nothing material to communicate to you from hence. I am making every disposition for defence, by throwing up redoubts, &c., along the bay, some of which have been constructed under the enemy's guns; but they have not given us the least disturbance. I suppose Mr. Howe waits the arrival of his re-enforcements, when, probably, he will attempt something. He has sent out about three hundred men, women, and children, last week. They give shocking accounts of the want of fuel and fresh provisions. General Burgoyne has gone or is going home.

Last evening I received the agreeable account of one of our armed schooners having taken a large brigantine, laden with military stores, the inventory of which I have the pleasure to enclose. But let not this acquisition prevent your sending what stores you can spare. We shall want them all.

Adieu, my dear General. I wish you a return of your health; and am, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Schuyler, Northern Department.

ADDRESS OF THE BURGH OF RUTHERGLEN.

Address of the Provost, Magistrates, and Council of the Burgh of Rutherglen, presented to His Majesty by the Right Honourable Lord Frederick Campbell, their Representative in Parliament.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

Your Majesty's loyal and dutiful subjects, the Provost, Magistrates, and Council of the Burgh of Rutherglen, deeply impressed with a sense of the many blessings we enjoy under your Majesty's mild Government, beg leave most humbly to approach your throne, and to declare our disapprobation and abhorrence of the rebellion now supported by some of your Majesty's deluded subjects in North-America, against their lawful Sovereign and the Constitution of the British Empire.

We sincerely wish that the measures adopted by your Majesty and Parliament may be vigorously prosecuted, for reducing your rebellious subjects under a due obedience to the laws, and for establishing the dependance of the Colonies on their Mother Country.

Permit us to assure your Majesty of our firm attachment to your royal person and family, and of our sincere and hearty resolution to support the administration of your Majesty's Government.

Signed in presence and by appointment of the Magistrates and Town Council, this twenty-ninth day of November, seventeen hundred and seventy-five years.

JAMES FLEMING, Provost.

ADDRESS OF THE GENTLEMEN, ETC., OF THE COUNTY OF KINCARDINE.

Address of the Gentlemen, Justices of the Peace, Freeholders, and Commissioners of the Land-Tax of the County of Kincardine, transmitted to the Earl of Suffolk, one of His Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, and presented to His Majesty.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Gentlemen, Justices of the Peace, Freeholders, and Commissioners of the Land-Tax of the County of KINCARDINE.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's most loyal subjects, the Gentlemen of the County of Kincardine, in general meeting assembled, esteem it our duty on the present occasion to express, with the highest sense of gratitude, the innumerable blessings we enjoy under your Majesty's free and lenient Government, and to avow our firm and unalterable resolution to support, by every exertion of our powers, the measures adopted by your Majesty and the Parliament of Great Britain, for suppressing the rebellion now subsisting in your Majesty's Colonies in America.

With the most ardent prayers for your Majesty's happiness, and the long continuance of your reign over a free and a grateful people, we most sincerely wish for the speedy success of your Majesty's endeavours to reduce the Colonies to a just subordination to the legislative powers of Great Britain, and due obedience to your Majesty's Government.

Signed in name of the General Meeting, and by their appointment, at Stonhaven, the 29th day of November, 1775 years.

R. BARCLAY, Præses.

GOOCHLAND COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

At a Committee held for Goochland County, at the Court-House, on Wednesday, the 29th November, 1775:

Friends and Countrymen:

Ye whose situation exposes you to the relentless fury of merciless plunderers, who are daily meditating how they may distress His Majesty's faithful subjects on this Continent, we rejoice to find that several of the upper Counties have taken your case into their tender consideration, and have declared their willingness to manifest every token of humanity and affection to your families, when you are forced to quit your habitations. We sincerely join with them, and do hereby, for ourselves and constituents, assure our friends in the lower Counties, who find it necessary to leave their habitations, that our minds are disposed to receive them with sincere affection; and we do hereby invite such, who think themselves in danger, to come and dwell among us, we being willing to afford to as many of their families as we can every comfort and conveniency in our power. And we sincerely exhort our suffering countrymen to put their trust and confidence in the Supreme Being, whose arm is mighty to save, and who will, in due time, defend the cause of the oppressed; and not to be deterred, by the threats of their enemies, to renounce their birthright. What though they should insultingly say, with Rabshakeh of old, "I will come up to Lebanon, and cut down the tall cedars thereof; and the choice fir trees thereof; I will enter into the height of his border and the forest of his Carmel"—yet let us, with good Hezekiah, spread their reproachful words before the Lord, let us lift up our hearts unto God, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and whose sovereign power and dominion is over all creatures.

Resolved, That the preceding Address be published in the Virginia Gazette.

GEORGE UNDERWOOD, Clerk.

JOHN HANCOCK AND THOMAS CUSHING TO COUNCIL OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Philadelphia, November 29, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: We wrote you, on the 24th instant, that we thought the matter in dispute between the two Houses ought to be laid before the Congress, and their sentiments taken upon it; but, for various reasons, too many now to enumerate, this has not as yet been done. However, we have consulted the members of the Congress individually, and, upon conversing with them, we find that, in general, they are extremely desirous we should conform, in all Governmental matters, as near as possible to the spirit and substance of our charter; and it is their opinion that, when the resolutions of the 18th July last were passed, it was the intention of the Congress not to supersede the resolve of the 8th of June last, but to leave such Governments as were competent to the business to model and regulate their militia agreeable to their several constitutions, as prescribed by their respective charters. However, they said, as it appeared, from our representation of matters, that our House of Representatives had conceived otherwise of this matter, and had claimed a right to a voice with the Council in the choice of militia officers; and that, if the dispute was continued, it would throw the Colony into a ferment; and considering, also, that at this critical juncture our militia might be suddenly wanted, and it was therefore highly expedient and necessary it should be immediately settled and regulated, it was their opinion that it would be advisable for the Council, during the present exigency of our affairs, to gratify the House of Representatives in this claim, but not by any means any further to deviate from the charter.

Thus we have collected and advised you of the sentiments of the members of the Congress in general, which we doubt not will be some aid to you, in your deliberations and determinations upon this important subject, and, were we present, we should vote agreeable to this advice.

We conclude, with great respect, your Honours' most obedient humble servants,

JOHN HANCOCK,
THOMAS CUSHING.

To the Honourable the President and Members of the Council of Massachusetts-Bay.

THOMAS JEFFERSON TO JOHN RANDOLPH.

Philadelphia, November 29, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I am to give you the melancholy intelligence of the death of our most worthy Speaker, which happened here on the 22d of the last month. He was struck with an apoplexy, and expired within five hours.

I have it in my power to acquaint you, that the success of our arms has corresponded with the justice of our cause. Chamblly and St. John's were taken some weeks ago, and in them the whole regular Army in Canada, except about forty or fifty men. This day, certain intelligence has reached us, that our General, Montgomery, is received into Montreal; and we expect, every hour, to be informed that Quebeck has opened its arms to Colonel Arnold, who, with eleven hundred men, was sent from Boston up the Kennebeck, and down the Chaudiere River to that place. He expected to be there early this month. Montreal acceded to us on the 13th, and Carleton set out, with the shattered remains of his little Army, for Quebeck, where we hope he will be taken up by Arnold. In a short time, we have reason to hope, the Delegates of Canada will join us in Congress, and complete the American union, as far as we wish to have it completed. We hear that one of the British transports has arrived at Boston; the rest are beating off the coast in very bad weather.

You will have heard, before this reaches you, that Lord Dunmore has commenced hostilities in Virginia. That people bore with every thing, till he attempted to burn the Town of Hampton. They opposed and repelled him, with considerable loss on his side, and none on ours. It has raised our countrymen into a perfect phrensy.

It is an immense misfortune to the whole Empire, to have a King of such a disposition at such a time. We are told, and every thing proves it true, that he is the bitterest enemy we have. His Minister is able, and that satisfies me that ignorance or wickedness somewhere controls him. In an earlier part of this contest, our petitions told him, that from our King there was but one appeal. The admonition was despised, and that appeal forced on us. To undo his Empire, he has but one more truth to learn; that, after Colonies have drawn the sword, there is but one step more they can take. That step is now pressed upon us, by the measures adopted, as if they were afraid we would not take it. Believe me, dear Sir, there is not in the British Empire a man who more cordially loves a union with Great Britain than I do. But, by the God that made me, I will cease to exist before I yield to a connection on such terms as the British Parliament propose; and in this I think I speak the sentiments of America. We want neither inducement nor power, to declare and assert a separation. It is will alone which is wanting, and that is growing apace, under the fostering hand of our King. One bloody campaign will probably decide, everlastingly, our future course; I am sorry to find a bloody campaign is decided on. If our winds and waters should not combine to rescue their shores from slavery, and General Howe's re-enforcement should arrive in safety, we have hopes he will be inspirited to come out of Boston and take another drubbing; and we must drub him soundly, before the sceptred tyrant will know we are not mere brutes, to crouch under his hand, and kiss the rod with which he deigns to scourge us.

Yours, &c.,

THOMAS JEFFERSON.

To John Randolph, Esq., London.

CHRISTOPHER LEFFINGWELL TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

[Read December 12, 1775.]

Norwich, November 29, 1775.

DEAR SIR: The Brig Nancy, Thomas Davis, master, lately belonging to Joshua Winslow, of Boston, arrived at Stonington, in Connecticut, in the month of July last, with a load of molasses. The master immediately notified the administrators, and William Lightly was sent out of Boston to take charge of her. He was taken up and examined by the General Officers at Roxbury camp, and sent to General Washington, at Cambridge. I was then at Roxbury, and was desired to advise Governor Trumbull, &c., as may be seen by the enclosed letters. The brig was brought here, and myself, with William Coit, were appointed to procure the vessel unladed, stripped of her sails, rigging, &c., and store them with the goods; dispose of sufficient for paying the master and people their wages, &c., and discharge them; all which we have done.

The Committees of Correspondence and Inspection for this Town, at their meeting this day, directed us to ask the advice of the honourable Continental Congress, what further steps to take in this matter. The expense of storage is daily increasing, and the molasses would now sell for one shilling and six pence per gallon, and might be converted into cash immediately. If it lies much longer in store, must have considerable cooperage. Beg you would lay the matter before the Congress, and that they would give us some directions. The enclosed papers be kind enough to return me, per bearer, Mr. Daniel Leffingwell, and as soon as may be the advice of Congress; and beg leave to subscribe, with the greatest esteem, your most obedient humble servant, for Mr. Coit and self,

CHRISTOPHER LEFFINGWELL.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

New-Haven, November 29, 1775.

On the 20th of this month, sixteen respectable inhabitants of this Town, in company with Captain Sears, set out from this place for East and Westchester, in the Province of New-York, to disarm the principal Tories there, and secure the persons of Parson Seabury, Judge Fowler, and Lord Underhill. On their way thither they were joined by the Captains Richards, Scillick, and Mead, with about eighty men. At Mamaroneck they burnt a small sloop which was purchased by Government for the purpose of carrying provisions on board the Asia. At Eastchester they seized Judge Fowler, then repaired to Westchester, and secured Seabury and Underhill. Having possessed themselves of these three caitiffs, they sent them to Connecticut under a strong guard. The main body, consisting of seventy-five, then proceeded to New-York, which they entered at noon-day, on Thursday, the 23d, on horseback, with bayonets fixed; in the greatest regularity went down the main street, and drew up in close order before the printing office of the infamous James Rivington. A small detachment entered it, and in about three-quarters of an hour brought off the principal part of his types, for which they offered to give an order on Lord Dunmore. They then faced and wheeled to the left, and marched out of Town to the tune of Yankee Doodle. The vast concourse of people assembled at the coffee-house bridge, on their leaving the ground, gave them three very hearty cheers. On their way home they disarmed all the Tories that lay on their route; and yesterday arrived here, escorted by a great number of gentlemen from the westward, the whole making a very grand procession. Upon their entrance into Town, they were saluted with the discharge of two cannon, and received by the inhabitants with every mark of approbation and respect. The Company divided into two parts, and concluded the day in festivity and innocent mirth. Captain Sears returned in company with the other gentlemen, and proposes to spend the winter here, unless publick business should require his presence in New-York. Seabury, Underhill, and Fowler, three of the dastardly protesters against the proceedings of the Continental Congress, and who it is believed had concerted a plan for kidnapping Captain Sears, and conveying him on board of the Asia, man-of-war, are (with the types and arms) safely lodged in this Town, where it is expected Lord Underhill will have leisure to form the scheme of a lucrative lottery, the tickets of which cannot be counterfeited; and Parson Seabury sufficient time and opportunity to compose sermons for the next Continental Fast.

RECANTATION OF JONATHAN FOWLER AND NATHANIEL UNDERHILL.

Whereas I, Jonathan Fowler, Esq., one of His Majesty's Judges of the Inferior Court, for the County of Westchester, in the Province of New-York, did some time ago sign a protest against the honourable Continental Congress, which inconsiderate conduct I am heartily sorry for, and do hereby promise for the future not to transgress in the view of the people of this Continent, nor in any sense to oppose the measures taken by the Continental Congress.

I do also certify, that some time past, being at court at the White-Plains, I heard a person say, whom several people present believed to be a Lieutenant or Midshipman of the Asia, man-of-war, that the Captain of the Asia intended to take Captain Sears up, and that there would soon be delivered, gratis, from on board the man-of-war, great quantities of paper money, in imitation of Continental currency, which would be printed with the types taken from Mr. Holt, of Virginia.

As witness my hand:

JONATHAN FOWLER.

New-Haven, November 29, 1775.

Whereas I, Nathaniel Underhill, of Westchester, in the Province of New-York, did some time ago sign a protest against the resolves of the honourable Continental Congress, which inconsiderate conduct I am heartily sorry for, and do hereby promise for the future not to transgress in the view of the people of this Continent, nor in any sense to oppose the measures taken by the Continental Congress.

As witness my hand, in New-Haven, November 30, 1775:

N. UNDERHILL,

Mayor of the Borough of Westchester.

COLONEL ROGER ENOS TO THE PUBLICK.

I esteem it the duty of every man not only to merit a good name, but to appear in defence of it when unjustly attacked, and, if possible, to clear it from groundless aspersions. Great numbers, for want of proper information, or by artful misrepresentations, imbibe unreasonable prejudices against their fellow men, and form conceptions greatly to their disadvantage, who, on a full and impartial knowledge of the facts, will essentially alter their opinions, and applaud those actions which, from misrepresentation, they were inclined to censure and condemn. As my character, both as an officer and soldier, hath of late suffered much in the view of many, and as I value my reputation as high as my life, (indeed, I consider it as the greatest curse that can befall a man to outlive his character,) I must beg leave, through the channel of the press, to exhibit to the world the following representation of my case; which I trust will sufficiently clear up my character, and convince the impartial, that my conduct, instead of the censure, merits the approbation of the publick.

At a Court of Inquiry held at Cambridge, on Wednesday, the 29th day of November, 1775, by order of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of the Forces of the United Colonies, to examine into the conduct of Lieutenant-Colonel Enos, for leaving the detachment under Colonel Arnold, and returning home, without permission from his commanding officer, present:

Major-General Lee, President; Brig. General Greene, Brig. General Heath, Colonel Nixon, Colonel Stark, Major Durkee, Major Sherburne.

The Court are of opinion, after receiving all the information within their power, that Colonel Enos's misconduct (if he has been guilty of misconduct) is not of so very heinous a nature as was first supposed, but that it is necessary, for the satisfaction of the world, and for his own honour, that a Court-Martial should be immediately held for his trial.

CHARLES LEE, Maj. General, President.

A true copy, from the Minutes of said Court, compared and examined by

W. TUDOR, Judge Advocate.

Proceedings of a General Court-Martial of the Line, held at Head-Quarters, at Cambridge, by order of his Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., Commander-in-Chief of the Forces of the UNITED COLONIES, DECEMBER 1, A. D. 1775.

Brigadier-General Sullivan, President; Colonel Bridge, Colonel Sergeant, Colonel Greaton, Lieutenant-Colonel Cleveland, Lieutenant-Colonel Marsh, Lieutenant-Colonel Reed, Lieutenant Colonel Brown, Lieutenant-Colonel Vose, Major Poor, Major Wood, Major Woods, Major Johnson; W. Tudor, Judge Advocate.

The Court, being duly sworn, proceeded to the trial of Lieutenant-Colonel Enos, of the Twenty-Second Regiment, under an arrest for leaving the detachment under Colonel Arnold, and returning home, without permission from his commanding officer.

Lieutenant-Colonel Enos, being arraigned on the above charge, says, that true it is, he did return without permission from Colonel Arnold, his commanding officer; but the circumstances of the case were such as obliged him so to do.

Captain Williams. At the Great Carrying-Place, I heard that the men ahead were in want of provision. About two-thirds across the Great Carrying-Place, I met Major Bigelow coming back with ninety-five men, who said they wanted provision; I dealt out to them a barrel of pork and one of flour; I delivered Major Bigelow six barrels more of provision. We proceeded forward, and met several parties returning home, and we had orders to supply them with provision to reach the English settlements. When I came up with Colonel Enos, I was informed by Major Bigelow there had been a Council of War, and that it was settled that, for want of provisions, the whole detachment under Colonel Enos should return. Colonel Enos proposed to go forward, and let his division return; but as there was a large number, besides those which belonged properly to our division, and as we had several invalids to bring back, and were very short of provision, (for we had but three days' provision, and were above one hundred miles from the English settlements) I thought it was absolutely necessary for Colonel Enos to take the command of the party back, and protested against his going on to join Colonel Arnold; at the same time, not knowing that Colonel Enos had any orders from Colonel Arnold to join him. That division which went on to join Colonel Arnold had not more than five days' provision. We supplied Colonel Greene's division with most of their provision, and left ourselves but three days' provision.

Captain McCobb. About fifty miles up the Dead River we held a Council of War, at which I assisted as a member; and it was agreed that the whole division under Col. Enos should return, there not being sufficient provision to carry both divisions through. Colonel Greene's division being some way ahead, it was found that we should save two days' time by letting that division go forward, and time was too precious and provision too scarce to enter into disputes. It was thought best for the service, that Colonel

Greene's division should proceed, and we left them with about five days' provision, and returned with three ourselves. Lieutenant-Colonel Enos was for going forward without his division; but, for the same reasons which have been mentioned by Captain Williams, I protested against his going on.

Captain Scott confirms all that Captain McCobb deposes, and adds, that he himself protested against Colonel Enos's going forward; that he thought, and is now confirmed in the opinion, that the presence of Colonel Enos was very necessary to preserve the harmony and order necessary to secure the safe retreat of the men who were ordered to return.

Lieutenant Hide. I assisted at the Council of War up the Dead River. We found, by the best computation, that it would take fifteen days to reach any French inhabitants, and that it would be impossible for both divisions of Greene's and Enos's to go through, the provision being so short. It was adjudged that there was about four days' provision for those who went forward, and we returned with three. I protested against Colonel Enos's going on to join Colonel Arnold, his presence being necessary for our safe retreat, as we had a number of invalids, and a considerable number of men who did not belong to either of the Companies in our division.

Lieutenant Buckmaster confirms what Lieutenant Hide deposes; and adds, that it was the opinion of all the officers of Colonel Enos's division, that he should return with his division, as we had one hundred and fifty men who did not belong to our division, who had only a subaltern to command them, and whom it would have been impossible to manage without Colonel Enos's presence.

The Court being cleared, after mature consideration, are unanimously of opinion, that Colonel Enos was under a necessity of returning with the division under his command, and therefore acquit him with honour.

JOHN SULLIVAN, President.

A true copy of the proceedings.

Attest: W. TUDOR, Judge Advocate.

New-York, April 28, 1776.

I hereby certify that I was President of a Court-Martial, in Cambridge, when Colonel Enos was tried for leaving Colonel Arnold, with the rear division of the detachment under his command, bound for Quebeck; and, upon the trial, it clearly appeared to me, as well as to all the other members of the Court, that Colonel Enos was perfectly justifiable in returning with the division, being clearly proved, by the testimony of witnesses of undoubted veracity, (some of whom I have been personally acquainted with for a number of years, and know them to be persons of truth,) that so much provision had been sent forward, to support the other divisions, as left them so small a quantity that their men were almost famished with hunger on their return; and some would undoubtedly have starved, had they not, by accident, come across and killed a large moose. Upon their evidence, there remained no doubt in the mind of myself, or any of the members, that the return of the division was prudent and reasonable; being well convinced that they had not provision sufficient to carry them half way to Quebeck, and that their going forward would only have deprived the other division of a part of theirs, which, as the event has since shown, was not enough to keep them all from perishing; we therefore unanimously acquitted Colonel Enos with honour.

I further certify, that by a strict inquiry into the matter since, from persons who were in the divisions that went forward, I am convinced that had Colonel Enos, with his division, proceeded, it would have been a means of causing the whole detachment to have perished in the woods, for want of sustenance.

I further add, that I have been well informed, by persons acquainted with Colonel Enos, that he has ever conducted as a good and faithful officer.

JOHN SULLIVAN.

TO THE IMPARTIAL PUBLICK.

The case of Lieutenant-Colonel Enos having engaged the attention of many officers of the Army, as well as others, and as we are informed he is much censured by many persons, for returning back from the expedition to Canada, under the command of Colonel Arnold, by which

Colonel Enos's character greatly suffers, we think it our duty to certify, that some of us, from our own personal knowledge of the military abilities of Colonel Enos, and others of us from information, are fully convinced that he is a gentleman fully acquainted with his duty as an officer, a man of fortitude and prudence, and, in our opinion, well calculated to sustain, with honour, any military character; and, from the fullest inquiry, we are satisfied that (whatsoever different representations may be made) in returning to camp, with the division under his command, he is justifiable, and conducted as an understanding, prudent, faithful officer, and deserves applause rather than censure; and we can safely recommend him as a person worthy to be employed in any military department.

Now, let Dr. Smith, of Philadelphia, display the malignity of his heart in another funeral oration, in attempting to stab my reputation, and render me infamous in the view of the world. However, I will venture to assert, that if ill-nature, and a fondness to raise his reputation on the ruin of his fellow-men, are as discernible in his other political writings as in this oration, so far as it respects my character, he is one of the most dangerous writers, and, perhaps, the most consummate villain, that walks on the face of God's earth. Ignorance of my real character, and of the grounds and reasons of my conduct in returning from the expedition to Canada, was no warrant for such indecent freedom as he has used in his malicious, though feeble attempt to ruin my reputation. He ought to have waited till a true and impartial history of the facts had enabled him to talk on the subject with propriety, and not have uttered things at random; and, for the sake of furnishing matter for declamation, have undertook, with such violence, to blacken the character of an innocent man.

New-London, May 31, 1776.

ROGER ENOS.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE GENERAL COURT OF MASSACHUSETTS-BAY.

Cambridge, November 29, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: The necessity of giving furloughs to the soldiers of the present, who enlist into the new Army, (by way of encouragement, and to afford opportunity of providing necessaries for themselves and families,) was so strongly impressed upon me, that I have consented to fifty of a Regiment being absent at a time. This will be a reduction of at least fifteen hundred men from the strength of our lines. To this I am to add that, contrary to my expectations and assurances given, I now find that the Connecticut Regiments cannot be induced to stay beyond their limited term. Such a considerable diminution of our force, at a time when so capital a change is taking place, in the face of an enemy increasing in strength, cannot but be attended with extreme hazard, if some expedient is not fallen upon to supply the deficiency.

I have summoned the General Officers to meet at Head-Quarters, at eleven o'clock, to-morrow, to advise what is to be done in this emergency; and should be glad to be aided by a member or two of your Court, at this consultation, as I think our situation critical, and delays dangerous.

In perusing a resolve of your honourable body, I perceive it to be determined that your troops are to be paid by the lunar, or twenty-eight days to the month, from the time of their enlisting to the first of August; upon which I cannot help observing, as my opinion, that it will throw the rest of this Army into disorder; and that as the Continental Congress have, in explicit terms, resolved that it is the calendar month they mean to pay by, that the difference between the two must be considered as a Colonial, not a Continental charge.

I am, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. James Warren, Esq., Speaker, &c.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO THE COUNCIL OF MASSACHUSETTS-BAY.

Cambridge, November 29, 1775.

SIR: I am to inform you, by command of his Excellency General Washington, that he this day wrote and sent a letter, by Mr. Adjutant Gibbs, to Watertown, for you, upon business of importance, which Mr. Gibbs, through mistake, gave to the honourable the Speaker of the Assembly. His Excellency begs the favour of you to have inquiry made after the letter, that you may get it in time for the business to which it relates. I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

ROBERT H. HARRISON, Aid-de-Camp.

The Hon. James Otis, Esq., President of the honourable Council of the Massachusetts-Bay.

P. S. It was delivered to the Hon. William Cooper, Esq., Speaker pro tempore.

The Committee of both Houses, appointed to take into consideration his Excellency General Washington's Letter, dated November 29, 1775, to the General Court, report, as their opinion, that a Committee be immediately appointed to wait on him, and, with the General Officers, to devise some method whereby the deficiency in the Army, which may be caused by the Connecticut forces leaving the service, and the furloughs granted to part of the forces enlisted for the next year, can be supplied, and make report.

And whereas his Excellency, in the last paragraph of the same letter, mentions that he cannot help observing, as his opinion, that our paying our men by the lunar, and not by the calendar month, will throw the rest of the Army into disorder: We also report, that a Committee be appointed to draught a letter to his Excellency, in answer to the said paragraph of his letter, showing the reasons of our conduct in thus paying our men—that it is not an innovation; and that we hear it with concern, that while we are doing justice to our men, by complying with our contract with them, that it should produce disorder in the Army—and report.

B. LINCOLN, per order.

In Council, November 30, 1775: Read and accepted; and thereupon

Resolved, That Joseph Palmer, Esq., with such as the honourable House shall join, be a Committee to wait upon his Excellency General Washington, and, with the other General Officers, to devise some method whereby the deficiency in the Army, which may be caused by the Connecticut Forces leaving the service, and the furloughs granted to part of the forces enlisted for the next year, can be supplied, and make report. And, also, that Benjamin Lincoln, Esq., with such as the honourable House shall join, be a Committee to draught a Letter to his Excellency General Washington, in answer to the last paragraph in his said Letter, showing the reasons of this Colony's paying their men by lunar months; [A] that it is not an innovation; and that it is matter of concern to this Court, that while we are doing justice to our men, by complying with our contract with them, that it should produce disorders in the Army. [B]

Sent down for concurrence.

PEREZ MORTON, Deputy Secretary.

In the House of Representatives, November 30, 1775: Read and concurred, with the amendment, viz: dele from

A to B; and the Speaker and Colonel Bowers are joined in the Committee to wait on his Excellency General Washington, with the other General Officers; and Colonel Orne and Mr. Gerry are joined on the Committee to report a Letter to his Excellency the General, in answer to the last paragraph in his Letter.

Sent up:

J. WARREN, Speaker.

In Council, November 30, 1775: Read and concurred, with the amendment proposed by the honourable House.

PEREZ MORTON, Deputy Secretary.

WILLIAM WATSON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Plymouth, November 29, 1775.

SIR: This per Captain Martindale's Lieutenant, who comes to acquaint your Excellency that the people on board the Brigantine Washington are, in general, discontented, and have agreed to do no duty on board said vessel; and say that they enlisted to serve in the Army, and not as marines.

I believe Captain Martindale has done all in his power to make things easy. His people really appear to me to be a set of the most unprincipled, abandoned fellows I ever saw. Your Excellency knows in what manner to conduct in this matter. I am very apprehensive that little is to be expected from fellows drawn promiscuously from the Army for this business; but that if people were enlisted for the purpose of privateering, much might be expected from them.

I have just heard that Captain Coit is at Barnstable, driven in there by two men of war. He has sent an express to your Excellency, but I had not the pleasure of seeing him when he passed through this Town.

I am your Excellency's most obedient, much obliged humble servant,

WILLIAM WATSON.

His Excellency General Washington.

LORD DUNMORE TO GENERAL HOWE.

On board the Ship William, off Norfolk, in Virginia, }
November 30, 1775. }

DEAR GENERAL: The report here is, that General Gage is gone home, and that you are appointed to succeed him; if so, from my heart I wish you joy, and am well persuaded you will soon evince to the world that you are well deserving the honour conferred on you by your Sovereign. I must inform you that, with our little corps, I think we have done wonders. We have taken and destroyed above four score pieces of ordnance, and, by landing in the different parts of the country, we keep them in continual hot water; but, as Captain Leslie tells me he means to write you on this subject, I have no doubt he will give you particulars enough, so shall say no more on that subject.

Amongst the prisoners we have taken are Oliver Porter and Simeon Deane, two natives of Boston. The former was taken, as you see by his own deposition, (No. 1,) bringing in gunpowder to North-Carolina; the latter was sent from Boston to influence the minds of the people, in which he has been but too successful. He was taken from on board a schooner going from this place to the Western-Islands, to bring powder to this Colony; and the others have carried arms against His Majesty in this Province. I have sent them more with a view of intimidating others than to punish them, as they expect here that so sure as they are sent to Boston they are to be hanged. Robinson is a Delegate of our Convention, as you see by his deposition, (No. 2.) Matthews was a Captain of their Minute-men. Perhaps they may be of use to you in exchanging them for good men. There is a vacancy in the Fourteenth Regiment, by the death of Captain Blackett. I really should not do them justice, if I did not recommend it to you to let the promotion go in the corps, which I hope you will do.

The sloop not sailing so soon as I expected, I have to inform you, that on the 14th instant I had information that a party of about a hundred of the North-Carolina Rebels had marched to the assistance of those in this Colony, and were posted at a place called the Great-Bridge, a very essential pass into this part of the country. I accordingly embarked our little corps of the Fourteenth in boats in the night, with between twenty and thirty volunteers from Norfolk. We landed within four miles of the bridge, and arrived there a little after daylight; but, to our great mortification, found the birds had flown the evening before. But hearing that a body of between two and three hundred of our Rebels were within about ten miles of us, we determined to beat up their quarters, and accordingly proceeded about eight miles, when they fired on our advanced guard from the woods; on which, I immediately ordered our people to rush in upon them, and at the same time sent a part of the regulars with the volunteers to outflank them. The enemy immediately fled on all quarters, and our people pursued them for a mile or more, killed a few, drove others into a creek, where they were drowned, and took nine prisoners, among whom is one of their Colonels. We only had one man wounded, who is recovering. I cannot conclude without again informing you that my friends of the Fourteenth, both officers and soldiers, have, in this late, as well as on all former occasions, behaved with that good conduct and spirit becoming British soldiers. Immediately on this, I issued the enclosed proclamation; * which has had a wonderful effect, as there are no less than three thousand that have already taken and signed the enclosed oath.† The negroes are flocking in, also, from all quarters, which, I hope, will oblige the Rebels to disperse, to take care of their families and property; and had I but a few more men here, I would march immediately to Williamsburgh, my former place of residence, by which I should soon compel the whole Colony to submit.

We are in great want of small-arms, and if two or three light field-pieces and their carriages could be spared, they would be of great service to us; also some cartridge paper, of which not a sheet is to be got here, and all our cartridges are expended.

Since the 18th of May last, I have not received a single line from any one in Administration, though I have wrote volumes to them, in each of which I have prayed to be instructed, but to no purpose. I am therefore determined to go on doing the best of my power for His Majesty's service. I have accordingly ordered a Regiment, called the Queen's Own Loyal Virginia Regiment, of five hundred men, to be raised immediately, consisting of a Lieutenant-Colonel Commandant, Major, and ten Companies; each of which is to consist of one Captain, two Lieutenants, one Ensign, and fifty Privates, with non-commissioned officers in proportion. You may observe, by my proclamation, that I offer freedom to the slaves of all Rebels that join me; in consequence of which, there are between two and three hundred already come in, and those I form into a corps as fast as they come in, giving them white officers and non-commissioned officers in proportion; and, from these two plans, I make no doubt of getting men enough to reduce this Colony to a proper sense of their duty. But my next distress will be the want of arms, accoutrements, and money; all of which, perhaps, you may be able to relieve me from. The latter I am sure you can, as there are many merchants here who are ready to supply me, on my giving them bills on you; which you will have to withdraw, and give your own in their place. I hope this mode will be agreeable to you; it is the same that General Gage proposed. I have now, in order to carry on the recruiting business, victualling, clothing, &c., drawn on you for five thousand Pounds sterling, and have appointed a Paymaster, who will keep exact accounts. I wish you would, by the return of the sloop, inform me what bounty money may be given to those who enlist.

Having heard that a thousand chosen men belonging to the Rebels, great part of whom were riflemen, were on their march to attack us here, or to cut off our provisions, I determined to take possession of the pass at the Great-Bridge, which secures us the greatest part of two Counties to supply us with provisions. I accordingly ordered a stockade fort to be erected there, which was done in a few days; and I put an officer and twenty-five men to garrison it, with some volunteers and negroes, who have defended it against all the efforts of the Rebels for these eight days past. We have killed several of their men, and I make no doubt we shall now be able to maintain our ground there; but should we be obliged to abandon it, we have thrown up an intrenchment on the land side of Norfolk, which I hope they never will be able to force. Here we are, with only a very small part of a Regiment, contending against the extensive Colony of Virginia. If you would but spare me, for a few months, the Sixty-Fourth Regiment, now in the castle, and the remaining part of the Fourteenth, I really believe we should reduce this Colony to a proper sense of their duty.

I am, dear General, your most obedient humble servant,
His Excellency General Howe.

DEPOSITION OF OLIVER PORTER.

Oliver Porter being sworn upon the Holy Evangelists, before his Excellency the Earl of Dunmore, Governour of the Colony of Virginia, &c., this 9th day of November, 1775, and in the sixteenth year of His Majesty's reign.

This deponent saith: That he sailed in the Sloop Temperance, as master, from Bath, in North-Carolina, on the 29th of July last, Mr. Obadiah Witheral, merchant, on board, for Martinico. On his arrival there, on or about the 28th of August following, after his waiting there some time and delivering his cargo of lumber, he received on board, by order of Mr. Witheral, two hogsheads, in which were contained powder, in ten pound kegs, he supposes to the amount of seven hundred weight. At the same time he received eight kegs of musket balls, containing about fifteen hundred weight, which he believes to have been purchased of Peter Biguras, merchant. This deponent further saith, that he received, as his private venture, four casks, containing about two hundred gallons of rum; also, about one hundred weight of coffee: and that he sailed from Martinico the 6th of October, with orders from the aforesaid merchant to proceed to Ocracoke, in North-Carolina, and there deliver the aforesaid gunpowder and shot to his owners, Paul White and Edward Saltar, at the Town of Bath, in North-Carolina. In the course of his passage, a pilot-boat boarded him, and informed him he supposed the vessel in sight was a man-of-war's tender; on which, this deponent ordered the gunpowder and shot aforesaid to be thrown overboard into the sea. At the same time, he caused his own venture of rum to be started into the hold, and pumped overboard. In about two hours after he was boarded and taken by the Kingfisher's tender. Further this deponent saith not.

OLIVER PORTER.

Sworn to before me, the 9th day of November, 1775:

EXAMINATION OF WILLIAM ROBINSON.

VIRGINIA, set.

William Robinson, a Delegate for Princess Anne County in the Convention of this Colony, held at the Town of Richmond, on the 16th day of July, 1775, being sworn before the Earl of Dunmore, saith that he was in the Convention from the second day of their meeting until they broke up, which was on the 26th of August.

His Lordship informed the said Robinson that he had a paper in his hand which contained several articles and resolves, called the Confederacy of the United Colonies, which his Lordship read to him, and desired to know if such was laid before the Convention.

Answer. I did hear, out of doors, that there were such articles intended to be proposed, but the knowing ones in Convention seemed desirous to keep it secret; that Richard Henry Lee, a member of the Convention, and one of the Delegates from this Colony to the General Congress, did inform the Convention, that if the petition to His Majesty, from the Congress, which was in as humiliating terms as could come from freemen, had not its desired end, that by the middle of January next the Congress had resolved to open the ports of the whole Continent to all foreign nations.

Question. Did the Convention come to any resolution on this matter, or what seemed to be the sense of the members?

Answer. They did not come to any resolution on this matter, but it was the general sense of the members to agree with the Congress.

WILLIAM ROBINSON,

Sworn to before me, the 22d day of October, 1775:
DUNMORE,

CAPTAIN SAMUEL LESLIE TO GENERAL HOWE.

Gosport, Virginia, November 1, 1775.

SIR: I have the honour to inform you that I landed, the 12th of last month, at eleven o'clock at night, about three miles from hence, with Lieutenant Lawrie, two Sergeants, and forty rank and file, of the Fourteenth Regiment, and after marching three miles into the country, in search of artillery, we found, in a wood, nineteen pieces of cannon, some of them twelve, others nine, six, and three-pounders; seventeen of which we destroyed, and brought off two; and then, returning to our boats, we re-embarked without the least opposition. Lord Dunmore accompanied us upon this expedition.

On the 17th of October his Lordship was informed that there was a great quantity of artillery, small-arms, and all sorts of ammunition, concealed in different stores, at a place called Kemp's Landing. In consequence of which, I, with Captain Cooper, Lieutenants Batut, Lawrie, and Leslie, Ensigns Wools, Boys, Ogle, and Lindsay, three Sergeants, and seventy rank and file, of the Fourteenth Regiment, Lieutenant Allen, one Sergeant, and twenty marines, some young gentlemen of the Navy, and ten or twelve seamen, embarked, at two o'clock in the afternoon, in boats and a schooner, in which some guns were mounted to cover our landing, and proceeded seven or eight miles up the eastern branch of Elizabeth River, to Newtown, where we landed without opposition. Notwithstanding above two hundred of the Rebels were at exercise near that place the same evening, and marching three or four miles through the country, we arrived at Kemp's Landing a little after it was dark, where we searched several stores, and could discover nothing but a good many small-arms, musket locks, a little powder and ball, two drums, and a quantity of buck-shot, all which we either brought off or destroyed; and returning pretty near the same road we went, we re-embarked, about two o'clock the next morning, without interruption. We likewise took several prisoners; one of whom was a Captain of Minute-men, and another a Delegate of the Convention at Richmond.

I have also the pleasure to acquaint your Excellency that Lieutenant Batut, with two Sergeants and thirty-six rank and file, landed at Norfolk, the 19th of October, at twelve o'clock at noon, and marching into the country two miles from thence, took twenty pieces of cannon (from six to three-pounders) concealed in a wood; thirteen of which he destroyed and brought away seven, and returned, about four o'clock in the afternoon, unmolested. Many great guns, small-arms, and other implements of war, have been taken since by small parties; so that there has been, in all, at least seventy-seven pieces of ordnance taken and destroyed since my detachment arrived here, without the smallest opposition, which is a proof that it would not require a very large force to subdue this Colony. There are about eight hundred of the Rebels now at Williamsburgh, and four hundred at Hampton. We are in possession of a large store on the banks of the southern branch of Elizabeth River, under cover of the Otter, sloop-of-war; so that we are not very apprehensive of an attack, though the Rebels often threaten to pay us a visit. As our situation is so extremely critical, I flatter myself that you will be so good as to send us a re-enforcement as soon as possible, particularly the two Companies of our Regiment at Boston or Castle William. The rest of the Regiment we expect from St. Augustine as soon as it is relieved by three Companies of the Sixteenth from Pensacola. There are thirty men of my detachment on board Lord Dunmore's ship, and another one that his Lordship has taken up for a transport.

I have been favoured with your Excellency's letter of the 12th of September, wherein you inform me that my detachment must be supplied with provisions by the contractors of St. Augustine, and that the King must pay the transportation of them from thence; which mode of supply, I am well assured, will be impracticable at this time, for we never could be sure of being furnished with them regularly, as vessels cannot be procured for that purpose, and even if they could, they would be in constant danger of being taken by the Rebels; and, besides, fresh provisions is much cheaper and better for the men than salt, and the expense of the transportation of the latter from St. Augustine would be, by all accounts, almost as much as the former will cost here. However, Lord Dunmore says that he will take upon himself to have whatever troops may arrive here properly supplied in the mean time, and his Lordship thinks that there ought to be a particular contractor appointed for this Colony, exclusive of any other.

Captain Fordyce, with Lieutenants Napier and Wallace, three Sergeants, three Corporals, two Drummers, and fifty-five private men, arrived here from St. Augustine the 20th of last month, from whence he brought some ammunition, bedding, and provisions, and was prevented from bringing a greater quantity of the two last articles by Governor Tonyn's giving positive orders to the agent of the contractors and the Barrackmaster not to issue more on their peril.

I do myself the honour to enclose your Excellency two monthly returns, by one of which you will see that Captain Blackett died here the 14th of last month; in consequence of which, I flatter myself that Captain James Urquhart will succeed to the Company, Lieutenant William Brown to the Captain-Lieutenancy, and Ensign Thomas Appleford Woods to the Lieutenancy, as they are all very worthy men and good officers.

Norfolk, November 26, 1775.

On Tuesday, the 14th of this month, Lord Dunmore, with the detachment of the Fourteenth Regiment that I have the honour to command, and some volunteers, embarked in boats, and after going up the southern branch of Elizabeth River, we landed, about daylight, four or five miles below the Great-Bridge, with an intention to dislodge a number of men in arms from North-Carolina, who had taken possession of that pass; but they thought proper to retire and disperse upon our approach. After directions had been given to erect a kind of wooden fort to secure the pass, we proceeded nine or ten miles farther, to Kemp's Landing, where we were informed there were three or four hundred of the Rebels ready to receive us, under the command of a Colonel Lawson. When we arrived within sight of Kemp's Landing, our advanced guard was twice fired upon by the Rebels, who had concealed themselves in very thick woods on the left of the road; but upon our rushing in among them, they were very soon totally routed. Their very precipitate flight, and the closeness of the woods, prevented our giving a much better account of them. It is said that some of them ran away even before the firing began. However, five of the Rebels, that we know of, were killed, two drowned in endeavouring to escape across a creek, and, by all accounts, a great many of them were wounded. We had only one Grenadier wounded in the knee. Colonel Hutchings and seven of the Rebels were taken in the field, and Colonel Lawson and eight others were taken a day or two after. For further particulars, in regard to the abovementioned affair, and the consequences of it, I refer your Excellency to the enclosed newspaper.

We took possession of this Town the 23d instant, and are now busy intrenching ourselves in the best manner we can, as a large body of the Rebels, consisting of eight or nine hundred men, are within ten or twelve miles of us. They marched from Williamsburgh, about a fortnight ago, with an intention to pillage and burn this Town; which, however, we shall do every thing that is possible to prevent, and I flatter myself that our endeavours will be attended with success.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

SAMUEL LESLIE,

Captain 14th Reg't of Infantry.

To his Excellency General Howe.

CONTINENTAL CONGRESS TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Philadelphia, November 30, 1775.

SIR: It is with the utmost satisfaction that the Congress received your information of the surrender of Montreal, and the general success which has attended the American arms in the Province of Canada. They are sensible of the various obstacles you had to encounter, and have unanimously resolved that your conduct, attention, and perseverance, merit the thanks of the United Colonies, which I have now the pleasure of presenting to you.

The Congress hear with concern your request of leave to retire. They regret the injuries your health has sustained in the service, and beg you will not insist on a measure which would at once deprive America of the future benefits she expects from your zeal and abilities, and rob you of the honour of completing the glorious work you have so happily and successfully begun. You have hitherto risen superior to a thousand difficulties, in giving freedom to a great and an oppressed people. You have already reaped many laurels, but a plentiful harvest still invites you. Proceed, therefore, and let the footsteps of victory open a way for blessings of liberty and the happiness of well-ordered Government to visit that extensive dominion. Consider that the road to glory is seldom strewn with flowers, and that when the black and bloody standard of tyranny is erected in a land possessed by freemen, patriots cease to remain inactive spectators of their Country's fall. Reflect, Sir, that the happiness or misery of millions yet unborn is now to be determined, and remember that you will receive an honourable compensation for all your fatigues, in being able to leave the memory of illustrious actions, attended by the gratitude of a great and free people, as a fair, a splendid, and a valuable inheritance, to your posterity.

I am, &c.,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To General Philip Schuyler.

CONTINENTAL CONGRESS TO GENERAL MONTGOMERY.

Philadelphia, November 30, 1775.

SIR: I am directed by the Congress to transmit you their thanks for your great and signal services in the expedition committed to your command, against the British troops in the Province of Canada. The reduction of St. John's and Montreal they esteem of inexpressible advantage to the United Colonies, and the most mortifying contravention to the Ministerial system of enslaving the extensive territory of Canada. It cannot, therefore, fail of reflecting singular lustre on the character of a General so essentially instrumental in preserving that liberty by the abolition of which a corrupt Parliament intended to annihilate every appearance of freedom in America. Nor are the humanity and politeness with which you have treated those in your power less illustrious instances of magnanimity than the valour by which you reduced them to it. The Congress, utterly abhorrent from every species of cruelty to prisoners, and determined to adhere to this benevolent maxim till the conduct of their enemies renders a deviation from it indispensably necessary, will ever applaud their officers for beautifully blending the Christian with the conqueror, and never, in endeavouring to acquire the character of the hero, to lose that of the man.

The victories already gained in Canada afford us a happy presage of the smiles of Providence on the further designation of the Continental arms in the North, and will, in all probability, greatly facilitate the entire reduction of the deluded malignants in that Province to liberty. These, Sir, are exploits so glorious in their execution, and so extensive in their consequences, that the memory of General Montgomery will doubtless be of equal duration with the remembrance of the benefits derived from his command.

At the same time that the Congress rejoice with you in the success of their arms under your more immediate direction, they cannot avoid expressing their concern at the intimation you give of your intention to retire from the service. They are sensible that the loss of so brave and experienced an officer will be universally regretted, as a misfortune to all America. But they still hope that, upon reconsidering the matter, the same generous and patriotic motives which first induced you to take so capital a part in opposing the unprovoked hostilities of an unnatural enemy, will prompt you to persevere in the cause, and to continue gathering fresh laurels, till you find our oppressors reduced to reason, and America restored to her constitutional liberties.

I am, &c.,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To General Montgomery.

CONTINENTAL CONGRESS TO GENERAL WOOSTER.

Philadelphia, November 30, 1775.

SIR: That a conscious pleasure arises from patriotism, your experience must have already evinced to you. Your brethren in America, on whose behalf that patriotism has been exerted, will not withhold that accession of pleasure which you ought to receive from their just and grateful applauses. I am directed by the Congress to transmit to you the thanks of the United Colonies for the very important assistance which you have contributed in reducing St. John's, and spreading the banners of freedom over the greatest part of Canada.

I am, &c., JOHN HANCOCK, President.
To Brigadier-General David Wooster.

JOHN MCKESSON TO LORD STIRLING.

New-York, November 30, 1775.

MY LORD: I am honoured with yours of this day. The Provincial Congress was to have met some days ago. The members from several Counties are here attending, and it is expected they will be sufficiently numerous to-morrow, or on Monday, at farthest, to proceed to business. Who will be elected to preside is uncertain; but as Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq., was the last who presided, in the absence of Mr. Livingston, the correspondence you mention will most properly be directed to him for the present. Colonel Woodhull lodges so near to me, that if your letters are sent to me, I will see that they are delivered immediately. There is not any Committee of Safety here at present. The members elected for a Provincial Congress, and myself, receive and open all correspondence on publick affairs, or from the Continental Congress.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient humble servant,

JOHN MCKESSON.

To the Right Honourable William, Earl of Stirling, Elizabethtown.

DUTCHESS COUNTY (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, November 27, 1775.

Ordered, That Captain John Schenck take in custody, and confine in jail, Jacobus Ostrum, Johannes Medlar, and Barent Lewis, and keep them in safe custody until the further order of this Committee or the Provincial Congress.

And further Ordered, That John Child, Esq., Zephaniah Platt, Dr. Peter Tappen, and Colonel John Freer, be a Committee to examine the aforesaid persons, and such other persons as they may think proper to call upon, and transmit a copy of the said examination to the Provincial Congress in New-York, and return a copy thereof to this Committee, at their next meeting.

MELANCTON SMITH, Secretary.

Poughkeepsie, November 30, 1775.

Captain Schenck, in obedience to the above order, took the persons therein named into his custody; and having summoned the gentlemen of the Committee, in the above order named, there appeared Colonel John Freer, Peter Tappen, and John Childs, who called in Johannes Medlar, and read the underwritten charge to him:

That he (the said Johannes Medlar) knew of and was consenting to his son John's going with Peter Harris; that he made interest with Peter Harris to procure a commission for his said son, and he (the said Johannes Medlar) would assist in procuring men to fill a Company for them.

Mr. Medlar answers, that he knew nothing of the matters alleged against him, and was innocent of the charge, or words to that effect.

Mr. Medlar was then remanded, and Jacobus Ostrum was brought in, and the underwritten charge read to him:

That he, (Jacobus Ostrum), together with Barent Lewis, engaged with Peter Harris to enlist men for said Harris to form a Company in the King's troops. That he, with said Barent Lewis, persuaded Richard Vanderbergh to join the service and go with said Harris; said Ostrum declaring he would go with them himself, but his wife and family were unwell; that when they got better, he would come on board the man-of-war at York, and join them.

Mr. Ostrum answered as Mr. Medlar had done, wholly denying the charge.

Mr. Ostrum was then remanded, and Barent Lewis brought in, and the underwritten charge read to him:

That he (the said Barent Lewis) engaged with Peter Harris to assist said Harris in procuring men to form a Company in the King's service, under the command of said Harris. That he (the said Barent Lewis), together with Jacobus Ostrum, persuaded Richard Vanderbergh to join the service, and go with said Harris.

Mr. Lewis answered as Mr. Medlar had done, wholly denying the charge.

Captain Schenck then, in further obedience to the foregoing order, committed the prisoners to jail, where they lie in a very uncomfortable cold room, waiting the order which Congress shall take respecting them, which we could wish might be expeditious. The proceedings of the General Committee of Dutchess County being grounded on information from the Committee of New-York, we beg leave to refer the Congress to them for further information.

We are, Gentlemen, your very humble servants,

JOHN FREER,
PETER TAPPEN,
JOHN CHILDS.

To the Honourable Provincial Congress for the Colony of New-York.

COLONEL ARNOLD TO GENERAL MONTGOMERY.

Point-aux-Trembles, November 30, 1775.

DEAR SIR: My last was of the 25th instant, advising you of the Hunter, sloop, Captain Napier, in the snow, and a schooner's going up to Cape Santé. They have been there until this morning, when they came down, and are now off this place, under full sail down. It will be impossible for them to ascend the river again this season; so that your vessels, if you think proper to send them down, will run no risk, except of ice, and may be laid up in safety at Cape Rouge.

I have not had the pleasure of hearing from you these ten days; am very anxious for your safe arrival. The ammunition you ordered us has been strangely delayed, and is not yet come to hand, but hourly expected. On receipt of it, I intend returning to my old quarters, near Quebeck.

Nothing has lately occurred worth notice, except the burning of Major Caldwell's house—supposed to be done by order of Governour Carleton, to deprive us of winter quarters. The inhabitants of Quebeck are much disunited, and short of provisions. We have many friends there; and if the place is attacked with spirit, I believe will hold out but a short time.

I am, very respectfully, dear Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

Brigadier-General Montgomery.

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Providence, November 30, 1775.

SIR: I take the liberty of addressing your Excellency in behalf of Mr. James Aborn, who waits upon you with this letter. I can assure your Excellency that he is a worthy, honest man, and hath, upon all occasions, approved himself a sincere friend to the liberties of his Country. He sent a vessel, last spring, to the eastward, to trade and fish; and, to cover his interest from the enemy, made use of a friend in Nova-Scotia, to whom he made a bill of sale of her, although the property is really and truly vested in Mr. Aborn. If this shall appear to your Excellency to be a true state of the matter, I have no doubt of your giving him every assistance in recovering his interest.

I am, with great truth and regard, your most obedient humble servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

His Excellency General Washington.

By his Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., General and Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the UNITED COLONIES.

To JOHN GESSAGE FRAZER, Assistant Deputy Quarter-master-General:

You are to hire and provide, in the most expeditious manner, a sufficient number of teams, wagons, and carriages, for bringing to Winter and Prospect Hills such boards and plank as you have purchased at Pawtucket Falls, upon Merrimack River, and at Bradford, and hay, at Andover or elsewhere; for the hire of which you are to allow a reasonable price; and in case the owners of such teams, wagons, and carriages, shall refuse to let the same upon reasonable hire, you are hereby authorized and empowered to impress the same.

Given under my hand, at Head-Quarters at Cambridge, this 30th day of November, Annoque Domini 1775.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read December 11, 1775.]

Cambridge, November 30, 1775.

SIR: I had the honour to write you the 28th instant, by Captain Joseph Blewer. Last evening I received the agreeable account of the Schooner Lee, commanded by Captain Manly, having taken and carried into Cape Ann a large brigantine, bound from London to Boston, laden with military stores, the inventory of which I have the pleasure to enclose you. Cape Ann is a very open harbour, and accessible to large ships, which made me immediately send off Colonel Glover and Mr. Palfrey, with orders to raise the minute-men and militia of that part of the country, to have the cargo landed without loss of time, and guarded up to this camp. This I hope they will be able to effect before it is known to the enemy what port she is carried into. I sincerely congratulate you on this very great acquisition; and am, Sir, your most humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

The Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. Manly has also taken a sloop in the Ministerial service, and Captain Adams, in the Schooner Warren, has taken a schooner laden with potatoes and turnips, bound to Boston, and carried her into Portsmouth.

AN ACCOUNT OF THE STATE OF QUEBECK, ETC., AT THE END OF NOVEMBER, 1775.

The detachment which General Washington sent into Canada, under the command of Colonel Arnold, consisted, originally, of eight hundred men; but there not being sufficiency of provisions, Colonel Arnold sent three hundred back, and, with the remaining five hundred, (one hundred of whom were Riflemen,) took the route of the Rivers Kennebeck and Chaudiere, a part of the detachment marching by land on the bank of the river, and the rest were carried in batteaus. Their progress was slow, (about five or ten miles a day,) as they were often obliged to cut their way through the woods, the batteaus keeping company with them on shore, and at night encamping together; at those places where the batteaus could not proceed, they were carried on the shoulders of four men. They had a difficult and dangerous route, but bore it with spirit and resolution, and at last reached Point Levi, opposite Quebeck. The Canadians received them with great cheerfulness, and supplied them with provisions. Their arrival at Point Levi was the first notice the Governour of Quebeck had of their march. The Lizard, man-of-war, anchored off the Town; the Hornet, sloop-of-war, between that and Wolfe's Cove;

the Gaspee, an armed schooner, opposite to it, and another armed schooner higher up; armed boats every night were stationed round, to prevent Colonel Arnold passing the river. He remained here four days, till the Canadians had got together boats enough for his purpose. He crossed at night, and the first intelligence which the ships of war received was from an armed boat whom the Provincials hailed as they were going to land at Wolfe's Cove, and whom, on the boat's not answering, they fired at. The boat gave an alarm to the Lizard, man-of-war; upon which a Lieutenant was despatched, at twelve that night, with advice to the Governour, though the delays at Quebeck prevented his acquainting him with it till seven the next morning. The Governour immediately summoned first the merchants, and asked them if they would defend the Town; which they promised him to do. He then sent for the officers of the militia, who gave him the same assurance; and lastly, the Captains of the merchant vessels, who also promised their assistance. Upon which the gates were shut, and preparations made for defence. Colonel Arnold, the next morning after his landing, formed his men not far from the Town. About three hundred of the garrison marched out with an apparent alacrity to attack him. The Colonel instantly put his men in motion in order to receive them; upon which they retreated with precipitation. The gates were immediately shut, that of St. John's with difficulty; for, whether by design or otherwise, the keys were not to be found, and the fastening in such a situation that they were obliged to procure handspikes and ropes. This gate, which was the most important, was under the command of the French militia. The same disorder or design was so prevalent on the ramparts, that they had not matches to supply the guns, but were obliged to send for them to the Lizard, man-of-war. In all probability, had Colonel Arnold attacked the Town, he would have carried it; but not having artillery, he deemed it most prudent to wait for General Montgomery; he therefore contented himself with encamping his Army on the heights.

The 20th of November, General Carleton arrived, having left Montreal in a dark night, with about sixty men. They escaped in boats, and got on board a brigantine, which brought them to Quebeck. He could not have executed this design in the daytime, as the Provincials had erected batteries on each side of the river, which effectually stopped the communication between Quebeck and Montreal, and occasioned orders being given to destroy two armed schooners, to prevent their falling into the hands of the Provincials. Montreal has capitulated; so that all the Regulars are now prisoners of war, with the stores, except the gunpowder, which was put on board the schooner.

The Canadians are, in general, favourable to the Americans, and were of great use to General Montgomery in the taking St. John's and Chambly, by supplying them with necessaries. They receive them into their houses, bring them provisions, and seem well pleased with their guests. In return, the Provincials observe an exact discipline, and are very careful in protecting the property of the inhabitants. These favourable sentiments of the Canadians, to the Provincials, arise from the great dislike they have to the Quebeck Act. Even the British merchants, though they have taken up arms, yet apparently act with reluctance, being very ill-disposed towards General Carleton, who has treated them with great coolness, placing his confidence in the French noblesse. This conduct the General pursued on the first reception of the news that the Provincials were entering Canada. They went in a body to him, and requested to be embodied. He gave them no kind of answer, and persisted in the same disposition, when they a second time made application to him, after he had quitted Quebeck to go to Montreal; at last, Governour Cramahé embodied them, at the approach of Colonel Arnold.

That officer (Arnold) hath done nothing but shown himself before Quebeck. Indeed, the greatest part of the detachment are marched towards Montreal; no attempt is therefore expected to be made till the arrival of General Montgomery.

The garrison of Quebeck, when this account came away, consisted of thirty-six of —; sixty of Carleton's men, partly French, partly English; eighty of Maclean's new-raised corps; three hundred merchants and their servants; three hundred Canadians; and three hundred and fifty sailors: the two former irresolute, already disgusted with the service, and greatly complaining of the fatigue; the sailors, therefore, are the people to be depended upon. The inhabitants will not, most probably, choose to sustain a siege, as by a surrender they will secure their effects, which, by an opposition, they will run the risk of losing; and there is not the least probability of the merchants being able to support the fatigue of defending, and the Canadians are too much friends to the Provincials warmly to oppose them. The sailors, on whom the only reliance can be placed, are not sufficiently numerous to preserve the Town, when the wishes of the inhabitants will be for a surrender. Though General Carleton is a man of the greatest intrepidity, and he has the assistance of Colonel Maclean, yet he appears greatly chagrined at affairs turning out so contrary to his expectations, that it evidently preys on his spirits.

The expectations from Colonel Maclean are entirely vanished. He was deserted by his people at the River Sorel, and obliged to fly, with eighty men, to Quebeck, with great expedition. The Highlanders he enlisted were so few as not to be worth mentioning. There were about one hundred came from the Island of St. John's, trading to Quebeck, but who have not entered as soldiers; and from thence, on the expectation that they would enlist, I suppose the report arose of his having raised a Regiment of them; but so far from enlisting Highlanders in our service, I am informed, from good authority, that the Provincials have now a Regiment of Highlanders in their pay, consisting of eight hundred men, all volunteers.

It is very probable that Quebeck may not be taken till the month of January, except General Montgomery sends down his artillery by water; he cannot so conveniently bring it down by land till the frosts set in. The cold is indeed severe, but his people are inured to it; and as the country about Quebeck is very populous, and the inhabitants friendly, he will find good quarters in the neighbourhood of the Town; which, with the weakness of the garrison, and the divisions in the place, there is little doubt of the Provincials being masters of it.

The behaviour of General Montgomery to his prisoners was much applauded; but there had letters passed between General Carleton and him, wherein he complained of the treatment of those taken at Montreal, and that he hoped that General Carleton would not put him under the necessity of showing the same.

There is a Regiment in the interior parts of Canada, at Niagara, Detroit, &c., which, if they have not provisions, must come in and surrender.

THE MONITOR, NO. IV.

New-York, November 30, 1775.

One would have thought that, after such repeated attestations of our determined aversion to the claims of the Parliament, a renewal of its endeavours to impose them would hardly have been undertaken in haste. But the Ministry were too much bent upon the subjugation of the Colonies, to give over the pursuit until they should be fully convinced of the absolute impracticability of succeeding in it. They were resolved to vary the plan of attack: to recur from open assault and violence, to intrigue, artifice, and illusion; foreseeing that many plausible topicks might be invented to mislead a part at least of the people, to generate intestine divisions, and, by inducing compliance to a lesser encroachment, to pave the way and prepare the minds of men by degrees for the complete establishment of all their pretensions. They flattered themselves that the publick spirit of the Americans, by too frequent fermentation, would in a great measure evaporate; and that they would with difficulty be brought to submit to the inconveniences of another struggle, and again to obstruct the golden streams of commerce, for an object seemingly of so little importance as a duty of three pence a pound on tea.

As the East-India Company must have been thoroughly apprized of the temper and resolutions of the Colonies, it is scarcely to be supposed they would have hazarded so much of their property on such a precarious footing as that on which it must necessarily be sent to America, while encumbered with a duty that gave so general offence, unless they had some sure prospect of retribution in case of accidents. It is therefore extremely probable, what has been more than once positively suggested by our friends on the other side of the water, that the Ministry either purchased the tea to make the intended experiment, or engaged to indemnify the Company for whatever loss they might sustain by a miscarriage. Neither is it likely they would have done this, and risked throwing the Empire into new convulsions and disorders, if they had not been resolute to drive matters to extremity, and to bring the contest to a final issue.

They expected that one side of this dilemma would take place: either that the Colonies, fatigued with former efforts, unwilling to undergo fresh agitations, deceived by artful miscolourings, lulled by a consideration of the trifling sum of the tax, or from a compound of all these motives, would most of them be prevailed with to permit the introduction of the tea and the payment of the duty; or that they would be reduced to the necessity of destroying it, in order to prevent those disagreeable circumstances. Should the former happen, their scheme would be in a fair way for a perfect accomplishment. They might afterwards plead our own voluntary deliberate consent to their right of taxing us. Strong parties would have been formed among us; violent heats and animosities engendered. The precedent would have had a powerful influence, both in the opinions of the people of Britain and in our own; and if our enemies were masters of a tolerable share of address and dexterity, they might then with the greatest ease lead us on, step by step, to the point they intended, whence the retreat would continually become more difficult, and at last impossible. But should the latter fall out, which was most probable, a procedure so bold, and so much out of the common track, would naturally excite scruples in tender minds, and afford a spacious field for invective and declamation to their agents and creatures. They might thence extract a pretext to sanctify or palliate future violences; and, under the idea of chastising a breach of private property, might, with more appearance of justice, and with greater prospect of success, proceed in their long concerted plan of despotism. They hoped to gain many partisans, both in England and America, who, disgusted at a seeming outrage and act of injustice, would be easily persuaded to view all their measures as entirely of a penal complexion, and designed only to procure a reparation for damage wantonly committed on our part. Hence they supposed our councils would be disunited and discordant, our opposition feeble, partial, and transitory, easily to be counteracted and overcome by any considerable exertions of vigour and perseverance on their side.

These views were subtle; and, though the event has not been fully answerable to them, they have obtained a degree of success much to be regretted by every real friend to this injured Country. It happened that the tea sent to Boston was the first which arrived in America; and the people, having no other alternative but to suffer its being imported and the duty paid, or to destroy it, deemed the latter course most politic and safe. From all the other ports except Charlestown, where it was accidentally landed, it was despatched immediately back to England.

This act, provoked by the forcible intrusion of an article loaded with an illegal tax, was seized, with the utmost avidity, by the ministerial cabal, as a handle for charging those who perpetrated it with the most heinous and inexpiable guilt. The banners of vengeance were forthwith displayed, and furious penalties, without the formality of a trial, inflicted, very disproportionate to the crime, even supposing it to be a real one. The most arbitrary and exasperating intentions were announced in both Houses of Parliament, while nothing less than bringing America to his feet would satisfy the imperious Minister. At a single stroke, the memorable Port Bill totally demolished the flourishing trade of the offending Town; nor was there any room left to avoid the evil, by making such requital for the injury done, as the nature of it might seem to demand. The conditions of the act were too rigorous and destructive to be complied with. It required not only payment for the simple value of the tea, which was sufficient, but for the amount of the duty upon it, an indefinite submission to the laws and authority of Parliament, and satisfaction for the losses that might have been incurred by the officers of His Majesty's customs and others; vesting a discretionary power in the Governour, ultimately to judge of the sufficiency of the atonement to be made, and to grant or withhold a dispensation, as he should think best.

This, however, was not enough to gratify their vindictive rage. At the heels of it came the act for annulling the charter and altering the Government of the Massachusetts—a stretch of power that could not be submitted to without abandoning every idea of liberty and equity. To change the fundamental constitution of any civil society is the highest possible act of sovereignty; nor can it ever be done, consistent with any principles of freedom, unless by the general will of the community itself. The same pretended right by which the Parliament has ventured to make the alteration in question would extend to the abolition of all our Governments, and to the erection of the most insupportable tyrannies in their stead. This would overthrow at once all the ramparts of our security, and leave us a defenceless prey to a set of men who, there is a moral certainty, would think it their interest to oppress us by every device ingenious rapine could invent.

The strange partiality of Administration, in these respects, discloses their designs in a manner that must carry conviction to every person who is not wilfully blind. Why level all their fury and correction at Boston alone? Did not all the other Provinces partake in their guilt, by forcing back the tea, and tacitly approving of their conduct in its destruction? Did not New-York act a part, perhaps less justifiable, in the treatment of Captain Chambers's tea, and on that account deserve an equal portion of punishment? In spite of every subterfuge to the contrary, the most natural answer to these questions is this: the Ministry, sensible that the principal impediment to their schemes lay in the great populousness and unconquerable spirit of liberty manifested by the New-England Colonies, and knowing, also, that the Massachusetts generally took the lead among them, concluded that the only method to bring the Americans into a state of thralldom, was to undermine and evert their liberties where their greatest strength lay; that, in order to this, it was good policy to make a particular attack, under the notion of punishing a particular transgression—hoping by that means to prevent a sympathy in sufferings, from a sense of common danger, and to discourage a cordial union and mutual support, in which the safety of our rights must always consist. The penetration of the Colonists, in general, was too great not to perceive the latent mischief through so thin a veil; but the bait was swallowed by numbers, who are of less jealous and vigilant disposition than is absolutely necessary in a free Government. A few artful men behind the curtain, strengthening themselves with the symbols and prepossessions of party, took occasion, by degrees, to distemper the minds of their friends and associates. Concealing their real aims, they successfully played upon the passions and prejudices of men who were predisposed to consider them as the oracles of wisdom, and to acquiesce in whatever they recommended. They first persuaded them to differ from the rest of their countrymen about the mode of obtaining the redress of grievances by themselves allowed to exist. They next taught them to doubt the reality of those grievances; from doubt they led them to disbelief; and at length they have convinced the silly, ductile creatures, that they have no rights or privileges whatsoever, but which are derived from the gratuitous indulgence and mere bounty of their beneficent masters on the other side of the Atlantick. Hence those boisterous clamours which have been fulminated, from first to last, against the restrictions laid on our trade, and against every other measure the least tinctured with vigour or spirit.

For the sake of present brevity, I shall defer the conclusion of the general subject in hand to a future paper.

THE MONITOR, NO. V.

The frequent efforts of Administration to enslave the Colonies by general attacks, and their violent proceedings against Massachusetts in particular, instigated by the most insidious and barbarous policy, convinced all honest and discerning men that it was indispensably necessary to concert some regular, universal plan of opposition for the defence and security of our invaded rights. The expedient of a Congress naturally presented itself, from its being employed with success on a recent occasion, and from the obvious necessity of some Continental body to direct the councils and measures of the whole. So agreeable was this to the real or apparent sentiments of all men, that it was no sooner proposed than it received the concurrence of every Colony, from Nova-Scotia to Georgia. All parties, without hesitation or scruple, agreed in acknowledging the propriety of it, though many since that, improved in wisdom and discernment, have had the good fortune to discover that the step was totally impolitick, illegal, treasonable, rebellious, and every thing else that is pernicious and terrible.

Delegates being every where elected for the purpose, the Congress assembled at Philadelphia, and adopted a set of measures which reflect the highest lustre upon their characters, as men of abilities, integrity, and resolution, and will ensure them the applause and veneration of impartial posterity, whose decisions will be unbiased by the narrow views and interested prejudices which at present darken and warp the minds of men. Notwithstanding the most convincing experience of the inexorable disposition of his counsellors, they presented His Majesty with a petition, couched in the most dutiful, cordial, and pathetick terms. Redress from that source could not be confided in; it could scarcely even be hoped. Other methods were absolutely requisite to obtain relief; and what others, of a pacifick nature, could there be, but restraint on our commercial intercourse with Britain?

This mode of opposition had the recommendation of two successful experiments, and is supported by the most substantial reasons, drawn from the great importance of our trade in the general scale of British commerce; an importance which is not imaginary or fictitious, but founded on the most notorious facts, and on the testimony of the ablest writers who have treated the subject, either before or since the commencement of the dispute. This mode, if faithfully adhered to, must, in the end, prevail, whatever may be said to the contrary by a few ministerial addressers and letter-writers, whose bare affirmations can never countervail the respectable authorities above intimated; and are, besides, refuted by other representations, more to be relied on, which inform us there are many and increasing appearances of distress arising from the operation of our measures. The Ministry have applied all the lenitives in their power to heal the wounds given by us to the national resources; but these are not only incompetent for the present; they must, from their nature, be short-lived and evanescent. A gangrene will speedily ensue, and disorder the whole political frame, unless some wiser physicians be found, and timely remedies, of a more effectual kind, made use of.

We have some grounds to believe that Administration would, ere this, have abdicated their schemes, had they not fondly imagined that our virtue would be too frail to persevere long in our self-denying plan of resistance. In this they were encouraged by many misinformations from a band of perfidious miscreants among ourselves, and more especially by the promised dereliction of the common cause, in which these expected to betray the Assembly of this Province.* From this circumstance, it was thought the Ame-

* Mr. Brook Watson, a principal merchant in England, when in this Province, declared to many respectable gentlemen, that the Ministry, soon after the publication of the Congressional proceedings, were disposed to retract their violent measures, and to redress our grievances. To this end, application was made, under the auspices of Lord North, to the body of American merchants, (of whom this gentleman was one,) desiring them to frame petitions for the redress of American grievances, and the restoration of American rights, and promising compliance with them, as it was most agreeable to the Ministry to repeal the obnoxious acts, seemingly in consequence of petitions at home. While this was in agitation, letters were received from New-York, assuring that the Assembly would reject the proceedings of the Congress, and that there would be a separation of this Colony from the rest. Fresh hopes were conceived from the prospect of a division, and the merchants were desired to alter the plan of their petition, and frame it solely upon commercial principles. The conduct of our Assembly confirmed that information, and the Ministry, now encouraged by the certain prospect, as they deemed it, of a disunion, were led to push matters to extremity. Here we find the more immediate source of those evils, under which we at present labour. If it should be asked how any persons could foretell what was in the womb of futurity, and therefore uncertain, I answer, this might easily be done, without possessing any supernatural gift of prophecy, by taking a little pains to sound the private sentiments of the members of our Assembly, and particularly of the leaders, whence their publick conduct would be plainly deducible. Dr. Franklin, I am told, makes no scruple to impute the obstinacy of Administration to the same cause; and the reason of the thing will convince us that it has at least had a powerful tendency to encourage it, agreeable to Lord North's maxim—divide et impera—divide and tyrannize.

ican Association would shortly be dissolved, and our opposition, of course, disconcerted and confounded. These views were seconded by a ridiculous opinion, industriously propagated, that the people of this Continent were too recreant and ignoble to confront the myrmidons of Britain, and would tamely suffer themselves to be dragooned out of their liberties. If this opinion had not been noised abroad, with the utmost earnestness and confidence, I could not have suspected there were any men such novices in the science of human nature, as to harbour a supposition so opposite to all those natural and moral causes which conspire to make men brave, and which are all eminently on the side of the Colonists in the present contest.

Building their future hopes on these visionary foundations, our enemies resolved to proceed in their ruinous career; and have exhibited to the world a striking example to what dangerous lengths the folly and wickedness of men will extend, when actuated by an insatiable avidity for power and dominion. New punitive statutes have been devised, confounding the innocent and guilty, even according to their own conceptions of guilt, in promiscuous and undistinguished ruin. The sword has been wantonly drawn by them,* and the blood of subjects inhumanly shed, for no other crime than an invincible adherence to the noblest principles of liberty, an ardent attachment to the true spirit of the English Constitution, and a becoming sense of the exalted privileges inherited from their ancestors, who, unappalled by the dangers of unknown seas, the perils and hardships of the solitary wilderness, left their native countries, and began settlements which promise, through ages, to remain the favourite abodes of knowledge, religion, virtue, freedom—every thing that can adorn and dignify and felicitate the human race.

THE MONITOR, NO. VI.

On Lord NORTH's Motion.

So determined are a certain herd of tame sequacious animals among us, to be the humble followers of Administration in every step they take, that it is impossible for these to concert any measure, however absurd, injurious, or oppressive, in which they will not readily acquiesce, with the most profound and implicit deference. It seemed once to be a first principle with all, that the Parliament has no right to tax the Colonies; and that their claim, in this respect, ought to be opposed, at the utmost hazard of life and fortune. But, at this enlightened season, many betray a servile disposition, both to acknowledge the right and to submit to the exercise of it, provided we may be indulged with the paltry privilege of raising the sums prescribed to us in the mode most adapted to our local circumstances. This inclination, indeed, is not averred in plain terms, but it may be easily collected from the favourable sentiments entertained of the motion made in the last session of Parliament, usually known by the false appellation of Lord North's conciliatory proposition—a motion, the palpable design of which, by every rule of interpreta-

* It is pretty generally allowed, by all parties, that the war was commenced by the British soldiery, though there are a few so blindly partial as to question it, and pretend the contrary. Among a great variety, the following considerations will suffice to put the matter beyond a doubt. The Regulars charge the Provincials with firing first; the Provincials charge the Regulars with the same. The former support their charge by simple affirmation; the latter by many solid affidavits; among which are a few from officers and soldiers of the other party, who were taken prisoners. It would be cruel and unjust to suppose the Provincials had either forged or extorted these, because it would imply a degree of treachery of which there is no reason to suspect them capable; but it cannot be supposed, because there has been an exchange of prisoners, and the imposture, if there was any, would have been detected and exposed, which has not been done. Moreover, when contending parties assert different things, the only way to discover where the truth lies, is to examine on which side the circumstances afford the greatest probability. In the first skirmish there were several hundreds of the Regulars, and only thirty Provincials. Is it probable that thirty Provincials should first fire upon some hundreds of Regulars? Would not this be an instance of madness and desperate bravery hardly to be supposed? Is it not much more probable that the Regulars first fired upon them, and that they gave way and dispersed before such a formidable body, without firing at all, as is represented by our party?

I mention these circumstances only to show how the fact really stands, not that I think the Provincials would have been blameable in attacking them first; for, as they came out (according to their own account) with design to seize two of the inhabitants, and to destroy the magazines of provisions, &c., belonging to the people of Massachusetts, these, I contend, had a perfect right to defend their property, to repel the lawless destroyers by every necessary method, and to resist arms by arms.

tion, is such an insult to our understandings as can entitle it to nothing but the most supreme contempt on our part.

In order to ascertain the true nature and intent of this motion, we ought not to consult the insinuations contained in private letters fabricated by the intriguing tools of the Ministry, nor the fallacious comments and glosses pretended to be founded on private explanations of his Lordship. These are but the threadbare arts of deception, the mere legerdmain of Court sharpers. To understand it aright, we must confine ourselves to the terms of the proposition itself, and to the circumstances concomitant with and subsequent to it. If we depart from these criterions, and yield our judgments to the forced constructions of those whose aim and interest it is to delude us, we may indeed fancy his Lordship's brat a well-favoured child; but it will be, nevertheless, to the eye of discernment, no better than a monstrous birth, which, unless it be exposed to perish in its infancy, cannot fail to prove a scourge and nuisance to the community.

The words of the motion are these: "That when the Governour, Council and Assembly, or General Court, of any of His Majesty's Provinces or Colonies in America, shall propose to make provision, according to the conditions, circumstances, and situation of such Province or Colony, for contributing their proportion towards the common defence, (such proportion to be raised under the authority of the General Court or General Assembly of such Province or Colony, and disposable by Parliament,) and shall engage to make provision also for the support of the civil Government and the administration of justice in said Colony, it will be proper, if such proposal shall be approved by His Majesty and the two Houses of Parliament, and for so long as such provision shall be made accordingly, to forbear, in respect to such Province or Colony, to levy any duty, tax, or assessment, or to impose any further duty, tax, or assessment, except only such duties as it may be expedient to impose for the regulation of commerce. The nett produce of the duties last mentioned to be carried to the account of such Province or Colony, respectively."

The obvious tenor of this proposal is, that we are to proffer supplies according to our abilities; and that these are to be approved or rejected by the Parliament, at pleasure, which is to be the final judge of their sufficiency, and of our ability to grant; and, consequently, its will is to be the ultimate standard of what we are to give. The reserved power of approving implies a power of rejecting, and of determining eventually how much, I will not say we are to bestow, but how much is to be extorted from us. What is this but taxing us in the gross instead of the detail? Where is the difference between demanding a precise sum from us at first, and requiring us to offer till they are satisfied and willing to accept? Does not this make the amount of our contributions to rest, in the end, upon their pleasure and absolute decision? To say that we tax ourselves, when they alone are at last to judge how much they will have from us, and to what purposes they will appropriate it, is a contradiction in terms, an impudent affront to common sense. If there be any difference between this and the requisition of a determinate sum at first, the disadvantage is on the side of the present mode. Were we apprized with certainty of what is expected from us, we should have some visible and stationary object to regulate our conduct by; we might examine whether it would be our interest to purchase peace at the known price demanded; the conditions being clear and explicit on their part, we might comply with more safety on ours. But, as the matter now stands, we should be in quest of a mere phantom; we might propose again and again, without success; and while we were made the sport of fruitless delusive negotiations, penal laws and military force would be gaining such ground upon us, as might enable our enemies to exact submissions still more unreasonable and ignominious.

The genuine nature of this beneficent plan may be well illustrated by the following supposed incident. A robber meets a traveller upon the highway, and, with a pistol at his breast, demands his money from him on pain of death. The honest man remonstrates against the injustice and cruelty of taking away, by force, what he has earned by hard labour and the sweat of his brow, and what he is in fact very little able to spare. "Well, replies the ruffian, as I am a man of honour and generosity, and you are my fellow-creature, I should wish to indulge you as far as is consistent with my own exigencies. Something I must have, and something considerable; but I will leave it to yourself to offer what you can spare in your present circumstances. I will require no particular sum, but, notwithstanding, I must advise you to be liberal; for, let me tell you, it is my business to judge whether your offers are reasonable or not, and I will compel you to give me what I think you ought."

From the internal structure of the motion, I proceed to its exterior appendages; and from Lord North's own declarations on the occasion, I infer his real design with infallible certainty. In the course of the debate he asserts, that it is no conceding proposition, nor any diminution of the authority of Parliament, but rather a confirmation of it: That the taxing power is still retained in the hands of that body, and to be exercised entirely at its own discretion: That we are only to be indulged in the mode, which, provided a substantial supply be obtained, ought to be left with us, upon motives of mutual convenience: That this is, at length, placing the matter upon a solid foundation—a dispute for revenue—not an idle punctilious controversy on principles of abstract right: That the benefits of commerce between Britain and the Colonies are reciprocal, and so nearly upon a par as to leave us little claim of exemption from an equal portion of taxes with the people at home, on account of the confinement of our trade; consequently, after a trifling allowance for the balance that may be against us, reason and equity require that we should contribute full as much in taxes as they: That no relaxation is to take place in the coercive operations, either by restrictive statutes or military chastisement; and that our submission to the terms here presented is to be the condition on which our allegiance shall be accepted.*

This his Lordship affirms is the ultimatum, the utmost favour we are to expect, though he confesses himself sensible that the proposition will not be relished by the Americans in general; but if only one Colony should submit, his purpose would be answered, because, one link of the chain being broken, the whole must necessarily fall into pieces. This separation, he says, would restore the Empire; and divide et impera is a maxim never held unfair or unwise in Government. He takes occasion to encourage the people to patience and resignation under their temporary sufferings, from the sudden interruption and decay of trade and the infelicities of war, by holding out the flattering prospect of a large revenue, to be raised upon us, for the relief of their burdens; and at the same time to animate the soldiery to a full exertion of their native valour and intrepidity, by informing them that they are not to draw their swords and imbrue their hands in blood, for a vain phantom, or empty point of honour, but for a substantial and durable benefit to their Country.

Without waiting to see the success of his experiment, scarce allowing us time to receive the intelligence of his proposal, with a precipitant temerity that marks the savage inhumanity of his heart, he gives the fatal word to open the dismal theatre of war, and begin the horrid tragedy; as if in haste to evince the sincerity of his professed resolution to compel us to be slaves.

What shall we think of such a motion, attended with such dark circumstances? Considered in itself, examined in conjunction with the Minister's own explications, and with his desperate conduct since, does this uncomely progeny of his possess a single feature or lineament of peace and reconciliation? Does it not rather wear the aspect of treachery, insult, and tyrannick violence, and call for our resentment much more than our countenance or approbation?

It frequently excites both my laughter and spleen to hear men gravely calling this a conciliatory proposition, a fair ground for negotiation, and the like. If his good Lordship intended it so, he certainly took a most ungracious method to recommend it to us; and if we are credulous enough to believe it such, we must take our opinion upon hypothesis and trust. We may, indeed, discover the facility and extent of our faith, but not the acuteness or depth of our penetration. For my part, as I have not so much credulity in my composition as may incline me to credit the vague suggestions of any man in opposition to the natural appearances of things, I must opine that there is nothing conciliatory in this motion, except it be in the name. I can view no proposal as tending to accommodate and reconcile, unless it possess these two characteristics—a considerable approach towards those terms we may, with justice to ourselves, accept; and an intermission of all coercive, compulsory proceedings. These alone can testify a serious design of pacification in our enemies, and can make it honourable or politick in us to regard their overtures. The resolution in question is at such an infinite distance from any thing we can embrace, and is clothed in such a menacing hostile garb, that it clearly evinces the most unfriendly disposition, and claims nothing from us but the most contemptuous inattention.

THE MONITOR, NO. VII.

In publick exigencies there is hardly any thing more prejudicial than excessive caution, timidity, and dilatoriness; as there is nothing more beneficial than vigour, enterprise, and expedition. When the former qualities prevail in the conduct of affairs, during the tempest of State, we see none but weak and irresolute counsels, productive of plans and measures slow in their execution, and insignificant in their consequences. Every proposal, whether trivial or important, is perplexed with endless debates; however obvious its propriety, still it must be examined in every light, must undergo the nicest dissection, and each member of it be viewed with the most scrupulous precision. If it may be attended with difficulties, these, though little more than mole hills in themselves, appear, through the microscopic medium of fear, to be inaccessible mountains. The creative eye of coward caution multiplies difficulties, and fancies it sees a thousand obstacles and inconveniences which have no real existence. Undertakings the most necessary and likely to succeed, are rejected for the bare possibility of failure, and of some mischievous effects which may chance to result from them. The attention, engrossed with a multitude of immediate minute objects, is incapable of extending to any comprehensive views, and the mind is too feeble to embrace any lofty or hazardous projects, notwithstanding the prosperity of publick concerns may absolutely require them. In a word, nothing wise, provident, manly, or decisive, is to be expected; a scandalous remissness, imbecility, and inaction, characterize the general current of affairs.

When the latter ingredients preponderate, we see bold designs concerted with becoming resolution, and executed with answerable firmness and success. We behold active counsels, seconded by a promptitude in execution. Deliberation is indulged within proper bounds, and proportioned to the nature of the business. Danger is encountered, obstacles are levelled, resources provided, remote perils are foreseen with calm intrepidity, and prepared against with a proper degree of self-possession, which is ever fruitful of expedients; they are not regarded with indecent terror and despondency, nor vainly avoided by an unavailing flight. Activity and fortitude are the very life of great exploits, and can alone produce security in perilous and stormy times.

I would not be understood to censure a due degree of prudent calmness and circumspection, nor to recommend precipitancy and rashness. I am sensible of the necessity of the former, and of the destructive tendency of the latter; but I would wish to explode that strange perversion of ideas and terms by which men are led to make the name of prudence a sanction for cowardice, or something worse. I would desire to impress this sentiment, that supineness and indolence, when war thunders at our gates, is inconsistent with prudence, which dictates the use of the means best adapted to every occasion; that it is one thing to fold our arms and slumber, while the lawless robber is plundering our habitations, and another to take those discreet, and, at the same time, resolute methods which are best adapted to resist his attempts. In a state of hostility, I esteem it the truest wisdom to be diligent, prompt, and enterprising; to strain every sinew in warlike preparations; to search out every expedient, and seize every opportunity of strengthening ourselves, and materially weakening the enemy.

Temerity consists in prosecuting such wild schemes as have little probability of success; or which, though successful, could not compensate for the inconveniences through which they were pursued, or were like to be, in their consequences, productive of much more detriment than solid advantage. To these I would give my hearty negative; but where there is an object of moment in view, where there is a likelihood of success, and much to be gained by it, we ought not to be deterred at the prospect of difficulty and danger, nor effeminately shrink from every enterprise, as impracticable, which is not to be accomplished but with trouble and hazard.

Here I perceive many will be ready to ask, with an air of triumph, will not these daring measures have a direct tendency to exasperate and inflame? Will they not rouse the national pride of Britain, and bring the united resentment of the Ministry and people upon us? Will they not provoke the tremendous North, that second Jupiter, to exhaust his magazine of thunderbolts at our devoted heads, and, in a flood of vengeance, destroy us from the face of the earth, as happened to the rebellious giants of old? I answer, though I am far from thinking this terrestrial Jupiter omnipotent, even when assisted with his awful synod of demigods, the Parliament, yet, if I thought him possessed of any share of the justice and benignity which are ascribed to the celestial Thunderer, I should be very loth to offend him, and should hold it safer to court his favour than to defy his resentment. But as I believe there is little of the divinity in him, in those respects, I esteem it necessary to set him at defiance, and to be prepared for the worst effects of his rage and animosity; or, to speak in plainer terms, I am of opinion the Ministry must be driven from the post they have occupied, or they will never leave it till they have completed our ruin. While it is tenable, they will certainly hold it; reputation, interest, personal safety—every motive concurs to impel them to perseverance. Their conduct cannot be imputed to inconsiderateness or mistake, but is plainly the result of deliberate tyranny. They were well admonished of the temper of the Colonies, of the infinite difficulty of carrying the point of taxation. Two striking examples were before them of fruitless endeavours to impose the claim; in contempt of past experience, in defiance of the opposition to be expected from us, they resolved to make another trial. They have outgone their predecessors in the essay, and have proceeded to the last extremity—an appeal to the sword. They have advanced too far to retreat, without equal infamy and danger; their honour, their credit, their existence as Ministers, perhaps their life itself, depend upon their success in the present undertaking. When these things are considered, what reasonable man can doubt that we ought to expect the worst their circumstances will empower them to inflict, and that the shortest road to an accommodation is to convince them they are unable to effectuate their design?

The scheme of conduct I recommend supposes that a deliberate plan has been formed in the cabinet to enslave the Colonies—that is, to bring them under unlimited subjection to the Parliament. If this be admitted, the inference is unavoidable, that men who were capable of forming such a design, would not scruple to use the means necessary for its accomplishment. That when they determined to divest us of our liberties, they consequently determined to take every method proper to effect it. That as they have unsheathed the sword, they have thereby testified an opinion that the sword is a fit instrument for their purpose, and have given us all possible reason to believe they will use it so long as they have any hope of succeeding by it. That as they have already shown a disposition the most malignant and hostile imaginable towards us, we have nothing to look for from their justice or clemency, but may expect all the mischief they shall think it their interest to do us, in prosecution of their favourite plan. That therefore we need not fear to irritate or provoke them, but should exert every faculty to build a wall of adamant about our invaded rights, which may serve to blunt the edge of their uplifted weapon, or retort it with redoubled fury upon their own breasts.

As to the supposed danger of incensing the nation against us, by vigorous measures, I believe it to be entirely ill-founded. That their present inclinations are propitious to America, may be fairly gathered from the following considerations, selected from many more: 1. It may naturally be presumed that they approve in us the same erect spirit of liberty for which themselves have ever been distinguished. 2. The principals in the opposition to the present Administration have always been the most popular men in the Kingdom, and it is more than probable they lead the sentiments of the people in the important question of the day. 3. The City of London, which has been constantly known to direct the national opinion, has taken an active part in our behalf. 4. By various accounts there appears to be great difficulty to enlist men to fight against us, insomuch that the Ministry are constrained to give particular encouragement to the Papists, who alone seem inclined to the service.

In this case, the people will not regard the ministerial cause as their own. Their pride will be in no wise wounded by the disappointment and defeat of men who are odious to themselves; but they will rather rejoice in it, and applaud the instruments. Their generous natures will be captivated with the gallant exertions of their fellow-subjects, and they will be ready to make every allowance for the necessity of our situation.

But let us admit that the hope of relief, from the power of taxing us, has obliterated every other sentiment, and has induced the people in general to unite in a common cause with the Ministry; the same inducement will incite them to second all the views of their imagined benefactors to bring us under subjection. We must then look upon them as enemies, who are willing to do us all the injury they can, and should be indefatigable in putting ourselves in a posture of defence.

On the whole, if we are wise, it will be the first article in our political creed, that our oppressors will do every thing in their power to carry their point, and despoil us of our privileges. This, the whole tenor of their treatment clearly denotes. The consequence will be, that we shall leave nothing undone which may conduce to the obstruction of their progress, and to the discomfiture of their oppressive designs.

Nothing but superlative folly will occasion us to neglect any expedient for fortifying our opposition, on the precarious and ill-grounded hope of prevailing by more gentle methods. The times are too serious and urgent to admit of trifling and procrastination. Too much is at stake to trust any thing to the equity and forbearance of men who have proved themselves to be destitute of those qualities. Every moment is precarious, and calls aloud for improvement. The general complexion of affairs demands activity, vigilance, and resolution. Let us beware, lest, while we amuse ourselves with a vain expectation that our enemies may relent, and come to an amicable settlement, they may be plying every engine of war, and may find us, at the critical juncture, in an unprepared and defenceless condition.

THE MONITOR, NO. VIII.

On the conduct of the Tories.

The dignity and meanness of human nature never appear so conspicuously as in times of publick danger and distress. In the calm of life there are many latent heroic virtues which have no opportunity to display themselves, but which, when the scene is overcast with the clouds of adversity, burst forth with a dazzling brilliancy, and seize the admiration of mankind; as, on the other hand, the true characters of men are apt to be disguised by many specious artifices, and embellished with many gilded appearances, which, when the storm rises, are dissipated and lost, and leave them exposed in all their native deformity: we are then at the same time charmed with the most magnificent virtues, and shocked with the blackest vices of the human heart.

The conduct of far the greatest part of my countrymen, amid the fiery trial in which we are now engaged, affords abundant matter for panegyrick, and, if persisted in with steady uniformity, will be a bright example for the imitation, and a prolific theme for the praises of future ages. I wish, for the honour of humanity, the same encomium could be extended without exception; but it is a melancholy truth that the behaviour of many among us might serve as the severest satire upon the species. It has been a compound of inconsistency, falsehood, cowardice, selfishness, and dissimulation. Proteus like, they have been in continual change; have borrowed what shapes and assumed what forms they found convenient to promote their sinister purposes. The most charitable construction to be put upon their conduct is, that they have had no system, and have been at perpetual variance with themselves; the most natural is, that they have been consistent only in a hypocritical concealment of their real principles and intentions. There is no alternative but to suppose that, while they have been exclaiming against anarchy in the state, they have been the unhappy victims of an intellectual chaos, a total confusion of understanding, which has obstructed the operations of common sense, and tossed them at random upon the waves of caprice, liable to be driven about by every gust of ministerial intrigue; or that they have only artfully diversified the means to one great end—the ruin of their Country; making the service of the Ministry their supreme good, and resolving to conform all their actions to the most perfect standard of submission.

It would be too arduous a task to follow these versatile beings through all their mean doublings and intricate windings, or to depicture them particularly under that infinite variety of disguises they have worn on different occasions.

“Chameleons, who can paint in black and white.”

But I may give a sketch of the principal traits of their character, and I doubt not the bare outlines of the portrait will be sufficient to excite disgust and abhorrence in every manly breast. Happy should I be, could the faithful representation reanimate some expiring remains of virtue in the bosoms of the self-degraded originals, and prevail with them to feel the guilt, the littleness, the infamy of forgetting they are men.

In order to have an adequate idea of their conduct during this last interesting period, it will be necessary to recollect the part they sustained in former transactions, which will serve as a foil or contrast to that, and will show them in a point of light truly ridiculous and contemptible.

The very men who have now luckily fallen into such a pleasant dream of loyalty and obedience, in the time of the Stamp Act, were most of them “patriots of distinguished note;” the most vociferous clamorers for liberty and property; the life and soul of mobs; the leaders in all the valorous exploits of plebeian phrensy, such as parading the streets with effigies, pulling down houses, tarring and feathering, and the like. In a word, they did not scruple in those days to run headlong into practices much more wanton and disorderly than any that have happened in the course of our present struggle, which has been managed with singular decency, regularity, and prudence.

They then thought it no treason, no mortal sin, no Republican or Presbyterian contrivance, to form a Continental Congress; to petition and remonstrate with spirit and freedom; to deny the right of taxation claimed and exercised by the Parliament; to enter into agreements for the restriction of commerce; to act in every respect with suitable vigour and resolution. They did not tremble at the sound of Ministerial vengeance; neither were they afraid to adopt any decisive measure, because it might tend to irritate, to widen the breach, to throw an obstacle in the way of peace and reconciliation, and the rest of the trite nonsense, the product of these exuberant times. The contracted views of party, the sordid motives of ambition and avarice, had not then taken such firm hold on their minds as they have since. They felt the force of reason, listened to its dictates, and co-operated in the necessary means of bringing speedy relief to their Country.

What a miserable reverse do we now behold! These mighty champions for the liberty of their Country have dwindled into a puny tribe of voluntary slaves. They have meanly abandoned the lofty ground they formerly stood upon, and are contented to become obsequious dependants on the bounteous indulgence of a despotick Ministry and venal Parliament for all they possess. While Administration, in pursuance of an open claim of unbounded authority over us, are driving us, as far as lies in their power, to the brink of perdition; while they are practising all the violences, as well as the refinements of destruction, against us, with an avowed intention to compel us to contribute as much as they think proper to the expenses of the Empire, or rather to the maintenance of parasites and minions, these shameless apostates are not simply inactive in the defence of their Country: they are industrious in promoting the views of its enemies; they are continually using all the arts of cunning and deceit to propagate the contagion of disaffection, to damp the zeal and ardour of their countrymen, and to discredit every method which is devised for the preservation of our common, essential rights; they have condemned those very principles and measures for which themselves were once the foremost advocates. Let them not presume to justify their inconsistencies by the subtleties of sophistry. Their own consciences must contradict the language of their tongues, and, whatever they may vainly flatter themselves, it is impossible for them to impose their flimsy apology upon any but the most vulgar and ignorant; men of sense easily detect the fallacy of their superficial pretences.

In consequence of the violent attacks made upon the Province of Massachusetts, all men were surprised and alarmed. The necessity of a Congress was universally allowed. The Committee which was formed here, for holding a correspondence and concerting measures with the other Colonies, was chiefly composed of the persons who are at this time principals in the opposition. Delegates were nominated and elected under their influence, and they bound themselves, by all the ties of honour and patriotism, to abide by the decisions of the Congress.

They professed at that time to agree in these leading principles: that the Parliament has no right to tax the Colonies; that the duty upon tea, being for the express purpose of raising a revenue, was a tax upon us, therefore illegal and unconstitutional; that the attempt to introduce it among us, encumbered with such an illegal duty, indicated a revived intention to enslave us; that the alteration of the Massachusetts Charter was an unwarrantable act of power, calculated to establish a precedent dangerous in the extreme to all the privileges of America; and that, whatever might be the ostensible motive, the real design was much more than barely to punish an outrage on private property. In a word, that all the late Ministerial proceedings were to the last degree alarming, and could not be quietly submitted to without endangering all our dearest rights and privileges.

Yet even then there were some peculiarities that discriminated the party. There were symptoms of lukewarmness in their behaviour, which produced no small suspicion of their sincerity. They seemed, as they still continue to be, averse from all vigorous measures, and desirous to confine their opposition to the absurd mode of petition and remonstrance. It was, with reason, thought not a little extraordinary, that they should be so entirely engrossed in a mode which repeated experiments had proved was disregarded and fruitless; and which now, less than ever, could be relied on, not only from past experience of its inefficacy, but from this odious consideration, that every fresh attempt rendered the arbitrary designs of the cabinet more apparent, and afforded a stronger argument that the subversion of all our liberties had been resolved on, and consequently that redress was less to be expected from the simple force of complaint and solicitation.

When the proceedings of the Congress appeared, they murmured against the adoption of the Suffolk Resolves, and some other less considerable matters; but the Association, which was the mainspring of our opposition, they declared themselves ready and willing to support. This, however, did not last long. In a little time, with their usual fickleness and inconstancy, they brought themselves to deny the whole authority of the Congress, to condemn all their measures, without reserve or distinction, as illegal, impolitical, and destructive, and to traduce the characters of the members with the utmost virulence of defamation. They were not satisfied to suppose that these had fallen into imprudent counsels, through intemperate zeal; but, with all the charity of good Christians and moderate men, they loudly stigmatized them every where as a knot of hair-brained Republicans, who had assembled, with rebellion and civil war in the dark recesses of their hearts, and who meditated nothing but to build their own greatness upon the ruin of their Country.

With the assistance of certain dexterous celebrated casuists, they soon learned the admirable art of turning reason and conscience out of doors, and acquired a power of mental digestion well adapted to paradoxes, both in logick and ethicks. They obtained a happy knack of proving to all gainsayers, by dint of positive assertion, that a duty imposed for the direct declared purpose of raising a revenue, was simply a regulation of trade, and not a tax; though in what manner the interests of trade could possibly be advanced by it, or by what magick an imposition for raising a revenue on the subject is divested of the nature of a tax, I confess to be a mystery far surpassing the bounds of my limited comprehension. They also found out an expedient for absolving themselves from the obligation of the most sacred engagements, voluntarily and deliberately cemented with the whole Continent. That laudable maxim, the offspring of jesuitical policy, that no faith is to be kept with hereticks, admits of an easy application to rebels, who may be considered as hereticks in Government; and it is no wonder that these orthodox gentlemen should think it no disgrace to violate all the ties of honour and fidelity with the rest of their countrymen.

At this season a petition from our constitutional Assembly was to effect an accommodation without the least difficulty. The Ministry and Parliament only waited for such an opportunity to adjust all differences, and come to the most generous terms with us. Like kind indulgent parents, they would be glad to receive us, returning prodigals, with open arms, and to make us happy in the smiles of their benign countenances. In the mean time the Assembly was called, the judicious views of this wise, calm, prudent, moderate party, prevailed. The turbulent measures of the Congress were treated with all the contempt of neglect. They carried every point they pleased, and managed matters altogether at their own discretion. Petitions to the King, and memorials to both Houses of Parliament, were framed and sent home. One would naturally have imagined that, should they fail in this application, they would be fully convinced of their error, and cease their opposition to the general plan of the Colonies.

While these petitions were depending, the news arrived of the battle of Lexington. An universal uproar was raised against the Ministry. It was never imagined they would go to such lengths, and draw the sword in support of their oppressive schemes. No man could now pretend to extenuate, much less to justify, their conduct. All their advocates were to desert them, and join, heart and hand, with the rest of their countrymen. Every thing was to be harmony and unity, and this Colony was to excel all the others in firmness and zeal. This was the common discourse of every tongue; and, as an evidence of its sincerity, an association was cheerfully subscribed, promising compliance with all the recommendations of the several bodies intrusted with the management of publick affairs.

I was almost simple enough to credit these deceitful appearances, and to believe the men were at last in earnest; but I was soon convinced of my error, and that all my pleasing hopes were entirely visionary. I discovered many signs of a lurking chagrin at the success of the Provincials and the defeat of the Regulars. Time gradually developed the real motives of their apparent conversion, and taught me that it had proceeded more from the panick dread of popular fury, than from any sentiments of virtuous indignation at the unparalleled injustice and cruelty of our enemies. I have had a fresh proof that they have happily got the better of all those idle scruples which are so incommensurable to mankind in general, and have learned to despise the superstitious obligations of honour, religion, and love to their country, which they only made use of as unmeaning formalities, fitted to deceive the unsuspecting multitude.

Some time after this tragick event, intelligence arrived that the petition from the Assembly had met with the usual fate, and had been refused a hearing. The pretence was, that it contained a denial of the rights of the Legislature, and therefore could not be received. A few insipid, nauseating expressions of kindness were obligingly bestowed by the Premier upon this Colony; and, as an incontestable mark of it, we were referred to a resolution of the House, the acknowledged design of which, as I have shown in my last paper, was to dissolve the union of the Colonies. In the first effusions of disappointment, many invectives against the Ministry were uttered by their party, and declarations similar to those on the former occasion were made, but their resentment presently subsided, and they in a little time resumed their wonted friendship and veneration.

The cry now became, that the Assembly went too far in denying the right of Parliament to tax the Colonies; they should only have desired a repeal of obnoxious acts and redress of grievances. This method would certainly have been successful; for though the Parliament will never relinquish their right, they would readily suspend the exercise of it forever. A gentleman in London, in a letter to his friend in New-York, assures him that this was undoubtedly the case; and that, had the Assembly prudently declined the question of right, every thing would have been settled to our wish! What friend would disbelieve the assurance of another? Or who, of any party, would ever doubt the veracity of his friend's friend? But, by the by, it ought to have been recollected that it was rather impolitic and presumptuous in them to give the lie to their great luminary and patron, the amiable Lord North, who declared "that the dispute was now about a solid revenue, a full proportion of taxes to the people of Britain, and these to be raised according to the final judgment and determination of Parliament."

Not to dwell longer upon so disgusting a theme, I will observe, in fine, that this party has, from time to time, fluctuated between the most opposite and contradictory opinions. It has held that the Parliament intended to enslave us, and that it did not intend to enslave us: That the duty upon tea was a tax, and that it was not a tax: That the Parliament has no right of taxation over us, and that it has a right of taxation; but, at the same time, no right to exercise that right: That the appointment of a Congress was a wise and necessary expedient, and that it was an unwise and destructive one: That the Association ought to be supported, and that it ought not to be supported. In a word, that the Colonies have been much injured and oppressed, and that they have not been injured nor oppressed, but are so many nurseries of ingratitude, treason, and rebellion!

I fear they have at length fatally settled upon this sandy and dishonourable foundation: that, wherever right may be, power is on the side of the Parliament; and that, by enlisting under their banners, they at least espouse the strongest and safest party—disregarding, like true men of the world, the inferior considerations of justice and integrity.

The dread of losing their property by confiscation is a principal motive of their persevering attachment to the ministerial cause; and is a mean of making new proselytes to their party, of those mercenary wretches who,

*Pauperiem metuens, potire metallis
Libertate caret.*

Here I must bestow the highest commendations on those, though few in number, who have nobly disengaged themselves from the society of men whose pernicious principles are now become too evident. Uncommon virtue and strength of mind are requisite to throw off the fetters of party, and give free operation to truth. I doubt not, as they have been once able to disentangle themselves, they will proceed steadfastly in the honourable course they have begun to run, and will hereafter prove supports, ornaments, and blessings to their country.

COSMOPOLITAN, NO. V.

To the Inhabitants of the AMERICAN Colonies.

Friends and Fellow-Citizens:

In many instances we insensibly glide into error, judging by the force of habits and the association of ideas. Having once investigated the relation subsisting between objects, and apprehended the consequences resulting from that relation, in some early period, we seldom trace subsequent propositions, which are the subjects of our disquisitions, to first principles or evident matters of fact. We are too apt to avoid the pain and labour of a tedious thorough scrutiny, to rest satisfied upon former determinations, although their grounds are continually varying, and circumstances so changed as to reverse inferences of earlier times. It is natural to the mind, in her pursuits, to acquiesce, so soon as she perceives a deduction from some presumed or commonly received truth; not adverting to the argument in the intermediate stages, or scanning the evidence in the progress, she takes the shortest way to a decision, and substitutes habitual presumptions in the room of proof and conviction. This is safe and convenient in reasoning upon permanent ideas and the immutabilities of nature; but things that are constantly fluctuating demand a different procedure. The relation between different communities is incessantly varying, touching their numbers, power, and riches. One may be labouring under the weight of her own greatness, while the other is but beginning to exist; the latter in many respects may, from natural causes, equal the former in her progress, and even surpass, unconscious of her own strength. There is, perhaps, no instance where these principles have more fallaciously operated, than in comparing the combined strength of the United Colonies with that which Britain is capable of exerting against them. She is called, by a figure of speech, the Parent State. This family term has innocently betrayed many into that groundless opinion, that she possessed parental authority, and could with as much ease chastise and force submissions from the Colonies, as the parent of a family corrects and governs his feeble offspring. Hence it is that expressions borrowed from the domestick economy have been so often prostituted to a political purpose.

We can all recollect, and I am sure discernment and sensibility must blush for them, persons unmeaningly and ridiculously arguing themselves into a belief of falsehood, from the mere force of names. Say they: "Can a child oppose the power of the parent? Has not she a right to govern at pleasure, and by her corrections cure it of its frowardness, and reduce it to a sense of duty and filial obedience? Shall a child complain of a smart inflicted for its good? or is it possible for the parent not to have the interest of its own likeness near at heart?" The truth is, the expression only marks our reciprocal relations in point of time and circumstances, not right of authority and superiority of strength. The present aggregate collection of British inhabitants did not give being to the Americans, or afford them any degree of support. The blood that circulates through our veins flowed from the same fountain with theirs, only with greater purity. They claimed the rights of primogeniture; these they enjoyed. They possessed the splendid inheritance of our common ancestors, while, like younger sons, we became adventurers abroad in a distant country. In our infantile indigency and impotent minority, we looked with admiration on the comparative greatness and strength of our elder brothers. At this period were those habits generated, and language formed, that are handed down to the present day. So great is the force of custom, that it is scarcely possible now, at first blush, to feel ourselves in any degree equal to those which were once so much our superiors; as a son or a pupil seldom loses, even in manhood, those impressions of inferiority which he received under the culture of his parent, or instruction of his master. This is all fallacy, and leads to delusion. But if any one still insists that America is the child, she is certainly a sturdy, large-boned one, well-proportioned in all its parts, in the bloom of vigour and health, who has lost its natural mother, and has both right and ability to renounce an old, stern, encroaching step-dame, not, indeed, worn out by age, but greatly impaired with the refinements of luxury and the arts of debauchery; a dame who, for the sake of proging for her spurious Scottish connexions, chooses to quarrel with the genuine heirs. Refusing the indelicate milk, and weaned from the breast of parental luxuries, we shall soon ripen into manhood. Let us contemplate the sources of our sufficiency, hug to the bosom and explore the bowels of our own Country, learn our strength, and the arts of improving it.

It is necessary, in all examinations, to divest ourselves of all prejudices, to dismiss from our breast every prepossession, to attend to realities, scan the arguments, and determine upon the stubborn evidence of facts. The strength of a country, as remarked in my last, arises from the joint concurrence of numbers, of riches considered as the internal resources of war, of situation, and the temper and spirit of its inhabitants. America, considered in this four-fold point of view, swells to an amazing, an inconceivable pitch of greatness. No country under heaven can reach her height, or compare with her wide expansions. The planter, the farmer, the manufacturer, and the mechanick, with their dependencies, make up the principal part of those three million inhabitants of the British Colonies.

These are the sinews, the safety and ornament of a country in the day of invasion, being formed to fatigue, and having their nerves strung by hardy industry. It is said that a fifth part of the three millions, at a modest computation, is capable of joining the train-bands, and bearing arms in defence of the rights of their Country. This gives us a muster-roll of six hundred thousand fighting men, all from their childhood allowed the use and skilled in the exercise of the gun, the spade, and the pick-axe; many thousands of whom have been wont to traverse the seas, to crowd the sail, and ply the oar. Can the mother, as she is called, marshal so many belligerent sons attached to her cause? Is it possible numbers should be wanting from this multitude to recruit our armies, and man our ships and lesser craft? Can Britain, with her utmost force destinable to America, of twenty, or five and twenty thousand, cope with six, some say eight or twelve hundred thousand determined and well-regulated militia? Can she preserve her conquest against that increasing torrent of population, which, in the course of half a century, will give us double her numbers? Has not the skill and experience, acquired in the last war, given us Generals and commanders equal to any service, capable of any achievements? Will not the present martial school, which has already advanced us centuries in the military art, which has made the soldier of the citizen, called the husbandman from his farm, conveyed the knowledge of war to the inhabitant of the village and the cottager of the mountain, which has made the children of the streets, with a semblance of a war, emulate in measuring their steps to the fife and the drum—I say, will not such amazing ardour and application leave to posterity the character of a General, that shall equal if not obscure the names of a Marlborough or a Wolfe?

Our numbers do not end here. A large catalogue of virtuous matrons, useful wives, industrious daughters, and active sons, follow in the train, and plead for a part in the merits of the day. These, by manufacturing, providing, supplying, and even cultivating, render essential services, and form a numerous band of useful auxiliaries. These will all, immediately or indirectly, contribute something to support the endangered goddess, to sustain the temple of liberty, to strengthen the great eagle's nest, for the structure of which all animals are said to furnish some rough materials. Is there any deduction to be made? Will a small, doubting, discontented, and disaffected party lessen the account? Can their numbers ever deserve mentioning, unless it is to mark their insignificance, and our own importance and unanimity? Will they balance, in the comparison, those zealous votaries and enterprising characters that, from foreign parts, will be constantly flocking to America, as an asylum from persecution and oppression, or repairing to our standard to assist in displaying the banners of justice, liberty, and truth? Has not the accession of a Lee already more than cancelled their whole importance?

The riches of a country, considered as the resources of war, do not necessarily or immediately consist in gold or in diamonds. These have neither intrinsic worth or direct utility. An army can neither be fed upon diamonds, clothed with gold, or fight with powder made of silver; they may be the medium of exchange, the means of procuring to a destitute country the implements for fighting and the necessaries for war. Where these abound, the country is rich, and a paper currency is equal to the mines of Peru; where they are wanting, all the treasures of the east would be but glittering poverty. An ample supply, and independent resources of food to eat, and raiment to put on, of lumber and cordage, of powder and ball, of guns and spears, with courage to wield them, is martial opulence. Mountains of gold can produce no more, and, where these abound, mountains of gold are mountains of dross. If America then yields such a produce, she has in herself, touching a war, the stamina of exhaustless wealth. On this question we are not left to wander in the dark regions of uncertain conjecture, or to traverse territories unexplored. The effects and produce of present improvements demonstrate its certainty. Taking past experience and known examples for our guide, let us examine it a little in detail. Standing on this ground, without divination, we may extend our knowledge into futurities. It is presumed that the omnipotence of Parliament will never be able to arrest the sun in her course, subvert the order of nature, alter the charter of Heaven, or interdict vegetation. If, then, we may judge of the future from what we have experienced, that annual produce that has sustained the Continent the last, may do the same for the present, or any year yet to come, with an increase only in proportion to the increase of its inhabitants. We shall also have in reserve that vast quantity exported to the West-Indies, and to a number of other ports. Surely, if we could feed ourselves, and so many of our hungry neighbours, in a time of luxury and extravagancy, we can do the former in a time when every individual is roused to industry, and piqued to economy. The army that heretofore have been garrisoned in our Towns, and the navy that have invested our coast, were likewise supplied from our stalls and our granaries. These drains being hedged up by bulwarks and intrenchments, must make provisions flow back upon our hands in an uncommon surplusage. No country has less to fear on this score than ourselves, notwithstanding the chimerical idea of some, of starving us into submission. I appeal to facts, to daily observations. The interior parts of the Continent are like one capacious store-house, immensely furnished with every necessary, or like a living fountain constantly flowing. From this source we see our capital roads alive with passing droves and labouring teams. By these means supplies at our camps are become much more ample than their wants, and the farmer is unable to vend his marketing. His complaints will probably increase. Those subduers of the wood who have received their nourishment from the older improvements, who, by selling the hemlock and cutting the shrub, have been annually planting Towns in the wilderness, and threatening to reach the Pacifick Ocean by their extended settlements, will, for the future, supply others. We shall see their fields rejoicing with wheat, and their hills skipping with flocks and with herds.

The article of clothing may be an acquisition of more, but not of lasting difficulty. Our wants will perfect the arts of supplying. Necessity will lead to inventions, and drive to exertions. The skill of producing the raw materials is continually improving; with this skill the knowledge of manufacturing keeps equal pace, and both are hastening to the zenith. Nothing can be wanting but application and assiduity. Wool and flax may be made to abound. The produce of the several climates is various. One part of our Country is adapted for grazing and the raising of sheep; others are famed for different productions. Flax, if properly managed, may generally grow in every climate. It may be annually increased to any degree, and wool, likewise, in an amazing proportion. The manufacturing of saltpetre at length wears a promising aspect. In different parts, attempts are making with various success. In the school of experience we may soon acquire the needed skill. Like the electric fluid, it exists in almost every subject. The plain, diligent, persevering hand is all that is requisite. The fingers of the fair may even assist in the business. Materials at large, for every expedient, are the common produce for each particular Province, either for ammunition, guns, fortresses, and potent ships of war. The one and the other, and all of these are now in making. The Colony of the Massachusetts alone, as appears by a representation to the Lords of Trade, have furnished five hundred sail of ships, and employed near as many thousand sailors. The other Colonies have done in the same proportion. A Country that could do this for the increase of its opulence, can do something effectual for the defence of its maritime borders.

The millions that were remitted for trinkets and superfluities will now cease. The stoppage of those silver and golden streams that have been, like the vulture upon the entrails of our Country, consuming its vitals, will now have an opposite effect, and increase the fund of our riches. This alone will almost carry us triumphant through the expenses of the day.

Wide is the difference between assaulting and being assaulted, and this in some proportion to the distance of the invading power from the invaded. The question is not whether we are able to conquer Great Britain, as has been sometimes asked, nor whether we are competent to the levying of troops equal to their transportation, and capable of carrying the war home to her own doors, or able to maintain a conflict, and furnish resources in her very bowels, sufficient for her conquest. Suppose us increased to any given number, I hold we are totally unequal to the task. The only question is, whether we are equal to a defence against such a very remote assailant. I assert that we are; and nothing but the curse of cowardice in us, or the power of miracles in them, can ever yield them the laurels of victory.

The strength of the invaded depends much upon the situation and nature of the country they are in possession of. Nature sometimes not only supplies the place of art, but greatly exceeds and even baffles its most laboured efforts. Of all countries, America is the worst calculated for a subjugation by foreign force, and the best adapted for its own defence. Did she, with Roman intrepidity, know her internal strength, she might bid defiance to the conjoined efforts of all Europe. To elude the force of prejudice and habitual influences, which are too apt to sway the mind, let the reader paint to himself Great Britain, stripped of all resources from the Colonies, maimed and crippled as she is. Let him view her as described in my last number, sinking under the enormous sum of an hundred and forty-two millions sterling, with an acquired fatality of taking the worst method to every end, and using the most expensive means for the accomplishment of every purpose. Let him paint the merchant, the manufacturer, the mechanick, and the labourer, murmuring for business, loaded with taxes, and distressed for bread. Let him paint, in lively sensations, her internal convulsions and vital contortions, with the capital of the Kingdom in determined opposition to the supremacy of Government. Let him paint, but in modest colours, the rendings of parties and the clashings of debate, from the influence of the idols of the people—a Pitt, a Camden, a Burke, a Barré, a Wilkes, and others, the political heroes of the day. A Pitt, who has pawned his understanding and pledged his reputation for the success of America. A Burke, who has vowed by all that is great and tremendous, by all that is dear to him, both here and hereafter, if he can be properly supported by the people, to bring the planners of the present measures to merited punishment. Let him paint Ireland as she is, and France and Spain as they may be. Let him still go on painting other objects, too many to be enumerated, that must and will influence. Then let him pause, and, by the force of imagination, conjure up from the midst of the sea a new world, a large rugged Continent, above an hundred times as big as the Island of Great Britain, and a thousand leagues distant from her, with a coast extending from north to south more than three thousand miles along the Atlantick, with an infinite variety of ports, natural harbours, and capacious bays. Let him suppose this ideal Continent stretching itself back thousands of miles westward, with a continued irregularity of mountains, rivers, valleys, and hills, together with an uninterrupted spread of forts, retrenchments, moats, ramparts, bastions, parapets, guards, counter-guards, covert-ways, and other lines of defence, no matter whether natural or artificial. Let him suppose three millions of people to cover the face of this fortified territory, and in the domestick possession of those natural bulwarks. Suppose ten or twelve hundred thousand of these inhabitants to be trained to arms, to have anticipated an invasion, to have taken their posts, and to be prepared for a defence, with resources and barracks on the spot. Suppose them united in one object, directed by prudence, animated by zeal, and regulated by the wisest of men—a Continental Congress. Suppose a well-organized and disciplined army of twenty, thirty, fifty, or an hundred thousand, as the occasion may be, intrenched on the frontiers as guards in advance, with experienced leaders in command, and ordnance for use, to prevent a pervasion of the country. Let him suppose a main body of eight or ten hundred thousand in reserve, to be in possession of the interior works, and fully competent, in conjunction with others, for the raising provisions, and the purposes of husbandry, tillage, and manufacturing. In such a situation, let the reader give further loose to the extravagance of imagination, and suppose some one inhabitant of Great Britain, perhaps a Minister of State, romantickly mad enough to project the conquest of such a country, the blockade of all her harbours, and the destruction of all her trade. Let him still wander in the regions of fancy, and suppose Great Britain, which, to give the argument its utmost force, he may call the Parent State, infatuated by the magnificence of her empty pomp, and mistaking the size of her sickly corpulence for vigorous strength, should rashly attempt the daring enterprise. Let him suppose her ships destined to guard those numerous ports, commodious for trade, to discharge their broadsides at boards and brickbats, to starve to submissions, and to hedge in commerce from the whole globe. Let him further suppose, and in sober seriousness if possible, her sending her hackneyed troops in partial drizzlings, from a peace establishment, by companies and regiments, to the amount of ten, fifteen, twenty, or it may be thirty thousand, with orders to pervade and traverse the Continent, compel subjections, secure the conquest, and to inflict on opposers the punishment due to treason and rebellion. I say, in such a supposed case, would not Americans, as indifferent spectators, view such operations as frantick, weak, and impracticable? Would they hesitate in pronouncing the man who projected it a subject for bedlam, the nation who adopted it strangely bewildered and consigned to destruction, and the tools who were to execute it prisoners of war and victims for slaughter? or the people of the Continent little pigmies, food for cranes, or great poltroons, fit only for slaves and vassals? Otherwise, could success possibly attend them, or conquest ultimately await them? Let the inhabitants of such a Continent only secure their own locks, their natural advantages, and they could break to pieces the brittle lines of a marching camp. The perfidious Philistines could never bind them, nor the soft persuasions of the treacherous Delilahs in their own bosoms long deceive them. Britain, in the attempt, might possibly be crushed beneath the falling weight of her massy pillars, with her lords and her nobles; but the Continent would survive the shock unhurt.

That the above is justly descriptive of the American situation, however astonishing to the unthinking and timorous, is certainly true. Her numerous harbours, framed by nature and improved by art, can never be blocked up by a British navy. Our own fleets may soon be their equal match. Our trade, which is a jewel, a precious prize that every commercial State must wish to acquire, cannot long be much obstructed by cutters and tenders. It may rather command respect. The alliances and the fleets of every power in Europe, the British ships may, for a time, harass, plague, injure, and distress, but America must, at last, rise superior to all her arts to deceive and exertions to subdue; and the day which crowns our liberty, if obtained by the point of the sword, must seal Britain's melancholy doom to an eternal duration. These prostituted maidens of the sea may sputter and spit their fiery venom on the borders of the ocean; they cannot, like the Trojan horse, enter our inland Towns, and from their bellies pour out armed battalions. Possibly we must abandon some of our commercial Cities to their relentless rage, and invite our retiring friends to exchange the benefits of commerce for the tillage of the earth, and to embrace in its stead the bosom of cultivation, until innocency and liberty shall rise supremely triumphant, and the tide of ministerial corruption cease to flow.

An army of twenty thousand may undoubtedly secure themselves on islands and peninsulas, by intrenchments, ships, and batteries, both floating and permanent. They cannot force American lines defended by numbers, resolution, and bravery. But admitting they should, and attempt to penetrate the country, fortified as it is by a continued succession of hills, valleys, rocks, swamps, rivers, fences, walls, trees, and woods, which are so many natural ramparts, breastworks, and redoubts; these will constantly defend our militia from the fire of the enemy, and as constantly embarrass and impede their march, tied up as they are to the regular pomp and trappings of war. Such a wild profusion of rustick intrenchments, as are the appendages of every farm, pass, and road, are commodious for sallies, retreats, and seasonable succours. They are the revival of antiquity, the defences of the ancient warriors of the world, which consisted in fences made of the trunks and the branches of trees, of unformed heaps of earth, and walls of stone. Behind these they secured themselves against the attack of their foes, and used their own weapons with security and success. Regular invaders must penetrate such a country with prodigious loss, being incessantly exposed to a surrounding fire of concealed promiscuous detachments, parties that are flanking, and formidable bodies in their front and their rear. Being constantly dogged, galled, and annoyed, they must be frequently decoyed or drove into ambuscades, until they are enfeebled and wasted away. In the beautiful phraseology of the Eastern dialect, "The stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber shall answer it. Wo to him that buildeth a Town with blood, and establisheth a City by iniquity! Behold, is it not of the Lord of Hosts that the people shall labour in the very fire, and weary themselves for very vanity?" Habakkuk, chap. ii, v. 11. Surely ruin must await them from every quarter, and destruction spring out of every corner. In the arts of the bush, and a skirmishing fight, we stand unrivalled. As is said of the natives, we may approach like the fox, fly like the bird, and fight like the Numidian wolf or Getulian lion.

Let us again put probability upon the rack, and suppose their forces augmented to a number sufficient for traversing the Continent, with destruction stalking by their side, ravaging, wasting, and destroying as they march. Can they garrison the places through which they pass, and occupy a progress of eighteen hundred miles? Can they stretch, in their advances, from the North to the South, and sweep, by their ranks, from the Atlantick to the seas of the West? Will not the Americans, wronged and insulted, oppressed and plundered as they are, fill in after them, start up in every corner, hill, and valley, and gather fresh strength from increased opposition? Having marched from one end of the Continent to the other, from Nova-Scotia to Georgia, and from Georgia to Nova-Scotia, the same route will still remain. Like a vibrating pendulum, in the open air, they will leave no traces of a conquest behind them. The annual increase of sixty thousand will more than supply the posts of our slain; and industry, frugality, and economy, will fully compensate their ravages and depredations; and, as our resources are permanent and internal, we can endure the struggle for ages. To give them the least prospect of a conquest, they should have potent armies at once operating in an hundred different places, which is, happily, out of their power. This is no theoretical fiction; it is founded on recent experience, and the sagacious policy of one of the brightest luminaries of the age, Pitt, (whose praises are with all nations, and will be resounded to latest ages,) in the last war, being sensible that a single effort, carried on against the extended territory of the single Province of Canada, could never bring the enemy to a subjection. He therefore planned his measures to attack the French in several different parts at the same time, in all their places of strength. Accordingly expeditions went on. General Anheerst, with a body of twelve thousand men, was to attack Crown Point; General Wolfe was at the opposite quarter, to enter the River St. Lawrence, and undertake the siege of Quebeck, the capital of the French-American Dominions; while General Prideaux and Sir William Johnson were to attempt a fort near the cataract of Niagara, &c., &c.

Much has been said, more might be said, on the spirit and temper of the Americans; we might minutely trace it, in its causes, qualities, and consequences. But, in tenderness to the patience of the reader, I must deny myself the pleasure of expatiating on this copious and animating subject. Suffice it to say, that the mind of the American has been gradually forming to its present tenor. By a constant succession of innovated oppressions and innovating measures, he has been roused to reflection. By one complex idea, he has connected liberty, religion, and happiness, in one mutual and indissoluble bond. He has seen with a forbearing spirit the one and the other of these repeatedly struck at by usurpation and corruption. Increasing oppressions, which have made his blood occasionally swell high in his veins, have at length hardened doubt into a determined resolution. He has traced ministerial manœuvres, in all their various windings and future consequences; he could see nothing but the horrors of servitude attendant on a resignation. The pitiful exertions of the Court, when seated as judge in its own case; denouncing destruction to this and the neighbouring Colonies, by the Port, Regulating, Murder, and Fish Bills, filled his heart to its full dimensions. While, from musing on these things, the sacred fire burnt within, the battle of Lexington caused it to burst, and, like a conflagration, to spread over the whole Continent, not in sudden flashes, but in a constant, fervent, inextinguishable glow, such as every genuine lover of his Country feels animating and warming his own breast. It has now a fixed predominancy; nor is there danger of a decline from inconstancy of make. It is interwoven with his constitution, improved by education, enlivened by religion, confirmed by habits, and increased by every motive that can play on the human heart. It is therefore solid and inflexible. This ought to inspire mutual confidence, mutual affection, and joint vigorous exertions in the common cause.

Having in a general way collected the materials, and delineated the power of Great Britain and America respecting the present dispute, resulting from the conjoined forces of the numbers, riches, situation, and temper of each contending State, and placed them in a contrasting point of view, let the reader recollect the whole of my two last numbers. Fixing the contents fairly in his mind, let him examine if the description is in substance true; then let him compare his ideas, and see which is the strongest, considering the one as invading, the other defending. The conclusion may be certain, and the process the same as determining mathematical propositions. Measuring on this scale, I have determined for myself; and I dare to prophesy, and for its accomplishment I dare to risk my all, that if the Americans are virtuous, resolute, and brave, it is not all the ships, armies, guns, and bayonets, that Great Britain can send, can conquer our spirits and subdue our Country. She might as well storm the planets by kites, or conflict with sky-rockets the thunderbolts of Heaven.

AN ADDRESS TO THE SOLDIERS OF MASSACHUSETTS-BAY WHO ARE NOW IN ARMS AGAINST THE LAWS OF THEIR COUNTRY.

My Fellow-Citizens:

You have been addressed by the General Officers of the Continental Army as fellow-soldiers, and with that insinuating art which was designed to move your passions. I would not draw your attention from it, provided you will devote your cooler moments to a dispassionate consideration of its subject-matter.

Suffer me, on my part, to address you as fellow-citizens, for I cannot have such dishonourable thoughts of you as to suppose, that when you put on the soldier, that you then put off the citizen. Citizens most of you were; you enjoyed the comforts of domestick life; you lately followed your different occupations, and reaped the profits of a quiet and peaceable industry; and I hope in God that you may yet do it, without any disturbance to your innocent wives and children. But, in the late courses of your lives, you must not only have given great uneasinesses to your families, but I dare to say that all of you were not quite free from uneasiness in your own minds. I know, my dear countrymen, that many of you have been drove to take up arms against your Sovereign, and the laws of the happiest Constitution that ever human beings were blessed with—some through the necessities incident to human nature, and others by that compulsion which the malevolent and ambitious arts of your leaders have made necessary to deceive you with, in order to screen themselves from that vengeance which the injured laws of society had devoted them to. Many a tear of pity have I dropped for you and for the fate of my Country, and many more tears I fear that I shall be forced to shed for that wrath which awaits you from an offended Heaven and an injured Government. Many of your associates have already quitted the field of battle, to appear before that solemn tribunal where the plea of the united force of all the Colonies will be of no avail to bribe the judgment or avert the sentence of an offended Deity. Some of them, in the agonies of death, sent messages to their friends to forbear proceeding any further, for they now found themselves in the wrong; others have repeatedly said, that an ambition of appearing something considerable, and that only, led them into rebellion; and the unhappy leader in the fatal action at Charlestown, who, from ambition only, had raised himself from a bare-legged milk boy to a Major-General of the Army, although the fatal ball gave him not a moment for reflection, yet had said, in his lifetime, that he was determined to mount over the heads of his coadjutors, and get to the last round of the ladder, or die in the attempt. Unhappy man! his fate arrested him in his career, and he can now tell whether pride and ambition are pillars strong enough to support the tottering fabrick of rebellion.

But, not to divert you from an attention to the address of your officers, I would rather wish you to weigh it with exactness; and, after you have so done, if you then should think that it is better to trample upon the laws of the mildest Government upon earth, and throw off your allegiance to the most humane Sovereign that ever swayed a sceptre, and submit to a tyranny uncontrolled either by the laws of God or man, then blame none but yourselves, if the consequences should be fatally bad to you and to your families.

Your officers, my countrymen, have taken great pains to sooth and flatter you, that you may not quit your posts, and forsake them, until they have accomplished their ambitious and desperate schemes. Your leaders know that they have plunged themselves into the bowels of the most wanton and unnatural rebellion that ever existed; they think, that by engaging numbers to partake in their guilt, that they shall appear formidable; and that, by so numerous an appearance, the hand of justice will not dare to arrest them. Some of you know that this argument hath been frequently urged; but you must know that much superior powers than this Continent can boast of have been conquered by that Government which you are now at war with.

Your officers tell you that they have reduced the Regiments from thirty-eight to twenty-six, and assign, as a reason, that "many officers, from a puny habit of body, found themselves incapable of fulfilling the duty of their station, have been obliged to absent themselves from their posts, and consequently the duty has fallen very heavily upon those who remained." Whether this is a true reason or not, some of you can tell. Be it so or not, why then not appoint others? Are none of you fit for officers, but those who absented themselves from their posts? You generally took up arms about the same time, and I dare to say that many of you were as well qualified for commissions as those who left their posts.

Another reason they sooth you with for disbanding twelve Regiments is, that the vast expense attending the maintenance of so many Regiments might have disabled the Continent from persevering in its resolution of defending their liberties, if the contest should be of any continuance. Surely, my countrymen, you cannot be deluded with such trifling pleas. Can this Continent, which undertakes to carry on a war with the power of Great Britain, be alarmed at a few millions of dollars? Their resources are boundless; the issuing of paper money is easily accomplished, and, while you can be compelled to take it, the Continent can never be disabled from persevering in its resolutions. Unhappily for them, they have discovered to you what will be much for your interest to know, viz: that the vast expense of this civil war will be a burden too heavy for the shoulders of you or your posterity to bear. Consider that already three millions of dollars have been emitted in paper, and that four hundred and thirty-four thousand dollars, equal to nine hundred and seventy-six thousand pounds, old tenor, is assessed on the Province of the Massachusetts-Bay, to redeem their part; and how much more must be raised, to carry on this unnatural war, which was commenced to gratify the pride and desperation of many of your leaders, time alone will discover. You have just entered the lists, but there is much yet to be done; to finish the mighty independent empire which they have planned for you, demands such resources as it will require one century to sponge away. Most of you have groaned under a tax of about two or three hundred thousand pounds, old tenor; but when millions are thrown into the scale, they will press you down, never to rise more.

Your officers tell you that men who are possessed of a vivacity of disposition, though brave, and in all other respects unexceptionable, are totally unfit for service. This is a new doctrine, advanced to make good officers and soldiers; it is a mystery, which I leave to that dullness and stupidity which your officers have complimented you with to unravel. The meaning of it you are best acquainted with; but it puts me in mind of what I have heard from the mouth of an arch traitor, who was disappointed in his expectations of the promotion of his near relation, viz: that the people were a set of d—d stupid asses, and were fit only to be drove.

You are further told, that the present campaign is far from an hard one. How hard you have worked, and how much duty you have done, you yourselves can tell best. Many, who have seen your labours, have thought them great; and I am much inclined to believe that you have gone through some difficulty, especially when your officers, having forgot the popularity of this harangue, almost in the next breath tell you that the post you at present occupy was fortified and secured by infinite labour. It is an old and just maxim, my countrymen, that deceivers ought to have good memories.

You are next addressed, in the invariable style, for years past, of newspapers and popular harangues, with the abuses of Ministers and Generals. This may keep up your spirits, for aught I know. Town-meeting oratory, I know, has frequently had this effect, till the spirit of it was evaporated, and then it flattened so as to be quite insipid. They boast much of the attachment of Nova-Scotia and Canada to what they call your interest, as well as of the rest of the Continent. I give you one word of advice; and as it is from a book which it is said you are fighting for, so I suppose that you will not totally disregard it. It is this: "Let not him that putteth on the harness boast as he that putteth it off." But, as to the success of union which you have met with, the same book says, that rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft. It is so, my countrymen, in a double sense; for, in the first place, no person but one who was bewitched would run the risk of engaging in a rebellion; and in the next place, which is the true meaning of the words, as witchcraft is renouncing the authority of God Almighty, and applying to the Devil, so rebellion is withdrawing allegiance from a lawful Sovereign, overturning his laws and Government, and joining with a power inimical to him.

You are also told, that as the Southern Provinces have ever placed the greatest confidence in your zeal and valour, they did not think it necessary to raise any bodies in the other Provinces for this particular service. Do you believe, my countrymen, that any of the Massachusetts officers were concerned in drawing this address to you? If so, beware of them before it is too late. I will not believe it; it surely must be drawn by some of your foreign officers, whom you have disgraced yourselves by suffering them to command you, when you had men of your own Province, who were at least equal to them, and who would have more naturally cared for you; but you may have felt the ill consequence of it ere now, and it may be too late for redress. The true English of it runs thus: the Massachusetts have a different interest from the rest of the Continent; they are a set of brave, hardy dogs, and are always encroaching upon their neighbours, and ought to be humbled; and when we have established our independency, we shall have much to fear from them. Let us therefore make them the mercenaries. They will sacrifice every thing for money; we can pay them in paper, which they are so fond of. By engaging them for soldiers, they will get knocked in the head, their wives and children will be ruined, and when we have established our Empire we shall have nothing to fear from them; they will become an easy prey to the rest of the Provinces, and we can parcel them out among us as we may think proper.

The remainder of your officers' address to you, I leave to your own remarks. It is so full of compliment and flattery, in order to catch your passions, that I cannot help blushing for you; and if you are caught by it, I shall then pity you, and you will blush for yourselves.

That you may not plead ignorance, in justification of yourselves, in case the fate of war should be against you, I will now let you into the origin and progress of the publick disorders which, for many years past, have sickened the state of this Province, and at last hath terminated in a most unnatural and ungrateful rebellion. I am persuaded, my countrymen, that you are ignorant of the true rise of your disorders; the aim of your leaders hath been to keep you in ignorance; they knew that your ignorance was their protection. Had you known their views, you would not only have spurned at the thought of overturning the Constitution, but I venture to say that some of you would have dragged them to the bar of justice, there to have received that punishment which now awaits them, and I wish that you yourselves may not be involved in, as partakers in their crimes. The history runs thus, and every page of it is capable of ample proof.

Know then, for many years past this Province hath been deeply immersed in the smuggling business. Perhaps some of you are ignorant, though I am sure all of you are not, of the meaning of smuggling business. I will tell you what it means: it is an importation of goods contrary to the laws of the society to which we belong; it is a defrauding the King of those dues which the law hath granted to him; which fraud is equal in criminality to the injuring of a private person; it is a violation of the laws of Christianity, and . . . ruining our neighbours; in short, when it . . . engaged in, it naturally tends, by degrees, to the effacing every sentiment of virtue. This is a description of the smuggling business, and it is here where I fix the sudden rise of the present rebellion.

In order to evade those laws against unlawful trade, those who were concerned in it exerted themselves to defeat them. Unluckily for the Government, at that juncture, a person who had a long while been hunting after preferment was disappointed of his game; on which a friend of his, who was versed in the law, vowed revenge, but swore that he would see the Province in a flame, if he died in the attempt. He fulfilled his oath, and burnt his fingers to such a degree that he hath irrecoverably lost the use of them. Remember, my countrymen, that there is one sort of flame that consumes not only a man's property, but also a man's understanding, and ruins very often his posterity also. This man's adroitness in law was thought necessary to be engaged in the cause of defeating acts of Parliament. He was engaged, and he had shrewdness enough to start a thought which, artfully pursued, hath generally its expected effect in all popular commotions; he said that it was necessary to enlist a black Regiment in their service; the bait was snapped at; and many Ministers of the Gospel too, too many for the honour of the Christian religion, joined in the cry. The press then roared out its libels; the sacred desk, which ought to have been devoted to the doctrines and precepts of the Prince of Peace, rang its changes on Government, and sounded the trumpet of sedition and rebellion. Boys who had just thrown away their satchels, and who could scarcely read English, mounted the pulpit, and ventured to decide on matters which had puzzled the sages of the law. Nay, they could not be contented to decide controversies of law in their harangues to their audience, but must show their parts in their solemn addresses to the Supreme Being, telling him who had been guilty of murder where the law had pronounced the supposed crime to be only self-defence; and some of them even debased the sacred character, by setting on the rabble in the publick street to insult a person who was obnoxious to the leaders of the mob. At the same time a notorious defaulter, who had pocketed a large sum of the publick moneys, in order to screen himself, took it into his head to mouth it for patriotism; and, by artful wiles and smooth demeanor, he talked the people out of their understandings, and persuaded them to give him a discharge from the debt, on account of his patriotism. This man, whom, but a day before, hardly any one would have trusted with a shilling, and whose honesty they were jealous of, now became the confidant of the people. With his oily tongue he duped a man whose brains were shallow and pockets deep, and ushered him to the publick as a patriot too. He filled his head with importance, and emptied his pockets, and as a reward hath kicked him up the ladder, where he now presides over the twelve United Provinces, and where they both are at present plunging you, my countrymen, into the depths of distress. Libertinism, riot, and robbery soon became the effects of this sort of publick spirit; houses were plundered and demolished, persons were beat, abused, tarred and feathered; courts of justice were insulted; the pillars of Government were destroyed; and no way to escape the torrent of savage barbarity but by paying obedience to the savage mandate of a mob. Garrets were crowded with patriots; mechanicks and lawyers, porters and clergymen, huddled promiscuously into them; their decisions were ocular, and from thence they poured out their midnight reveries. They soon determined to form an independent empire; yes, my countrymen, I assure you that this independent empire, which you are now assisting those pretended patriots to erect, was formed above seven years ago, though I dare say that most of you are ignorant of the black design; and one of the patriots (peace be to his manes) openly avowed it, and declared that a valuation had been taken of the estates in the Town of Boston, which he supposed would be destroyed by the naval power of Great Britain, and that all the friends of licentiousness were to be reimbursed out of the estates of the friends to Government.

The patriots were determined to humble Great Britain, and, as a first step, they promoted a non-importation agreement at the same time that the wealthy and artful among them had large quantities of goods by them, by the advanced sale of which they made fortunes, and ruined the small traders. They promised to send their new imported goods back to England, and instead thereof, their trunks were crowded with billets of wood, shavings, and brickbats, to the eternal disgrace of this Province, when they were opened in England. Some of the patriots carried about papers of subscription against importing goods from England, and washing women and porters, in order to swell the list, made their marks, (for write they could not,) that they would not import coaches or chariots from home. When they were told of the impropriety of such a conduct, and that the scheme would have no effect, they replied, that they were sensible of it, but Great Britain would be scared by it. They hired mercenaries in England to cabal and write for them, and raise an insurrection. When they were told that Great Britain would be roused, they said, that she was not to be dreaded; that she had neither men nor money; that there was more money in the Colonies than in England; that if she should resent it, that the Colonies would not pay them the millions that were due to her. Not content with this insult, the General Assembly disavowed any observance of acts of Parliament. Great Britain, with her usual lenity, pitied our insatiation, till she was at last forced to send troops to support civil Government. Those troops we were then to destroy, and we did our best to destroy them; but felt the fatal consequence of the attempt. Our violences at last rose to such an height, that injured sovereignty and an insulted Government have been roused to assert their authority, in order to curb as wanton and wicked a rebellion as ever raged in any Government upon earth.

Thus, my countrymen, I have very shortly stated to you the rise and progress of the present rebellion. I believe that many, if not most of you, were insensible of the ambitious views of your leaders. I do not think that you were so devoid of virtue as to rush into so horrid a crime at one leap; for let me tell you, that it is the highest crime that a member of society can be guilty of, and the punishment annexed to it is nothing less than a forfeiture of estate and life. Your leaders have deceived you into what they do not believe themselves; they were desperate themselves, and they have involved you in their own just doom. They tell you your properties and religion are at stake. Your ministers tell you so too, and I know you are too apt to take all that they say for gospel. But, pray, what danger is your religion in? Why, it is said that Popery is established in Canada, and will be established here. No, my countrymen, Popery is not established in Canada, let your teachers and leaders assert it never so roundly; it is only indulged to the Roman Catholics there. Your Continental Congress says, that God and nature have given them a right to the enjoyment of their religion; it is what they capitulated for with General Amherst; it is what the just, the humane King George the Third confirmed to them. This is the King whom you so lately professed allegiance to, in opposition to the Parliament; not considering that it was by acts of Parliament that the crown was placed upon his head, and on the heads of his predecessors. It seems, indeed, that your leaders have more lately found out that it is as necessary to deny the authority of the King, as they have been daring in denying that of his Parliament. Witness their late thanksgiving proclamation, which concludes with a "God save the People," instead of the heretofore invariable "God save the King." Will it not suffice your leaders to mock the King, but they must mock Heaven also? Read it over; view the cloven foot of one of your spiritual guides peeping out, whose pen fabricated the mockery, and whose foot has many a time trod the recesses of rebellion with the cabal; and I dare to say that had it not been for his mole-like, underground cunning, and priestcraft, that this once over happy, but now miserably distracted Province, had not been so soon involved in distress.

I would ask you also, my countrymen, how your properties are at stake? You will doubtless tell me that acts of Parliament have been made, to oblige you to pay duties upon various articles. Be it so. Why then do you purchase articles that are to pay duties? Why then did you not petition, in a constitutional manner, to have those acts repealed? The British Parliament never assumed to themselves infallibility, and many a time have they repealed American acts, when they have been convinced that the enforcement of them was incompatible with the mutual interest. It is true your leaders did petition, but in such an unconstitutional manner, that it was below the dignity and contrary to the system of the English Government to hear such petitions, and this your leaders knew must be the fate of them; and this method they planned in order to effect their independence, and make themselves of that importance to you which they now appear in. But you can have no just plea for entering so deeply into opposition against the Parent State. You may know, if you please, that King Charles the First granted to our ancestors a Charter; you may call it a compact, if you please, too, and if it be so, the argument will be much against you; for in that you compacted to pay duties, after a short term of years; and you have been fulfilling your compact, by paying duties, for above an hundred years past, till of late the scandalous smuggling business reared its front against the laws, and brought the State into its present distraction. You have been told, also, that your land was to be taxed, and that you were to be brought into Lordships. This I know hath been artfully propagated among you, and I dare assert it to be groundless. There is too much justice and benignity in the English Government to advance such a scheme; and supposing that they had it in their idea to do it, so violent an opposition ought to have been suspended, at least till the scheme had been brought into action. It is like one man's cutting another's throat, lest the other might possibly injure his grandchildren.

I am loth to detain you any longer, my countrymen, from sober reflection. For God's sake, for your own sake, for your wives and children's sake, pause a moment, and weigh the event of this unnatural civil war. You have roused the British lion; you have incensed that Power which hath crushed much greater Powers than you can boast of, and hath done it without your aid too. Great Britain is not so distressed for men or money as some would make you believe. Your conduct hath raised the resentment of the greatest Powers in Europe, and she may, if she pleases, accept of their proffered aid. But your priests and your leaders tell you otherwise; and I will just put the case, that supposing Heaven, in righteous judgment, should suffer you to conquer, look forward then to the fatal consequences of your conquest. You will be conquered by an army of your own raising, and then your dreaded slavery is fixed. The ambition and desperation of your leaders will then demand the fruit of all their toils. Turn back a few pages of the English history; read the account of the civil wars of the last century, and view the triumphs and absolute sway of that tyrant Cromwell. He, like some of your leaders, began with humoring the enthusiasm of the times, and ended the parricide of his Country. Let me suppose, again, as you vainly imagine, that this will not be the case, and that when you have conquered, you will then beat all your swords into ploughshares. How long do you think it will be before you are obliged to change sides, and beat your ploughshares into swords again? You will then have twelve or fourteen Colonies to form into an independent empire. Where, then, is to be the seat of empire? Surely the Massachusetts-Bay hath the best title to precedence; they began the rebellion, and they have the best title to reward. Do you think that the other Colonies cannot furnish as artful demagogues as this Province can? Do not imagine that we are the men that wisdom is to die with. We shall be cantoned out into petty States; we shall be involved in perpetual wars for an inch or two of ground; our fertile fields will be deluged with blood; our wives and children be involved in the horrid scene; foreign Powers will step in and share in the plunder that remains, and those who are left to tell the story will be reduced to a more abject slavery than that which you now dread. The Colonies are too jealous of each other to remain long in a state of friendship.

I will now, my fellow-citizens, change the scene to a more eligible view for your interest, and suppose it possible, though you don't think it so, that Great Britain can conquer you, and that, instead of being victors, you may be subjects again. You will then have the mildest Government to live under; a Government to be envied by the rest of mankind, and whose only unhappiness is, that it is too apt to abuse that liberty which God and the Constitution hath blessed it with. She hath been loth to call you conquered; she hath, like an over-fond parent, indulged your peevishness, and withheld her resentment, until she hath felt the smart of her indulgence; she is now roused, but her resentment is tempered with mildness. He whom you formerly acknowledged for your Sovereign drops the tear of pity for you, in his late speech from the throne; a speech so attempered with paternal pity, royal firmness of mind, and sentiment of dignity, as distinguishes the speaker as the father of his Country and the ornament of human nature. Clemency he is distinguished for; he is revered for his humanity; but his soul is impressed with too much magnanimity, to suffer his laws and the rights of his subjects to be trampled under the foot of rebellion; he holds out the sceptre of mercy, that bright gem of his royal dignity, for you to embrace; but if you choose to kiss the rod of his justice, be you yourselves witnesses that it is not his choice. Remember that Heaven punishes but to save. The God of Heaven hath repeatedly checked rebellion, and our own history confirms its defeats. Rebellion is so odious in the eyes of all rational beings, that it is for the universal good that it should be suppressed. It saps the foundation of moral virtue, and therefore it is for the general interest that all nature should rise in arms against it; and I have not the least doubt that Providence will arrest it in its career. When that time comes, complain not that you were not forewarned, and bear your own punishment without murmuring.

That you may seriously reflect on your own impending fate, and the fate of your wives and innocent children, before you take the deadly plunge, and that you may immediately retire from the precipice of ruin, is the friendly wish of your fellow-citizen,

NEW-YORK PROVINCIAL CONGRESS.

*Minutes of the Proceedings during the recess of the Provincial Congress, by their adjournment on the 4th of NOVEMBER, 1775, until a sufficient number of the newly elected Delegates attended to represent a majority of the Counties and form a Congress, on the 6th of DECEMBER, 1775.**

A Letter from the Honourable John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress, was received by express, after the Provincial Congress had adjourned, and is in the words following, to wit:

"Philadelphia, November 9, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: Your several letters, lately received, have been laid before the Congress. Those that respect the fort in the Highlands have been acted upon, and I here enclose you the resolutions of Congress thereupon, which you will please put in immediate execution. As soon as Congress have determined upon the other matters mentioned in your letters, the result shall be communicated to you, as I am directed to forward immediately, by express, the enclosed.

"I have not time to add but that I am, with respect, Gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

"JOHN HANCOCK, President.

"To the Members of the Convention of New-York."

The Resolutions of the Continental Congress of the 8th of November, enclosed in said Letter, are as follows, viz:

"In Congress, November 8, 1775.

"Resolved, That a Commander, with the rank of a Colonel, be appointed to take command of the Fortifications or Fortresses on Hudson's River, in the Highlands.

"Resolved, That it be recommended to the Convention of New-York, to empower the said Commander to call together and command two hundred men of the Militia of Dutchess, Orange, and Ulster Counties, and one Company of Artillery from the City of New-York, who shall be stationed in the Highlands until relieved by the Company of Artillery directed by this Congress to be raised in the City of New-York, and such other Continental troops as may hereafter be directed to take possession of the same.

"Resolved, That the Minute-Men or Militia, while on service, be maintained and paid at the same rate as the rest of the Continental forces.

"Resolved, That a number of the Militia of the Counties of Dutchess, Orange, and Ulster, be formed into Independent Companies, under the direction of the Commander of the said fortresses, and, in case of alarm, be directed to repair to the several stations in the Highlands, which, in order to prevent confusion, should be immediately assigned them.

* The new Congress were to have met on the 14th of November, they were elected on the 7th of November, according to the ordinance of the 27th of October.

"Resolved, That the troops which shall at any time hereafter be directed to garrison the fortresses in the Highlands be put under the direction of the Commander of the fortresses, except when headed by a General Officer.

"Resolved, That the Deputy Commissary-General be directed to provide sufficient provision for one thousand men for one month, and keep that quantity in stock.

"Resolved, That the Powder sent from this place to General Schuyler be remanded, if it can be any way spared, and left at the fortresses in the Highlands.

"Resolved, That the Committee of Safety of Pennsylvania be requested to furnish the Colony of New-York with five hundred pounds of Powder, and forward the same immediately to Dobbs's Ferry; that the Convention of New-York give order to receive it there, and send it as soon as possible to the fortresses in the Highlands.

"Resolved, That it be recommended to the Convention of New-York, if they have not already sent forward a sufficient number of Cannon for the defence of the fortresses erecting in the Highlands, that they immediately send forward to those fortresses so many of the Cannon at Kingsbridge, of the best quality and largest bore, as they may think necessary for that purpose."

The Provincial Congress having adjourned to the 14th of November, when the new elected members are to meet, such of the members of the new Congress as were present in New-York forwarded copies of said Resolutions to the Committees of Dutchess, Orange, and Ulster Counties, enclosed in a Letter in the words following, to wit:

New-York, November 13, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: You will see, by the enclosed copy of sundry resolutions, received by express from the honourable Continental Congress, that your County, together with the other two Counties therein mentioned, are to furnish immediately two hundred men to the fortifications on Hudson's River, to be maintained and paid in the same manner as the Continental troops, and to remain there until relieved. That you are also to form a number of your militia into Companies, to be ready, in case of alarm, to proceed to any post on the river, and perform duty, at a minute's warning.

We conceive that you will think it your duty to furnish immediately at least one-third of the number required, to wit, a Company of sixty-seven men, including officers, properly armed, accoutred, and equipped, to proceed without delay to the said fortifications, and remain there till relieved by order of the Continental Congress. If you shall find it convenient to raise and send to the forts more than your proportion, or inconvenient to furnish your proportion, we request that, in either such case, you would immediately despatch one or more of your most judicious members to the Committees of the other two Counties mentioned in the said resolutions, and make such an arrangement as to have the resolutions of the Continental Congress fully complied with. This will, no doubt, be most easily done by stationing one of your best Companies of minute-men, or Independent Companies, at the forts, or such other places as shall be directed, for the present, by the commanding officer of the Continental forces at the fort.

As the Deputy Commissary-General is directed to provide and keep there a sufficient stock of provisions for a thousand men, we presume that, beside your proportion of two hundred men, now ordered to garrison those forts, the proportion of the militia of your County which is to be formed, in readiness to march to the fortresses, or such stations in the Highlands as shall be assigned them in case of any alarm, cannot be less than three hundred. We therefore pray you also to make a proper arrangement, in the militia of your County, for this service, and to take especial care that the officers be such as feel the cause of their Country, and will defend it; and that you send us, by the return of your members to Congress, or sooner if possible, a full account of your proceedings in the premises, that the Provincial Congress, as soon as met, may be enabled to give a proper and satisfactory answer to the honourable Continental Congress, and convince both our friends and foes that we are as willing, as ready, and as brave, as any of our sister Colonies on the Continent.

As our Provincial Congress was adjourned, before the arrival of the express from Philadelphia, to the 14th instant, when new elected members are to meet, we thought it our duty to forward to you a copy of the resolutions, as far as they respect your County, with our sentiments on the subject.

And we are, most respectfully, Gentlemen, your very humble servants,

P. V. B. LIVINGSTON, EGBERT DUMOND,
ALEXANDER McDUGALL, WILLIAM ALLISON,
JACOBUS VAN ZANDT, THOMAS SMITH.
JAMES BECKMAN,

The same gentlemen also addressed a Letter to Walter Livingston, Esq., Deputy Commissary-General, in the words following, viz :

New-York, November 13, 1775.

SIR: We received by express, from Philadelphia, sundry resolutions of Congress. We enclose you a copy of such of them as will show you the necessity of furnishing and keeping up a stock of provisions for a thousand men, for a month, at the fortifications in the Highlands. Those posts have been hitherto supplied from hence.

We beg leave to suggest it as our opinion, that though a proper stock of salt provision must be laid in store, yet fresh beef, for present daily consumption, will be most healthy for the troops, and much the cheapest, and may be easily obtained, in great plenty, from Orange County, in the neighbourhood of the fort.

We are, respectfully, Sir, your very humble servants,

P. V. B. LIVINGSTON, EGBERT DUMOND,
ALEXANDER McDUGALL, WILLIAM ALLISON,
JACOBUS VAN ZANDT, THOMAS SMITH.
JAMES BECKMAN,

To Walter Livingston, Esq.

New-York, November 22, 1775.

Deputies chosen to represent the City and County of New-York, and the Counties of Westchester, Ulster, and Dutchess, in Provincial Congress met; and there not being a majority of the Counties represented, the gentlemen present requested one of the Secretaries of the late Provincial Congress to address a Letter to the members chosen to represent King's County, in the words following:

New-York, November 22, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: The members chosen to represent the Counties of New-York, Westchester, Ulster, and Dutchess, in Provincial Congress, have met several days past, but cannot proceed to business, for want of more members. I am therefore directed, by those met, to request of you that a sufficient number of members to represent your County do attend and take their seats as soon as possible, that the business of the great cause we are engaged in may be no longer delayed or neglected.

I am, Gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant.

The Deputies present then adjourned until ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

New-York, November 23, 1775.

Deputies chosen to represent the Counties of New-York, Albany, Dutchess, Westchester, King's, Suffolk, and Ulster, in Provincial Congress convened; but there not being a majority of the Counties represented, the gentlemen present requested Mr. Robert Benson, one of the Secretaries of the late Provincial Congress, to address a Letter to the Committee of Orange County, in the words following:

New-York, November 23, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: The Deputies chosen to represent the Counties of New-York, Albany, Dutchess, Westchester, King's, Suffolk, and Ulster, in Provincial Congress, are met; but as they are not a majority of the Counties, cannot proceed to business. I am therefore directed by the members present to write you by express, requesting that a representation of your County may be sent down to the Congress without loss of time, that the measures necessary to be carried into execution may not be delayed or neglected.

I am, Gentlemen, yours, &c., R. BENSON.

To the Chairman and Members of the Committee of Orange County.

The Deputies present then adjourned until ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

New-York, November 24, 1775.

The Deputies from several of the Counties met; but there not being a majority of the Counties represented, the gentlemen present requested Mr. Benson to draught a Letter to the Representatives of the County of Richmond, in the late Provincial Congress, in the words following, viz :

New-York, November 24, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: The Deputies from most of the Counties have met during the course of this week, and, with the addition of a few members, who are hourly expected, will undoubtedly form a Congress next Monday or Tuesday, at farthest, and proceed to business. A report prevails that the people of your County will not send members to represent them in Provincial Congress. I am directed by the members present to inform you of this, and to request that you will inform them, as soon as you possibly can, of the state of your County relative to the choice of Deputies to represent them in the ensuing Congress.

Yours, &c., R. BENSON.

To Paul Micheau, John Journey, Aaron Cortelyou, Richard Connor, and Richard Lawrence, Esquires, Richmond County.

The Deputies present then adjourned, from day to day, until Friday, the 1st day of December.

New-York, Friday, December 1, 1775.

The Deputies of the several Counties, chosen to represent the said Counties in Provincial Congress for the Colony of New-York, having met several days, but the representatives of a majority of the Counties not being present, could not proceed to business as a Congress. Wherefore, for the sake of order, and for the purpose of reading and answering several letters which have been received since the dissolution of the last Congress, and for taking such measures as may be necessary for calling such other members as are chosen and have not attended, chose Colonel Nathaniel Woodhull Chairman.

The Members present are as follows, viz :

For NEW-YORK: Colonel McDougall, Captain Rutgers, Mr. Van Zandt, Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Sands, Mr. Ray, Colonel Brasher.

For ALBANY: Major Nicoll, Colonel Rensselaer, Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Gansevoort, Mr. Bleecker.

For KING's: Mr. Covenhoven.

For DUTCHESS: Mr. Schenck, Mr. Humphreys.

For WESTCHESTER: Mr. Graham, Mr. Thomas Lockwood.

For ULSTER: Mr. Wynkoop, Mr. Cantine, Mr. Palmer.

For SUFFOLK: Colonel Woodhull, Mr. L'Homedieu, Mr. Hobart.

Agreed, That Circular Letters be wrote and transmitted by express to the Counties of Tryon, Charlotte, and Cumberland, requesting that the Deputies chosen to represent the said Counties in Provincial Congress may be sent down to attend said Congress without delay.

Agreed, That Letters similar be wrote and sent by express to Orange, King's, and Dutchess Counties.

By order of the Deputies attending, a Letter was addressed to the Committees of some of the Counties, and signed by John McKesson, their Secretary, in the words following, to wit:

New-York, December 1, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: The Deputies of New-York, Albany, Dutchess, Westchester, Ulster, and Suffolk, have attended a considerable time in New-York, and have not been able to form a Congress. They have directed me to write to you, and press the necessity that your County do immediately send Deputies to attend the Provincial Congress, so as to represent the County. The publick business has long been delayed for want of members. The gentlemen present hope that there is no occasion to represent to you the disagreeable state that this Colony must be reduced to without a Provincial Congress. On the one hand, should the reins of Government be let loose, and the mob direct matters at their pleasure, the horrors of our situation may be more easily conceived than described. And, on the other hand, should the Continental Congress find it necessary, for the publick service and for the want of a Congress, to put the Colony under military government, directed by a Major-General and an army, and that at the sole expense of this Colony, you may easily imagine what disagreeable consequences will ensue. Many gentlemen present are apprehensive that one or the other of the above events will be the consequence, if a Congress is not speedily formed, so as to proceed to business and direct.

I am, by order of the gentlemen present, most respectfully, Gentlemen, your very humble servant,

JOHN MCKESSON.

One copy whereof was addressed to the Committee of Tryon County, another copy was addressed to the Committee of Charlotte, and another copy to the Committee of Cumberland.

By order of the Deputies present, a Letter was addressed to the Committee of Orange County, in the words following, to wit:

New-York, December 1, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: We are extremely sorry to inform you that we have not yet been able to make a Congress; and as we suppose that your County have now held the election for Deputies to represent you here, we beg that you will not delay sending down your members by next Monday morning, that the publick business may no longer suffer for the want of a representation of your County; for such is the perilous state of America, and this Colony in particular, that a Convention of the Deputies is absolutely necessary with the utmost despatch. But if, after such repeated applications to your County to be in Congress by their Deputies, you continue to neglect a measure so necessary for your reputation and safety, you must not complain if the Congress determine upon matters relative to your County, in common with others, although yours should, by your inattention, be unrepresented.

To the Committee of Orange County.

Letter from Paul Micheau, one of the Deputies from Richmond County, in the late Provincial Congress, directed to Mr. Robert Benson, Secretary of the Provincial Congress, New-York:

"Richmond County, December 1, 1775.

"SIR: I received yours of the 24th ultimo last night, and expected that our Committee had acquainted the Congress, ere this, of the state of the County relative to the choosing new Deputies. When I returned from Congress, I immediately acquainted them that the Congress was dissolved, and had ordered the Committee in each County to convene the people to elect new Deputies, and desired them to advertise all such persons in the County as had a right to choose representatives in General Assembly.

"I am now to inform you that, agreeable to my request, a meeting of the Committee was called, in order to advertise, and not a majority appearing, those that did appear concluded they were not empowered to act; since which, nothing has been done.

"I should be glad the Congress would write the Committee to send their reasons for not convening the people; a list of their names you will see at bottom.

"The situation of my family is such, at present, that if the people should think proper to choose me again, I can by no means serve.

"That the present Congress may endeavour to keep tranquillity and good order in our Province, and make peace with our Mother Country, is the sincere and fervent wish of your most sincere friend and humble servant,

"PAUL MICHEAU.

"P. S. Please to communicate this to Congress.

"Committee's names: Captain John Kettletas, Captain Christian Jacobson, Captain Cornelius Dussosway, Henry Perine, David Latourelle, Esq., Peter Mersereau, John Poillon, Moses Depuy, Lambert Merrell, John Tysen, Joseph Christopher, George Barnes, and Daniel Corson."

A Letter from the Delegates of this Colony, in Continental Congress, was read, in the words following, viz:

"Philadelphia, November 3, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: On perusing our credentials, we find the continuance of our delegation unlimited. As this appears to us an omission of great importance, we think it our duty to apprise you of it, and hope that no delicacy, with respect to us, may influence you to decline a new appointment.

"We have been informed that compensation for our expenses and loss of time is under your consideration; and as we presume an account of the provision made by the other Colonies for their respective Delegates would be agreeable to you, we take the liberty of subjoining it:

"Georgia, one hundred Pounds sterling to each Delegate per month; South-Carolina, three hundred Pounds to each for the last Congress; North-Carolina, five hundred Pounds currency to each per year; Virginia, a half johanannes per day to each; Maryland, forty Shillings to each per day, besides the allowance to such of the members as come from the Counties; Connecticut, three Dollars to each per day, for the loss of time, besides all expenses—allowing each Delegate a servant and two horses; Rhode-Island, exactly the same as Connecticut; Massachusetts, all expenses as above, and two Dollars to each per day; New-Hampshire, all expenses as above, and half a Guinea per day to each.

"We are, Sir, with the greatest respect, the Congress's and your humble servants,

"JAMES DUANE,

"JOHN ALSOP,

"JOHN JAY,

"R. R. LIVINGSTON, JUN.,

WM. FLOYD,

FRANCIS LEWIS,

HENRY WISNER."

A Letter from James Duane and Robert R. Livingston, Jun., two of the Delegates of this Colony at Continental Congress, was read, in the words following, viz:

"Philadelphia, November 9, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: The Congress have taken the resolution to appoint a commander of the fortress in the Highlands, with the rank of Colonel, and Wednesday is fixed for the purpose.

"As it must be of moment that this command should be vested in a person of abilities, and in whom the inhabitants place confidence, we wish you would name three or four gentlemen who are competent for that trust, and we shall endeavour to get one of them preferred. You will, however, be pleased to observe, that as these works are erected at a Continental expense, the Congress claim an absolute right to appoint the officers.

"We have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, Gentlemen, your most obedient humble servants,

"JAMES DUANE,

"R. R. LIVINGSTON, JUN.

"Honourable Provincial Congress, at New-York."

Ordered, That the consideration thereof be referred to the Provincial Congress.

A Letter, dated at Philadelphia on the 4th of November last, and signed A, was read, in the words following, viz :

"Philadelphia, November 4, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN OF THE COMMITTEE: I sincerely sympathize with you in your distress, and fear the inhuman proceedings of those tyrants that infest America. I am afraid your valuable Town of New-York is in danger of being burned. I would therefore recommend to you to prepare fire-vessels, which, properly made use of, will defend you against your infernal enemies, and save your Town, which is valuable. I am of opinion that I am possessed of a knowledge that would be efficacious in burning such vessels as may come to do you damage; but as my situation requires me to conceal my name at present, it would not be prudent it should yet be known, as it may be attended with ill consequences to me; neither would it be prudent to risk my advice without an advantage in proportion to the service I may do. Should you, therefore, Gentlemen, conceive the above proposal to be of any importance, and deserving of an answer, be pleased to direct to A, at the London Coffee-House, to the care of Mr. Hugh James, the bar-keeper. I am, Gentlemen, your most humble servant,
A.

"To the Chairman of the Committee of Safety in New-York."

A Letter from Colonel Goose Van Schaick, dated at Albany, on the 2d November, ult., informing Congress of the death of John Keyser, Second Lieutenant in Captain Christopher Yates's Company, and recommending that Mr. Tobias Van Vechten may be appointed to supply the vacancy.

A Letter from the Hon. John Hancock was read, in the words following, viz :

"Philadelphia, November 10, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: The Congress having appointed a Committee to purchase clothing for the Army in the Northern Department, and the Committee having purchased them, I am directed to inform you that they are ordered to be sent by land to Dobbs's Ferry, where you are requested to have a boat ready to take them in, and transport them immediately to Albany. The wagons set out to-morrow morning.

"I am, Gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

"JOHN HANCOCK, President.

"To the Gentlemen of the Congress at New-York."

A Letter from Samuel Tucker, Chairman of the Committee of Trenton, was read, in the words following, viz :

"Trenton, November 10, 1775.

"SIR: Your letter of the 17th ult., concerning several resolutions of the Continental and your Provincial Congress, was delivered to me this afternoon, under a new blank cover, the handwriting of the superscription to me unknown. Our Congress adjourned on the 28th of last month to the first Tuesday in April next, unless sooner convened by the Committee of Safety.

"The Assembly of this Colony meets at Burlington on Wednesday next, at which time I shall have the opportunity of seeing several members of our Committee of Safety, to whom I shall communicate the contents of your letter. At present, the mode of forwarding all intelligence, expresses, &c., is by our Town Committees, who, on the first notice, furnish horses and proper persons from one Town to the other, which has answered very well, as far as I have heard, in times past, although I am convinced a further regulation is necessary, and horses and proper persons ought to be in readiness, kept at every stage for the purpose.

"I have only to add that I am, although unknown, your most obedient humble servant,

"SAMUEL TUCKER.

"P. S. Direct in future to me at Trenton."

A Letter from Cornelius Clopper, one of the Deputies elected to represent the City and County of New-York, and dated the 14th ultimo, informing Congress that the remoteness of his situation from Town renders it highly inconvenient for a person of his advanced life and infirm constitution to give his attendance, and hoping they will accept of his resignation, was received and filed.

A Letter from Colonel John Van Ness, dated at Rhinebeck, the 14th November, 1775, informing Congress of the place of rendezvous of his Regiment, in case of an alarm, and that Powder and Lead is much wanted, was received and filed.

A Letter from General Schuyler, advising of the reduction of St. John's, was read, in the words following, viz :

"Ticonderoga, November 7, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: I am this moment honoured with General Montgomery's despatches, advising me of the reduction of St. John's, which surrendered on the 3d instant. On this interesting event, I congratulate you with all that satisfaction which arises from a hope that it will be another step towards inducing the Ministry to hearken to the wish of America for a reconciliation, and that General Montgomery commanded, whom you recommended in such a polite manner to Congress. The difficulties he has had to surmount would be too long for a letter, at a time when I wish his success should be known the soonest possible.

"I am, Gentlemen, with great respect, your most obedient humble servant,

"PHILIP SCHUYLER.

"The New-York Provincial Congress.

"P. S. General Carleton attempted our posts at Longueil, and, although he had a considerable body, has been beat back with loss."

Ordered, That the consideration of said Letter be referred to the Provincial Congress.

Another Letter from General Schuyler was read, in the words following, viz :

"Ticonderoga, November 18, 1775.

"SIR: I have the honour to congratulate you on the success of our arms in the reduction of Montreal, which was delivered up to General Montgomery on the 13th instant. You will feel a particular satisfaction in the reflection that you recommended this brave, experienced, and sensible gentleman, to a command. May indulgent Heaven smile on our honest endeavours in every future contest, that an infatuated Ministry may see the errors they have gone into, and that peace, mutual love, and interest, may again unite Britons and Americans in the most indissoluble ties, and erect one mighty Empire, which the hand of the Great Architect of the universe only will be able to crush.

"I am, Sir, with sentiments of great respect for you and the respectable body in which you preside, your most obedient humble servant,

"PHILIP SCHUYLER.

"Peter V. B. Livingston, Esq., &c., &c."

Ordered, That the consideration thereof be referred to the Provincial Congress.

Another Letter from General Schuyler was read, in the words following, viz :

"Ticonderoga, November 20, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: As I am not advised of what money has been advanced the troops raised in this Colony, I find it impossible to pay them without the hazard of going beyond what they ought to have, especially as several of the officers do not know what they have received. You will therefore please, with all possible despatch, to transmit me an account of what has been paid by Congress, their agents or Committees, specifying the officers' names to whom, by whom, and when, and distinguishing between billeting money and pay.

"The frost is so intense that this lake is already, in many parts, covered with ice; and if it continues a few days longer, I fear our intercourse with Canada will be cut off for this year.

"I am, Gentlemen, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

"PHILIP SCHUYLER.

"To Peter V. B. Livingston, Esq."

Ordered, That the consideration of this Letter be also referred to the next Provincial Congress.

A Letter from General Washington was read, in the words following, to wit :

"Cambridge, November 16, 1775.

"SIR: It was determined at the conference held here in the last month, that such military stores as could be spared from New-York, Crown Point, Ticonderoga, &c., should be sent here, for the use of the Continental Army. As it was not clear to me whether I was to send for it, or that they were to be sent to me, I desired Mr. Reed, on his way to Philadelphia, to inquire into this matter. As I have not heard from him on that subject, and the season advancing fast, I have thought it necessary to send Henry Knox, Esq., who will deliver you this. After he forwards what he can get at your place, he will proceed to General Schuyler on this very important business. I request the favour of you, Sir, and the gentlemen of your Congress, to give Mr. Knox all the assistance in your power. By so doing you will render infinite service to your Country, and vastly oblige, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

"GEORGE WASHINGTON.

"To the President of the Provincial Congress, New-York."

A Letter from Walter Livingston, Esq., Deputy Commissary-General, in answer to the Letter of the gentlemen assembled on the 13th, was read, in the words following:

"Albany, November 22, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: I received your favour of the 13th instant, and am of opinion that fresh beef will soon be scarce, unless I purchase stall fed cattle. I shall, however, waive my own judgment, and order some to be purchased, together with some flour and pork. The Congress have resolved that Mr. Phelps is one of my deputies, and, having no business for him here, have ordered him to repair to the battery erected in the Highlands, with all convenient speed. Mr. Egbert Dumond has applied to me to purchase some flour, to whom be pleased to deliver the enclosed. I wish you much joy with the surrender of Montreal.

"I am, Gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

"WALTER LIVINGSTON, Dep'y Com. Gen.

"To General McDougall and the other Gentlemen."

A Letter from Governour Trumbull, as to the proposed plan of communicating intelligence, was read and filed, in the words following, viz:

"Lebanon, November 23, 1775.

"SIR: Your letter of October 17th last, enclosing copy of the minutes of Congress directing concerning the manner of conveying intelligence, in case of invasion, and receiving assistance when necessary, and a plan for that purpose, for our consideration, was not received till the 10th instant, and this day is the first opportunity I have to lay it before the Council of Safety. Your plan is approved, and I am desired by them to write to and employ proper persons in the western Towns to procure persons, to be in readiness at a minute's warning, to carry any intelligence of alarm or invasion to the Towns where occasion may require. I have accordingly written to Abraham Davenport, of Stamford, and Thaddeus Burr, of Fairfield, Esquires, to make the necessary provisions.

"I am, most respectfully, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

"JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

"Honourable President Woodhull."

A Letter from Robert Livingston, Junior, in answer to a Letter of the 20th of October last, on the subject of Gunpowder, was read and filed, in the words following, viz:

"Manor of Livingston, November 4, 1775.

"SIR: I have received your favour of the 20th of last month. I now send down the receipts from Mr. Walter Livingston for the one thousand and twenty pounds of powder, by my son, John Livingston, as I have made no account of it, and don't know what the Philadelphia manufacturers take for manufacturing. I suppose that you have been informed that this powder was sent to me in as bad a state as well could be imagined; the casks, some of them, having nearly as much water as powder in them, besides nails and other things in it, which made the working it somewhat dangerous. As Mr. Livingston told me he had no orders to pay for it, I desire you would inform my son who is to pay for it. If there is any person appointed at New-York, I desire you would direct him where he must apply. I shall leave the settlement of the price to you. I have not got the receipt for the two hundred pounds sent by your order to the Committee of Albany. I had given an order to Dr. Van Dyck, with whom I sent a part of it, to receive the money; but the Committee informed him they had no cash in hand at present. As I suppose they will, according to your first order, pay no more than twenty Pounds per hundred weight, I should be obliged to you if you would inform my son who is to pay the other five Pounds and the bounty. Whether the bounty will be allowed on the re-manufactured powder I know not; but if it is not, I believe you will consider it in the allowance, as the bounty ought to have been earned in nearly the same time the manufacturer was employed in this business.

"I remain, with great respect, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

"ROB'T LIVINGSTON, JUN.

"To Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq., President of the Congress, New-York."

A Letter from the Hon. John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress, was received and read, in the words following, viz:

"Philadelphia, November 27, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: I am directed by Congress to write to you, and request you to use your utmost endeavours to furnish the troops raised in New-Jersey, for the defence of New-York, with as many fire-arms as your Colony can conveniently spare, and that you will please to send them to Lord Stirling, who commands the forces in the Jersys.

"I am, Gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

"JOHN HANCOCK, President.

"To the Members of the Convention of New-York."

A Letter from James Duane, one of the Delegates of this Colony in Continental Congress, was received and read, in the words following, viz:

"Philadelphia, November 28, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: I have the honour of transmitting to you the enclosed resolutions of the Congress, in obedience to their order.

"Our letter on the subject of the fortress on Hudson's River remains unanswered. It is of so much importance that our Colony should be satisfied of the fidelity and abilities of the officer to whom this command is intrusted, that we wait impatiently for your recommendation, flattering ourselves that it will have its full weight.

"We have procured an order in your favour, for fifty thousand Dollars, agreeable to the request of the late Congress; and as soon as the bills are signed, which has been unaccountably protracted by the gentlemen who undertook this business, the money will be forwarded.

"I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, Gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

"JAMES DUANE.

"Honourable Convention of New-York."

"P. S. The resolution referred to in the enclosed extracts is in the press, and will speedily be published, among other acts of Congress. Five hundred weight of powder is now forwarded; it was borrowed from Pennsylvania, by the Congress, with difficulty."

The Resolves of the Continental Congress, on the subject of manufacturing Firelocks, Saltpetre, and punishing persons harbouring Deserters, enclosed in Mr. Duane's Letter, were read and filed.

Ordered, That Mr. Duane's Letter, together with the Resolves of Congress therein enclosed, be deferred for the consideration of the Provincial Congress.

A Letter from Samuel Bayard, William Bedlow, Thomas Grenell, and Jonathan Lawrence, Commissioners at the Fortifications in the Highlands, dated the 11th ultimo, explaining the progress they had made in the said works, and requesting directions, was read and filed.

Ordered, That the consideration thereof be referred to the Provincial Congress.

A Letter from Silas Marsh, Chairman of Amenia Precinct, in Dutchess County, dated the 25th of October last, enclosing an Association signed by Josiah Morse and Andrew L. Harvey, Jun., and informing that they are true friends, and desired to be entered among the faithful, was read and filed.

A Return, signed by Charles Clinton, Chairman of Hanover Precinct, in Orange County, and dated the 3d ult., whereby it appears that, at an election of officers for a Company of Minute-Men, in the said Precinct, Peter Hill was elected Captain; James Salter, First Lieutenant; Nathaniel Milligan, Second Lieutenant; and William Gudgeon, Ensign, was read and filed.

A Letter from Egbert Benson, Chairman of the Committee of Dutchess County, dated the 7th ultimo, informing that, pursuant to an order from the Continental Congress, Colonel Grant has been apprehended, and other particulars respecting said Grant, was read and filed, and is as follows, viz:

"Poughkeepsie, November 7, 1775.

"SIR: I am directed by the Committee to inform you, that, in consequence of the order of the Continental Congress, Colonel Grant has been apprehended, and is now at this place, in custody of Captain Schenck.

"Although nothing has been referred to us respecting Mr. Grant, yet we thought it our duty to apprize the Congress of the following transaction, as it may possibly influence the measures they mean to take with him.

"Some months ago, Mr. Grant was taken by a party of the Continental forces, under the command of Captain Rossitmaus. At this time, no kind of evidence appeared against him; yet he having then lately been to Boston, and intimating that he had it in contemplation to go there again, and not answering us satisfactorily whether, he being upon half pay, if a Regiment should be completed, and ordered out against the Colonies, and he should be ordered to join such Regiment, he would obey the order, we conceived it prudent to lay him under an injunction not to depart the Colony without leave of the Congress or this Committee, and passed a resolution for that purpose. He requested time to consider of the propriety of his entering into such engagements, which was readily granted him, upon his promising that, in the interim, he would not leave the Colony; so that Mr. Grant, in effect, has engaged to us, upon his honour, not to leave the Colony during the present controversy, until he has again appeared before the Committee, and given his positive answer, whether he will comply with the above requisition.

"Since that time, no complaints have been made; neither has any evidence appeared to us against Mr. Grant. In justice to him, we must also inform you that he assured us his business to Boston was entirely of a private nature, in order to complete the purchase of some lands; and that, at that time, he knew of no other kind of business which would call him there again.

"I remain, by order of the Committee, your very humble servant,

"EGBERT BENSON, Chairman.

"To Gilbert Livingston, Esq., or either of the Gentlemen attending as Deputies from the County of Dutchess, at the Provincial Congress, New-York.

"P. S. As we have no fund appropriated to that purpose, we expect the express will be paid in New-York."

A Letter from Tobias Stoutenbergh, dated 8th ultimo, informing Congress that his age and infirmity will not admit of his accepting the command of a Regiment, was read and filed, and is as follows, viz:

"November 8, 1775.

"SIR: I received the directions of Congress, dated October 8th, from which I infer that I am in appointment for the command of a Regiment. There is nothing would be more satisfactory to me than to have ability of body sufficient to be active in the defence of the liberties of my Country. Age and other infirmities of the body render me incapable of enjoying the above pleasing privilege. Consequently I must, in regard to the good cause we are embarked in, beg leave to be excused; and please to appoint some other hearty friend to the command, as I should look upon myself wanting in duty to my Country, to accept an office in which I was not capable to act, if necessity required.

"I am, Sir, with esteem, your and America's friend and humble servant,

"TOBIAS STOUTENBERGH.

"To Nathaniel Woodhull, President of the Provincial Congress, in New-York."

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. III.

A Return, signed by Matthew Carpenter, Chairman, and Joseph Morey, Clerk, certifying that, at a meeting of the Committee of New-Marlborough Precinct, in Ulster County, on the 18th November last, the following gentlemen were elected officers of a Company of Minute-Men in said Precinct, to wit: Silas Purdy, Captain; Wolvert Ackert, First Lieutenant; Zophar Perkins, Second Lieutenant; and Leonard Smith, Jun., Ensign, was read and filed.

A Letter from Thomas Outwater, Chairman of Orange Precinct, in Orange County, mentioning a mistake in the election of Delegates, and requesting directions thereupon, was read and filed, and is as follows, viz:

"Orangetown, November 9, 1775.

"SIR: As the time appointed by Congress is expired, for electing Deputies to meet in future Congress in New-York, the 14th day instant, by reason of some misapprehension, and the situation of our County and inclemency of the weather, we must apply to Congress for an amendment to the resolve for the County of Orange, and that a farther day might be fixed, with the addition that the six members may be elected in each Precinct in the County of Orange, which were by said resolve directed to be elected at the usual place for electing members to represent in General Assembly, under the inspection of the County Committee, or such a part as they shall direct.

"From your humble servant,

"THOMAS OUTWATER, Chairman.

"To Mr. Benson, Secretary to the Provincial Congress, in New-York."

A bill of sale of the Pilot-Boat Hampden, made and executed by Francis James and William Mussel, to Jacobus Van Zandt, and bearing date the 21st November last, was filed.

The Delegates then adjourned until ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

Saturday, December 2, 1775.

Present: Nathaniel Woodhull, Chairman, and Delegates from the Counties of New-York, Albany, Dutchess, Ulster, Westchester, Suffolk, and King's.

Ordered, That a Letter be addressed to the Committee of Richmond County, in the words following:

New-York, December 2, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: A quorum of the Deputies from the Counties of New-York, Albany, Dutchess, Ulster, Suffolk, and Westchester, have met every day for a fortnight past, without being able to do any of the publick business, for want of a representation of other of the Counties. Orange County, by a mistake in their election, have been obliged to hold a new election, which has delayed the attendance of their members; but they are daily expected, as are also those of the northern Counties.

I am directed by the members present to request you to cause an election to be held, without delay, for Deputies to represent your County in Provincial Congress, and that as many of them as your people please to direct to form a quorum be sent as soon as possible.

The evil consequences that will attend the not having the Provincial Congress, to determine on the measures necessary to be adopted and carried into execution at this unhappy crisis, are more easily conceived than expressed; and rest assured, gentlemen, that the neighbouring Colonies will not remain inactive spectators, if you show a disposition to depart from the Continental union.

Confusion and disorder, with numberless other evils, you must suppose will attend the want of a Congress, for the government of this Colony, until a reconciliation with the Mother Country can be obtained.

We beg, gentlemen, you will consider this matter with that seriousness which the peace, good order, and liberties of your Country require.

To John Poillon, John Tysen, and Lambert Merrell, of the Committee for Richmond County.

A Letter from Theodorus Van Wyck, one of the Delegates elected to represent the City and County of New-York, excusing his non-attendance, was read, as follows, viz:

"New-York, December 2, 1775.

"SIR: I have the honour to be elected a member of this Congress, but am sorry the publick did not duly consider my infirmity in respect of my hearing, which renders me a very unfit person to discharge that important trust, as I am not able to distinguish or understand any arguments or debate, (unless the speakers are very near me,) which always gives me extreme pain and uneasiness. I humbly beg, therefore, in case of my non-attendance, that the gentlemen of the Congress will not impute it to any unwillingness in me to serve; for I can assure them that I am a friend to the rights and liberties of my Country, and will cheerfully bear my part of the burden, to preserve them inviolate, in any thing that I am capable of, or properly qualified for.

"I have the honour to be, Sir, your and their humble servant,

"THEODORUS VAN WYCK.

"To Colonel Woodhull, President of the New-York Provincial Congress."

A Letter from William Miller, Chairman pro tem. of the Committee of White-Plains, dated 22d November last, stating the inimical conduct of Jeremiah Travis and Jeremiah Travis, Jun., in opposing the measures of Congress, and requesting instructions thereon, was read and filed, and is as follows, viz:

"White-Plains, November 22, 1775.

"SIR: Jeremiah Travis, Junior, and Jeremiah Travis have been brought before the Committee of Westchester County. The former was charged with warning a number of people to appear at Peekskill, and with appearing and embodying in arms to oppose the Congress and Committee. The latter was charged with instigating a number of people to oppose the measures of the Congress and Committee, and being the means of embodying a number of men in arms at Peekskill, (himself with them,) on the 6th instant, to rescue some persons that were taken before the Sub-Committee of Cortlandt's Manor. Thirteen of the Committee being sworn to try each of the charges, the Committee found the Traverses severally guilty. But few of the people who collected at Peekskill had fire-arms, the most being armed with clubs, (which the Committee suppose to be a method taken by Jeremiah Travis to evade the resolutions of the Congress.) This occasions a doubt in some of the Committee, whether the Traverses come within the meaning of the fourth clause of the resolves of the Provincial Congress of the 1st of September last past, respecting taking up arms; which doubt we should be glad to have solved by the honourable Provincial Congress as soon as is convenient. If the Congress is of opinion that their cases do come within the meaning of the clause above mentioned, we pray that a punishment adequate to their offence may be speedily inflicted on them, as they are both now in custody. Meanwhile, pray an answer may be sent as speedy as convenient.

"I am, Sir, your most humble servant,

"By order of the Committee:

"WM. MILLER, Chairman pro tem.

"To the Hon. the President of the Provincial Congress."

A Letter from Henry Remsen, dated November 22, 1775, to the Committee of the City of New-York, respecting Saltpetre purchased by the desire of the Provin-

"Lebanon, November 4, 1775.

"SIRS: I am desired to write to you, in favour of the Town of New-Haven, for the loan of cannon, for the use of the Town, in the dangerous situation it is in from the Ministerial ships, if they can be spared. Enclosed is a copy of the minutes of the vote passed here. Your compliance will oblige that Town, and be gratefully acknowledged by this Colony.

"I am, with esteem and regard, Gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

"JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

"To the Hon. Committee of Safety at New-York."

"New-Haven, November 10, 1775.

"SIR: The Committee appointed by the Town of New-Haven, in pursuance of a recommendation from the Governour and Council of Safety to put this place in a proper posture of defence, now apply to you and your honourable Committee of Safety for the loan of eighteen pieces of heavy cannon, for the defence of this Town. The enclosed letter, from his Honour Governour Trumbull, will assure you that the cannon, if lent to us, will be at the risk of this Colony, which we hope will remove every objection to granting our request, provided such a measure is consistent with your own safety.

"We request the favour of an early determination and answer; and if the gentlemen of the Committee are pleased to grant our request, it will be doing an essential service to the Town of New-Haven, and will be most gratefully acknowledged. If we have your consent, we will, on receipt of your letter expressing that consent, give the necessary orders for their removal to this place, without giving you any further trouble, and shall ever esteem ourselves, and the Town we represent, under lasting obligations to you for this friendly assistance, in this time of our danger; and are, with great respect and regard, your most obedient and most humble servants.

"Signed by order and in behalf of the Committee:

"Henry Remsen, Esq."

"ADAM BABCOCK.

A Letter from John Dennis, Chairman of the Committee of New-Brunswick, was read and filed, in the words following, to wit:

"City of New-Brunswick, November 28, 1775.

"SIR: By your orders, received per Mr. Abraham Clark, I sent you six quarter-casks of powder, which is all I could collect. The persons I had it from are impatient, and beg the powder may be returned, as our inhabitants are destitute of that article.

"Your assistance will be duly acknowledged by your obedient humble servant,

"JOHN DENNIS.

The House adjourned to ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

Friday, October 20, 1775.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

A Petition from the Committee of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia was presented to the House and read, setting forth that the honourable the Continental Congress has recommended to the inhabitants of all the United English Colonies in North-America, that all able-bodied, effective men, between sixteen and fifty years of age, immediately form themselves into regular Companies of Militia, &c.; and that although a considerable number of the free-men of this Province had, before the said recommendation, associated for the purpose of defence against all invaders, yet the said recommendation has not been fully complied with, and, in our opinion, it is become absolutely necessary that general regulations should be made to take place throughout the Province. That this honourable House being the body from whom the people most earnestly wish to receive the regulations which are become so indispensably necessary, the petitioners do most earnestly pray that this honourable House will recommend to the inhabitants of this Province such military regulations as, in their wisdom, they shall think will carry the said recommendation of the honourable Continental Congress effectually into execution. That the petitioners, being sensible "there are some people, who, from religious principles, cannot bear arms in any case," wish not to do "violence to their consciences;" but, as by the exertions of the Associators, the liberty, property, and lives of those people will be equally defended with their own, (without any danger to the lives, liberty, or property of the said people,) the petitioners further pray that the terms of exemption may be adequate to the dangers, loss of time, and expense incurred to those who shall associate under the proposed regulations.

Ordered to lie on the table.

The Committee appointed to report to the House a state of the several grants made by this Province to the Crown, from the year 1755 to the year 1764, and the sum remaining to be raised to complete the said grants, presented to the Chair a Report thereon, in writing, which was read by order.

The House adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

A motion was made and seconded for appointing a Committee to prepare and bring in a bill for preventing tumults and riotous assemblies, &c.; and, after some debate thereon, was postponed for further consideration.

The House adjourned to ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

Saturday, October 21, 1775.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

A Petition from the Committee of the Privates of the Association of the City of Philadelphia and its Districts was presented to the House and read, setting forth that the Petitioners have lived to see the unhappy time when the liberties of America must be finally lost, unless preserved by arming the inhabitants thereof in their defence. That the strength and power of the enemy, and the determined spirit with which the war is likely to be prosecuted, render the utmost efforts of this, as well as of the rest of the United English Colonies, absolutely necessary. That the Petitioners do therefore humbly pray the honourable House, in their wisdom, to recommend to their constituents some general plan of a militia law, which shall equally extend to all the good people of this Province; and that any indulgence which may be thought necessary to be granted by the House, to any freeman of the Province, may be equally open to all, and granted on such terms as the House may think adequate to the many difficult and dangerous services of those who are willing to hazard their lives and fortunes in defence of their Country; that this, the Petitioners are persuaded, would give such general satisfaction to those who have already associated, that they would cheerfully exert their utmost abilities in the service of their Country.

Ordered to lie on the table.

The House adjourned to Monday next, at four o'clock, P. M.

The House adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

The House resumed the consideration of the several Petitions and applications, presented in the forenoon, for Captains' commissions in the new Battalion; and, after some time spent therein,

Resolved, That William Allen, Jun., Jonathan Jones, William Williams, Josiah Harman, Marien Lamar, Thomas Dorsey, William Jenkins, and Augustine Willet, be, and they are hereby appointed Captains in the said Battalion, and recommended to the honourable Continental Congress for commissions accordingly.

A Memorial from the Committee chosen by the Freeholders of the Counties of Northumberland and Northampton, to solicit assistance, and devise means for keeping the peace of the said Counties, and defending them against the Connecticut intruders, was presented to the House, read, and is as follows, viz:

"To the Honourable the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met.

"The Memorial of the Subscribers, being a Committee chosen by the Freeholders of the Counties of NORTHUMBERLAND and NORTHAMPTON, to solicit assistance, and devise means for keeping the peace of the said Counties, and defending them against the CONNECTICUT intruders, sheweth:

"That the late House of Assembly, taking into consideration 'the intrusion of a number of people into this Province, under a pretended claim of the Colony of Connecticut, to the great annoyance of the good people of this Province, did specially direct their Delegates to lay the same before the Congress, with the mischievous tendency the pursuing such measures will have, and to procure the aid of Congress to quiet the minds of the good people of this Province, and prevent further intrusions and extension of settlements under the said claim, until the matter shall be determined by the King in Council, to whom both sides have submitted the dispute.'

"That the honourable Congress were pleased to appoint five of their body as a Committee to hear the parties, and to devise some effectual means for answering the aforesaid purposes; and the said Committee, being attended by your Memorialists on the part of the freeholders of the Counties of Northumberland and Northampton, and by the Connecticut Delegates in behalf of the claimants and intruders from that Colony, did condescend, with great patience and candour, to hear what was offered on each side, declaring, that as it was not the intention of the Congress to take upon them the decision of any matters touching the merits of the controversy, it would be sufficient for the parties to confine themselves to such points only as might enable the said Committee to answer the purposes of their appointment, namely, to 'devise some way by which the recommendation and authority of Congress may be reasonably interposed for keeping the peace till a decision of this matter, agreeable to the aforesaid request of Assembly.'

"Wherefore, waiving the principal arguments touching the merits of the controversy, and particularly the settlement of the western bounds of Connecticut, under a royal commission in 1664, then solemnly assented to and accepted by themselves, and, since that, adjudged absolute and final in several instances, (as we doubt not it will in the present,) we say, waiving these points, your memorialists insisted on the following, viz:

"That, were it even possible for the Connecticut claim to derive the least support from the charter, they have prosecuted it in an unwarrantable and riotous manner, holding their present possessions only by forcible entry and unjust depredations upon the property of the good people of this Province.

"That, near fifty years ago, all that part of Delaware which they now claim, from forty-one degrees upwards, was settled by Pennsylvania as far as then purchased from the Indians; and the settlements still extended farther, as new purchases were made, without any claim made known or interruption offered on the part of Connecticut.

"That their claim is a novel thing, or at least was not heard of among Pennsylvanians till a little before the Indian treaty and Congress at Albany, in 1754, and was hardly considered by any body as a serious thing, till at that treaty it was made known that they were privately dealing with the Indians, by twos and threes at a time, at the house of one Lydius, for some lands on Susquehannah.

"That the deed (if any) signed by the Indians at that time, was not obtained, as usual, from their chiefs in public council or treaty, but privately, and through the persuasion of the said Lydius; and also contrary to the laws of Connecticut itself, which prohibits all purchases from the Indians without leave of their General Court.

"That if the said pretended deed was not void on the foregoing account, it is absolutely so for the following reasons:

"First. Because, at a solemn treaty held between the Governour of Pennsylvania and the Indians, October the 25th, 1736, in a deed for the lands from the mouth of Susquehannah up to the mountains, the Indians made a further covenant and declaration of trust, in the words following: 'That neither they, nor any in authority in their nations, would at any time bargain, sell, grant, or by any means make over to any person or persons whatsoever, whether white men or Indians, other than the proprietors of Pennsylvania, children of William Penn, or to persons by them authorized and appointed to agree for and receive the same, any lands within the limits of Pennsylvania, as it is bounded northward by New-York; but when we are willing to dispose of any further rights to lands within the said limits of Pennsylvania, we will dispose of them to the said William Penn's children, and no other.' And the consideration mentioned by the Indians, as inducing them to make this deed and declaration, was the upright conduct of William Penn, who, although he had, in the year 1696, purchased the Susquehannah lands, within the northern part of his charter, from Governour Dungan, who had purchased them for him (the said William Penn) in 1683, yet was willing to pay the Indians over again, as he had occasion to settle them.

"That on the 6th day of July, 1754, in a publick council at Albany, Colonel Johnson and the Commissioners or Delegates of all the neighbouring Provinces being present, the Indians gave a deed to the proprietors of Pennsylvania for another parcel of the Susquehannah lands, from the Mountains nearly up to the Forks, including also a great part of the lands on Delaware, now claimed by Connecti- cut, but declared they would not yet sell the Shamokin and Wyoming lands, but reserve them for their hunting grounds; and appointed John Shicklamy, a noted chief, to live on them, and prevent any settlements of white people.

"But it being then suggested to the Indians that some private persons were endeavouring to obtain deeds from some of their people for part of these lands, and the aforesaid deed of 1763 being shown to them, by which they declare that they held the said lands in trust, to be disposed of only to the children of William Penn, they did accordingly (the 9th day of July, 1754) sign and execute an endorsement on the back of the deed of 1736, 'for themselves, their children, and children's children, confirming, ratifying, and holding good the same, covenanting, promising, and engaging, to and with Thomas and Richard Penn, Esquires, that neither they nor any under their authority should sell, grant, or convey to any other than the said Thomas Penn and Richard Penn, their heirs and assigns, any lands within the limits of their Province,' &c.

"That on the 9th day of the said month of July, 1754, the Commissioners of the Colonies met in Congress, drew up a state to be laid before His Majesty, and, as if foreseeing the evil consequences that would ensue from private purchases of lands from the Indians, and the exorbitant and unwieldy claims of some Northern Colonies, under their charters, agreed to the following articles, viz:

"First. That all future purchases of lands from the Indians be void, unless made by the Government where such lands lie, and from the Indians in a body, in their publick councils.

"Second. That the bounds of those Colonies which extend to the South Sea be contracted and limited by the Alleghany or Appalachian Mountains, and measures be taken for settling, from time to time, Colonies of His Majesty's Protestant subjects westward of said mountains, in proper cantons."

"That the pretended Indian deed, to some persons in Connecticut, being posterior to all this, and dated July 11, 1754, must, in every sense and view, be fraudulent and void. It must be void, because the Indians could not convey that on July 11, to any other persons; which they had twice before declared they held in trust, to be conveyed only to the proprietaries of Pennsylvania. It is fraudulent, not only as being obtained privately, contrary to a resolution of the Colonies in Congress, made two days before, with the assent of Commissioners from Connecticut itself, but also as extending beyond the mountains, which they had agreed should limit all Colonies claiming to the South Sea.

"That the Connecticut claimants, no doubt, conscious of the weight of these reasons, did not pretend to make any settlement under their own charter, or the said pretended Indian purchase, but thought proper to petition His Majesty 'that it might be his royal pleasure not to extend the old Colony, but to grant them the said lands to erect and settle thereon a new Colony, in such form and under such regulations as might be consistent with his royal wisdom.'

"That failing in this application, (as it might be justly expected His Majesty would not grant those lands a second time, which were before granted to William Penn.) they recurred to their pretended Indian purchase, and set up their charter claim, but never durst settle any of the lands in their own right, till they were first purchased by the proprietaries of Pennsylvania, in November, 1768, at which time the Indians, in publick council, solemnly denied ever having made any sale of the lands in question to the people of Connecticut, as the Six Nations had before disclaimed the same, by the Sachem Hendrick and other chiefs sent to Philadelphia for that purpose in January, 1755.

"That the Connecticut claimants were not only thus prevented by the Indians from settling under their own pretended purchase, and obliged to wait till they could come in under the purchase of Pennsylvania, but even now dare not settle one foot of their said purchase; which reaches over or beyond the Pennsylvania purchase; and that, upon the whole, they had intruded themselves into this Province without any shadow of right, and hold their present possessions by forcible entry and invasions of the property of persons holding under this Province. In proof of which, your memorialists produced numbers of affidavits and other vouchers, setting forth their first intrusion and attempt to dispossess Mr. Ogden and other settlers of Wyoming; in February, 1769; their being twice taken by the Sheriff of Northampton, and defeated in their designs; their escapes from prison and bail; breach of their faith; returning again to the lands, and taking to their assistance fugitives from the justice of this Province, till at length they succeeded in their present lodgement at the said Wyoming, a place within the undoubted charter limits of this Province, and to which its laws and jurisdiction were actually extended by our Legislature, long before any act of the Colony of Connecticut for that purpose.

"That the peace of the Province has for several years past been constantly interrupted by these intruders, and endeavouring to extend their settlements, and to draw off our inhabitants to their party by every undue means in their power; tempting some of the lowest of them with offers of commissions, civil and military; and others, particularly those who hold as tenants, to become landlords themselves, by offers of the lands on easier terms than those of Pennsylvania.

"That their late attempt to extend themselves westward at least fifty miles from Wyoming, to the west branch of Susquehannah, was attended with the most provoking circumstances of treachery, as well as want of sympathy for the distresses of their Country, or regard for publick union. Because, in May last, after actual hostilities had commenced between Great Britain and the Colonies, the Assembly of Connecticut made a new law, extending their jurisdiction to the said west branch of Susquehannah, and thereby exciting their people to make further intrusions upon us, which was most ungenerously attempted by them, in an hostile manner, the latter end of September last, in open disregard of the injunctions of the Continental Congress, at a time when they thought our people were least expecting them, and least prepared to receive them; many of the best men of the County being absent in the publick service, as riflemen.

"That upon this state of the matter, and in the present temper of the frontier inhabitants of this Province, whose minds are so justly inflamed against those intruders, as a set of men who have made repeated attacks on their property, and to whose future engagements no faith can be due, your memorialists took the liberty to suggest to the worthy Committee of Congress their apprehensions that the said frontier inhabitants, now considering themselves under the necessity of repelling force by force, can be no way quieted, or the publick peace preserved, 'but by those Connecticut people yielding up the lands of which they have taken forcible possession, and retiring within their old bounds east of New-York, there patiently to wait the decision of the controversy by that authority to which both sides have submitted, and which may soon be expected.'

"The reply made to these arguments appeared to us too evasive and inconclusive to trouble your honourable House with a recital of them. Upon the whole, instead of acquiescing in our proposal to withdraw these intruders, the Connecticut Delegates gave in the following written proposal, calculated, under the sanction of the Congress, if it could be had, to obtain for their people a still stronger establishment in a tract of land almost as large as all Connecticut; thereby delivering them the quiet possession and use of lands, honestly purchased and paid for, to an immense value, by multitudes of good people belonging to all parts of our Province.

"Form of a Resolution of Congress proposed by the CONNECTICUT Delegates.

"Whereas it is represented to this Congress, that some disturbances have lately happened among the people inhabiting the lands in controversy between the Colony of Connecticut and the proprietors of the Colony of Pennsylvania, which, unless speedily quieted, may interrupt the harmony and weaken the union of the confederated Colonies, when their united efforts are necessary for the defence of their common rights and liberties; and that the peace of said inhabitants cannot be preserved, nor offenders duly punished there, by the civil authority of the Colonies of Connecticut and Pennsylvania, or either of them, by reason of their interfering claims of jurisdiction; and the Assembly of the Colony of Pennsylvania and the Delegates of the Colony of Connecticut have requested the interposition and advice of the Congress in the premises:

"Resolved, That, in the opinion of the Congress, it is expedient, for preserving the peace of said Colonies, that a temporary line of jurisdiction be fixed between them; and therefore recommend for the present, and until there shall be a legal settlement of said controversy, or some other regulation established, that the Colony of Connecticut confine the exercise of its jurisdiction (at the place in controversy) to that part of a Township incorporated by the Assembly of that Colony by the name of Westmorland, that lieth east of a meridian line beginning at latitude forty-one degrees north, at the distance of fifteen English miles west from the east branch of Susquehannah River, and from thence running north to the north line of the lands in controversy; and that the Colony of Pennsylvania forbear to exercise jurisdiction within those limits, unless the south limit of said Town include any of the inhabitants who settled and hold under the claim of the proprietors of Pennsylvania; that then those inhabitants remain under the jurisdiction of Pennsylvania, and that all the inhabitants on said controverted lands be suffered peaceably to occupy the lands now in their actual possession.

"Provided, nevertheless, That nothing contained in this temporary provision shall any way affect or prejudice the legal title or claim of either party to any of the said lands. And it is further recommended, that all persons who have been arrested only for attempting to enter upon and take possession of any of the vacant or uncultivated lands in controversy, be forthwith released, and that all their effects be restored to them. And that, for the future, all concerned carefully avoid whatever may tend to disturb the peace or interrupt the harmony and friendship that ought at all times, and more especially the present, to subsist among all true lovers of their Country.'

"On the foregoing proposal it was observed, first, by your memorialists, that the bounds pointed out would extend the jurisdiction of Connecticut not only over the Wyoming lands, and fifteen miles west of Susquehannah, but also eastward to Delaware, over the Minisink and other lands settled and governed under Pennsylvania for fifty years past. They further observed an affected obscurity, and the use of ambiguous words in the proposal, where it ought to have been explicit and clear: as, for example, a temporary line of jurisdiction is proposed, 'until there shall be a legal settlement of the controversy.' But when they were asked what they meant by a legal settlement, and whether the expected determination by the King in Council would be acquiesced in by them as such, no decisive reply was obtained, but rather a suggestion that they would not consider such determination as final in their case. The like ambiguity was observed with respect to the words, 'actual possession,' they affecting to consider all lands on which no persons live, as vacant and free for their people to sit down upon; and we considering all lands for which we have paid, and which have been surveyed off to us, as our actual possession, which no man has a right to enter upon without our leave, whether we occupy them or not. And as to a temporary line of jurisdiction, your memorialists declared it to be a matter which they could neither consent to nor have any concern in advising, for the following reasons:

"First. Because the Legislature of this Province did extend its jurisdiction over the whole lands in controversy long before the Colony of Connecticut made any act for the like purpose, and therefore that jurisdiction can neither be suspended or limited, but by the Legislature of this Province itself, or by the general consent of those interested.

"Secondly. Because such general consent can never be expected. For wherever such temporary line may be fixed, it must give dissatisfaction to multitudes, and sacrifice (at least for a time) the property of one part of the Country for the peace or convenience of the other.

"Thirdly. Because application being heretofore made, on the part of Connecticut, to the honourable proprietaries of Pennsylvania, for such temporary line, they refused to consent to the same, considering that it would be injurious to their cause, and an admission that the lines of Connecticut, settled more than an hundred years ago east of New-York, could now extend west of the same, and approach those of Pennsylvania.

"Fourthly. Because it seems evidently intended, by the proposing such temporary lines, to give those Connecticut intruders an opportunity of introducing still greater numbers of their people, and rendering themselves so strong as to be able to dispute the possession, whatever may be determined respecting the merits of the controversy. And that, on the whole, a temporary line, being involved in such difficulty, affecting not only the rights and estate of the honourable proprietaries of this Province, but of multitudes within it, and which, however determined, must ruin and give dissatisfaction to many, your memorialists could not but think it a matter in which it would be wrong even to wish the interposition of Congress, all whose recommendations should be received with reverence, and without murmuring; and that, therefore, some other mode should be agreed upon, in order to be strengthened by the recommendation of Congress: Either, First, That those intruders who have so justly alarmed their neighbours should withdraw, as originally proposed to the Committee of Congress by your memorialists; or, Secondly, That a plan should be devised for preventing their further extension of settlements, the introducing any more of their people, or any way molesting the inhabitants of this Province in their persons or property, till a determination of the controversy by the King in Council, with some proper security that they will abide by that determination, and in the mean time submit to the laws of Pennsylvania. But, on a matter of so great weight and concern to the Province in general, we declare, further, that we wished to take the advice of your honourable House.

"Being therefore convinced that any accommodation by means of a temporary line is an idea never entertained by the late or present House, we pray you would take the premises under your wise consideration, and advise us whether the peace of this Province can be best preserved by the first or second of the above propositions, or whether any other plan might be more agreeable to you; and as the settlement as well as execution of any plan of this kind may be attended with difficulties and delays, of which these intruders may wish to take advantage as usual, we further pray that the inhabitants of the said two Counties of Northumberland and Northampton may in the mean time be duly strengthened and supported, for the defence of their property against all such invasions and insidious attempts as that lately made upon them; and your memorialists shall pray, &c.

" October 25, 1775."

The House adjourned to ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

Thursday, October 26, 1775.

The House met pursuant to adjournment; and, upon motion, resumed the consideration of the Memorial from the Committee chosen by the Counties of Northumberland and Northampton, to solicit assistance, and devise means for keeping the peace of the said Counties, and defending them against the Connecticut intruders; and, after some time spent therein,

Ordered, That Mr. Dickinson, Mr. Morris, Mr. Rodman, Mr. Bartholomew, Mr. Ross, Mr. Ewing, Mr. Montgomery, Mr. Chreist, Mr. Taylor, and Mr. Dougherty, be a Committee to consider the contents of the said Memorial, and report thereon to the House.

A Memorial and Remonstrance from the Committee of Chester County was presented to the House and read, setting forth, that the Memorialists, animated with a fervent desire of conveying to their posterity, unsullied and inviolate, those inestimable privileges which their ancestors hardly earned with much loss of blood and treasure, and being fully sensible that a regular system has long since been formed by an infatuated Ministry, and now carrying into execution, to deprive us of those privileges, and subjugate this devoted Country, beg leave to represent to the honourable House the present weak and defenceless situation of this Country; that the House are too well acquainted with the inconveniences under which the Memorialists labour, to require a minute detail of them; let it suffice, the County of Chester is, in the present unnatural contest, the frontier County in this Province on the River Delaware, and consequently subject to the attacks of armed vessels, parties of Marines, &c., who may easily carry off our live stock to support the Ministerial Troops, effect the destruction of the Borough of Chester, (and thereby the destruction of all our public records) Marcus Hook, and every other building or improvement on the river below the chevaux-de-frise; that, pursuant to a resolve of the honourable House, of the 30th of June, five hundred stand of arms, and the other necessary accoutrements, are at this time nearly completed for the use of the Minute-men, who hold themselves in readiness to enter upon their necessary service as soon as the House will grant them that encouragement which they are naturally led to expect, and without which it is conceived they can never be obtained; that the Memorialists beg leave to acquaint the House that there are five Battalions in the said County, each of which has agreed to furnish one hundred men, which will complete the number of Minute-men required, who, having their all within the said County, and surrounded by the tenderest connexions, will naturally exert their utmost vigour in its defence, which in effect will be a protection to the City of Philadelphia, and the other parts of the Province; that the Memorialists further beg leave to represent, that, notwithstanding the honourable Continental Congress recommended a General Association of all able-bodied men, from sixteen to fifty years of age, yet great numbers have neglected or refused to associate, many of whom are men of considerable property and influence; which neglect or refusal hath an evident tendency to discourage the present Associators, by inducing them to believe that the burden will chiefly fall on them; that as the cause is of general concern, the necessary waste of time attending their preparation for defence, or an equivalent thereto, should likewise be general; that there are many persons zealous in the cause of liberty, who would cheerfully associate, but are destitute of arms and ammunition, and totally unable to procure them; that, under the present circumstances of the Association, the Memorialists apprehend no proper subordination can take place, nor effectual service be rendered to the publick; that the Memorialists having thus stated a few of the inconveniences to which this County and the present Association are subject, they confide in the wisdom and integrity of the honourable House for such relief as the premises may require.

Ordered to lie on the table.

The House proceeded in the choice and nomination of Officers for the new Battalion to be raised in this Province, when Benjamin Davis, Samuel Watson, Jacob Ashmead, Peter Hughes, Adam Hubley, John Reece, Frederick Blankenburg, and Richard Standley, were appointed Lieutenants in the said Battalion, and recommended to the Continental Congress to be commissioned accordingly.

Upon motion, the Order of the House to resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole House on this day, was again read, and further postponed till ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

The House then adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

The House took into consideration the several applications produced at the table for Ensigns' Commissions in the new Battalion, and having examined the respective vouchers of the candidates,

Resolved, That Roger Steiner, Philip Clumburg, Jun., Jacob Zeigler, George Jenkins, Christian Staddle, Thomas Ryerson, William Moore, and Amos Wilkinson, be, and they are hereby appointed Ensigns in the said Battalion, and recommended to the honourable Continental Congress to be commissioned accordingly.

A Memorial and Petition from the Officers of the four Battalions associated in the County of Philadelphia for defence of American liberty, was presented to the House, and read, setting forth, that the Memorialists, purely with a view to serve their Country's cause, have freely given much time to perfect themselves, and the men they have been chosen to command in military exercises, and have incurred an expense for drums and colours, and the payment of Adjutants, Fuglemen, Sergeants, Drummers, Filers, &c.; that some of the Petitioners have exerted their utmost endeavours to procure sufficient Arms and Accoutrements, which were put into the hands of such able-bodied men under their command, whose circumstances did not permit to pay for themselves; that the Petitioners beg leave to present just accounts of expenditures, and to place reliance on the wisdom and justice of the honourable House for reimbursement of the past, and provision for future necessary expenses.

Ordered to lie on the table.

A Petition from divers languishing Debtors in the Jail of this City was presented to the House and read, setting forth, that they are subjected to great inconveniences and hardships, from their friends and families having been of late debarred access to them, and praying relief.

Ordered to lie on the table.

A Petition from Christopher Tully was presented to the House and read, setting forth, that he is the first person who perfected and introduced in this Province a machine for spinning, twenty-four threads at once by one man or woman, with the same facility and despatch as a single thread can be spun on a common wheel; and it being the first of the kind made here, the Petitioner lost a great deal of time, and was at extraordinary expense in completing it; that the Petitioner has also engraved the figure of the said machine for the Pennsylvania Magazine, and with it a description of every part, in so particular a manner that any workman may make one by the engraved plate and the description; whence it is possible this very useful invention may soon become as common here as in England, which cannot but be a great advantage to the industrious part of the people in this Country, and the publick in general; that if the honourable House should therefore think the Petitioner deserving of any gratuity for his trouble and expense in perfecting and publishing the said machine, it will be gratefully received and acknowledged by him.

Ordered to lie on the table.

The House adjourned to ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

Friday, October 27, 1775.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

The Committee appointed to consider the Memorial of the Committee chosen by the Freeholders of the Counties of Northumberland and Northampton, to solicit assistance, and devise means for keeping the peace of the said Counties, and defending them against the Connecticut intruders, reported, "that they had taken the said Memorial into their serious consideration, and are satisfied that the matters and things therein represented are justly stated, and deserve the attention of the House."

Ordered, That the above Report be taken into consideration in the afternoon.

The Order of yesterday, for the House to resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole House at ten o'clock, this morning, was read by order, and postponed to Tuesday next.

A Committee from the Meeting of Representatives of the people called Quakers, this day waited on the House, and, being admitted, presented an Address in behalf of that Society, which being read by one of the Committee, they withdrew, and the said Address follows, in these words, viz:

"To the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met.

"The Address of the People called Quakers respectfully sheweth:

"That we have with deep concern and affliction considered the sorrowful alteration in the state of this once peaceful Province; and the present conjuncture appearing to us the most critical and important ever known among us, we request our address to you at this time may obtain your serious, weighty, and deliberate consideration.

"We observe by the minutes of your proceedings, and the copy of a petition with which you have favoured us, that several memorials and petitions have been presented to you, by divers inhabitants, chiefly of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, the consideration of which hath so weighty impressed our minds, that we apprehend we shall fall short of our duty to ourselves, to our Country, and to posterity, if we do not express our concern on the endeavours used to induce you to enter into measures so manifestly repugnant to the laws and Charter of this Province, and which, if enforced, must subvert that most essential of all privileges, liberty of conscience, and we apprehend will not only increase the publick distresses, but occasion grievous sufferings to many conscientious people, of divers religious denominations.

"It is well known, that for above one hundred years past, we, as a religious society, have declared to the world that we could not, for conscience sake, bear arms, nor be concerned in warlike preparations, either by personal service or by paying any fines, penalties, or assessments imposed in consideration of our exemption from such services.

"That for many years after becoming a distinct religious society, our ancestors suffered many grievous persecutions and oppressions for adhering to these our religious principles, which we are convinced are founded on the example and express injunction of Christ, our Lord and Lawgiver.

"That in expectation of being entirely relieved from the divers oppressions to which they were subjected on this and other accounts, and of enjoying perfect liberty of serving God, and of walking before him in the way and manner they believe to be most agreeable to him, our ancestors were induced to leave their native land, and encounter the dangers and difficulties of settling this, then a wilderness; and although they were assured that our honourable proprietor, William Penn, was united with them in religious profession and principles, yet, in order to secure this inestimable privilege of liberty of conscience to themselves and their posterity in the fullest manner they could, before they came from their native land, they entered into a solemn contract with him for this purpose, as appears by the thirty-fifth section of laws, agreed upon in England, the fifth day of the third month, 1682, in the following words, viz:

"That all persons living in the Province, who confess and acknowledge the one Almighty and Eternal God to be the Creator, Upholder, and Ruler of the world, and that hold themselves obliged in conscience to live peaceably and justly in civil society, shall in no wise be molested or prejudiced for their religious persuasion or practice, in matters of faith and worship, nor shall be compelled at any time to frequent or maintain any religious worship, place, or ministry whatsoever."

"This hath ever been understood to be the fundamental part of the Constitution of this Province, from its first settlement; and that it was not limited to the acts of publick worship only, in the manner many, for want of full consideration, would now interpret it, is very evident from the first clause of our present Charter of Privileges, viz:

"Because no people can be truly happy, though under the greatest enjoyment of civil liberties, if abridged of the freedom of their consciences, as to their religious profession and worship; and Almighty God, being the only Lord of conscience, Father of Lights and Spirits, and the author as well as object of all divine knowledge, faith, and worship, who only doth enlighten the minds and persuade and convince the understandings of people; I do hereby grant and declare, that no person or persons, inhabiting in this Province or Territories, who shall confess and acknowledge one Almighty God, the Creator, Upholder, and Ruler of the world, and profess him or themselves obliged to live peaceably under the civil Government, shall be in any case molested or prejudiced in his or their person or estate, because of his or their persuasion or practice, nor be compelled to frequent or maintain any religious worship, place, or ministry, contrary to his or their mind, nor to do or suffer any other act or thing contrary to their religious persuasion."

"This Charter was received by the Representatives of the people, in confirmation of their rights and privileges, and we desire may ever be considered and regarded as the most firm compact between the proprietaries and people of this Province; the wisdom manifested therein being so conspicuous as to engage the attention and approbation of the most judicious and knowing men of our own and other nations, and especially in the great care taken to guard against the instability of future human counsels, by providing in the most solemn manner, in the last paragraph of this Charter, that this most essential liberty and privilege should be preserved inviolate, in the following memorable conclusion of it, viz:

"But because the happiness of mankind depends so much on enjoying liberty of their consciences, as aforesaid,

I do hereby solemnly declare, promise, and grant, for me, my heirs and assigns, that the first article of this Charter, relating to liberty of conscience, and every part and clause therein, according to the true intent and meaning thereof, shall be kept and remain, without any alteration, inviolable forever. And lastly, I, the said William Penn, proprietor and Governour of the Province of Pennsylvania and Territories thereunto belonging, for myself, my heirs and assigns, have solemnly declared, granted, and confirmed, and do hereby solemnly declare, grant, and confirm, that neither I, my heirs or assigns, shall procure or do any thing or things whereby the liberties in this Charter contained and expressed, nor any part thereof, shall be infringed or broken; and if any thing shall be procured or done, by any person or persons, contrary to these presents, it shall be of no force or effect.

"On these principles this Province was first settled, and the blessing of Divine Providence signally attending the pious care of those intrusted with the powers of Government, soon became populous, and truth, equity, and mercy, directing their councils, they gave proof of their desire that the blessings they enjoyed should be diffused to others, which encouraged great numbers to remove hither and settle among them. We cannot therefore but sorrowfully lament, that any should now forget the equity and justice of their laws and Government, and, by preferring their own schemes, overlook the importance of inviolably maintaining and supporting these principles.

"We have a just sense of the value of our religious and civil liberties, and have ever been and are desirous of preserving them by all such measures as are not inconsistent with our Christian profession and principles; and though we believe it to be our duty to submit to the powers which, in the course of Divine Providence, are set over us, where there hath been, or is any oppression, or cause of suffering, we are engaged with Christian meekness and firmness to petition and remonstrate against them, and to endeavour by just reasoning and arguments to assert our rights and privileges, in order to obtain relief.

"We therefore earnestly entreat you carefully to guard against any proposal or attempt to deprive us and others of the full enjoyment of liberty of conscience, and that the solemn assurance given us in the Charter, that we shall not be obliged 'to do or suffer any act or thing contrary to our religious persuasion,' may not be infringed. The power of judging respecting our sincerity belongeth only to the Lord of our consciences; and we hope, in a Province heretofore remarkable for the preservation of religious and civil liberty, the Representatives of the people will still be conscientiously careful that it may remain inviolate.

"We fervently desire the most conciliatory measures for removing the impending calamities, and for restoring peace to the Colonies in general, may be pursued, and that all such may be avoided as are likely to widen or perpetuate the breach with our Parent State, or tend to introduce persecution and suffering among us.

"We are not insensible of the difficulties and trials which attend your station in this time of public calamity, and are desirous that divine wisdom may influence your minds and guide your counsels, so that your determinations may tend to the honour of God, the promotion of peace, and the happiness of the people.

"Signed in and on behalf of a Meeting of the Representatives of the said people, held at Philadelphia, the 26th day of the tenth month, 1775, by

"JOHN PEMBERTON, Clerk."

Ordered, That the foregoing Address be referred to the consideration of the Committee of the Whole House.

The House adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

The House, pursuant to the Order of the forenoon, taking into consideration the report of their Committee on the Memorial of the Northumberland and Northampton Committee, together with certain Resolutions of former House of Assembly, passed on the 13th of January, 1774, concerning certain intruders from the Colony of Connecticut, "who, in a riotous and tumultuous manner, have taken possession of a tract of country within the known limits and boundaries of this Province, and retain their possession in an hostile manner, to the great disturbance of the peace of the same, confederating, in defiance of the laws and executive powers of this Government, with a number of ill-disposed persons, and affording protection to offenders of the most atrocious kind. Whereupon, the said House resolved, that they would concur with the Governour in every reasonable measure, to strengthen the hands of Government in preserving the peace and suppressing all riots, tumults, and illegal attempts to disturb the inhabitants of this Province in their peaceable possessions." And whereas it appears that the said Connecticut intruders, in contempt of the authority of this Province, and to the great annoyance of its peaceable inhabitants, do still continue their intrusions and invasions of private property, and particularly in the latter end of September last, regardless of the publick union, and taking an ungenerous advantage of the calamities of the times, did attempt to extend their settlements to the west branch of Susquehannah, near fifty miles from Wyoming; wherefore, Resolved, That the inhabitants of the County of Northumberland, settled under the jurisdiction of this Province, were justifiable, and did their duty in repelling the said intruders, and preventing the further extension of their settlements.

And whereas the jurisdiction of the Counties of Northampton and Northumberland is extended by acts of Assembly to the north bounds of this Province, and the matter in controversy between Connecticut and this Province is submitted to the determination of the King in Council; wherefore,

Resolved, That to admit or agree to any temporary line of jurisdiction between the inhabitants of this Province and the said intruders, would be sacrificing the just rights and powers of this Government, would prejudice the cause in question, and be injurious not only to the proprietaries of this Province, who have already refused to agree to any such temporary line, but likewise to all those who have purchased and hold lands in these parts, under the faith and sanction of our laws.

Resolved, That those Connecticut intruders having, in a forcible and hostile manner, obtained their possessions in this Province, ought, for the preservation of the peace thereof, to surrender up those possessions, and wait for a proper and legal decision of their claim.

Resolved, nevertheless, That this House will acquiesce in any plan that shall be recommended by the honourable Continental Congress, agreeable to the request of the late House, whereby those intruders may be permitted to enjoy their present settlement till a determination of the controversy by the King in Council; provided assurance be given that they will abide by that determination, and in the mean time introduce no more settlers upon the controverted lands, and submit to the laws of this Province.

Resolved, That if such an agreement cannot be obtained, this House will concur with the Governour in every reasonable measure for protecting and supporting the inhabitants of the said Counties of Northampton and Northumberland in the defence of their property and just rights.

A Memorial from the Officers of the Military Association within the County of Chester was presented to the House and read, setting forth, that the Memorialists have been induced, from motives of humanity as well as self-preservation, to enter into and form an Association for mutual defence; and, in their endeavours to carry the same into effect, they have found it indispensably necessary from time to time to advance money for the payment of Fuglemen, Adjutants, Drummers, and Fifers, as well as drums, colours, &c.; that these efforts of the Memorialists (notwithstanding numberless attempts to render them abortive) have been attended with very considerable effects, there being now within the said County five Battalions regularly formed, and so well disciplined, for the time they have been established, that they may be of singular service in support of the great and common cause of America, if put under proper regulations; that the Memorialists, being called to the station they now hold by the free suffrages of the people, they were induced to incur the expenses above mentioned by no other motive than a desire to promote, to the utmost of their power, the publick security and welfare; and as the honourable House, by their vote of the 30th of June last, was pleased to approve of their proceedings, they rely with a respectful confidence in the justice and impartiality of the present Assembly, that they will not suffer a few individuals to remain any longer burdened with the charge of measures which were designed for, and really tend to the benefit of the whole community; that the Memorialists therefore pray the House will be pleased to make such provision, in the premises, as in their wisdom shall seem proper; and beg leave to present herewith an exact account of their expenses for the purposes aforesaid, omitting many others (although vastly superior to those exhibited) which they have been necessitated to incur; that the Memorialists also beg leave to inform the House, that it will be necessary to retain in pay one Drummer and one Fifer for each Company, and an Adjutant and a Fugleman for each Battalion, whose pay the Memorialists would wish the House to regulate.

Ordered to lie on the table.

A Petition from Captain Benjamin Loxly, of the City of Philadelphia, Storekeeper of Artillery, was presented to the House and read, setting forth, that by the direction of several members of the honourable House, and at the request of the Committee of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, the Petitioner hath provided divers carriages for the ordnance, and stores of various kinds, whereby a balance of three hundred and fifty-three Pounds seven Shillings is now due to him, which he prays the House will order to be paid.

Ordered to lie on the table.

The House adjourned to ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

Saturday, October 28, 1775.

The House met pursuant to adjournment; and, taking into their further consideration the Resolve of Congress for raising a Battalion in this Province, find it necessary that money should be advanced to the several Captains, for that purpose.

Resolved, therefore, That the Congress be requested to order a sufficient sum of money to be put into the hands of the Committee of Safety of this Province, to be immediately applied in raising the said Battalion.

The House adjourned to Monday next, at four o'clock, P. M.

A Petition and Remonstrance from the Committee of the City of Philadelphia was presented to the House, and follows in these words, viz:

"To the Honourable the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met:

"The Petition and Remonstrance of the Committee of the City and Liberties of PHILADELPHIA, most humbly sheweth:

"That your Petitioners have seen the copy of an address to your honourable House, intituled 'An Address of the people called Quakers,' which, in the opinion of your Petitioners, bears an aspect unfriendly to the liberties of America, and maintains principles destructive of all society and government, and highly reflecting upon the glorious Revolution which placed the present royal family upon the British throne. Though we are firmly persuaded that a majority of that society have too much sincerity, candour, and good sense, to be influenced by such principles, yet our duty to ourselves, to our Country, and to our posterity, at this alarming crisis, when every thing dear and valuable is at stake, constrains us to use our utmost endeavours to prevent the fatal consequences that might attend your compliance with the above application. These gentlemen want to withdraw their persons and their fortunes from the service of their Country, at a time when their Country stands most in need of them.

"If the patrons and friends of liberty succeed in the present glorious struggle, they and their posterity will enjoy all the advantages derived from it, equally with those who procured them, without contributing a single penny, and with safety to their persons. If the friends of liberty fail, they will risk no forfeitures, but be entitled, by their behaviour, to protection and countenance from the British Ministry, and will probably be promoted to office. This they seem to desire and expect.

"Though such conduct manifestly tends to defeat the virtuous and wise measures planned by the Congress of the thirteen United Colonies, and appears, at the first blush, to be selfish, ungenerous, and unjust, yet we beg leave to animadvert upon the arguments they have used to induce the honourable House to favour and support it.

"The addressers say, 'They are of a religious society who, for above an hundred years past, have declared to the world that they could not, for conscience sake, bear arms, nor be concerned in warlike preparations, either by personal service, or by paying any fines, penalties, or assessments, imposed in consideration of their exemption from such services.' That these principles are founded 'on the example and express injunction of Christ, our Lord and Lawgiver.' That 'although they were assured that our honourable proprietor, William Penn, was united with them in religious profession and principles,' yet their ancestors obtained from him a charter, by which the enjoyment of these principles is secured inviolate forever; and that they hold the doctrine of passive obedience and non-resistance.

"Your Petitioners will not undertake to say how long this society have held such principles, but they do positively say, that the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament must be wrested and tortured with more than Jesuitical art, to furnish a single argument to support them. They also deny that the clause in the Proprietary Charter, which they cite, is by them truly construed; and humbly conceive this will be evident, not only by a due attention to the words themselves, and a consideration of the Royal Charter granted to the said William Penn, but also from the Act of Assembly intituled 'The Law concerning Liberty of Conscience.'

"If the people called Quakers held these principles 'upwards of an hundred years ago,' and the first proprietor of this Province, the Honourable William Penn, Esq., was united with them in religious profession and principles, which they expressly allege, it is very unaccountable to your Petitioners that the said William Penn should receive a Charter from King Charles II, in the year 1681, in the sixteenth section of which we find 'a power given to him, his heirs and assigns, by themselves or their Captains or other their officers, to levy, muster, and train all sorts of men, of what condition soever, or wheresoever born, in the Province for the time being, and to make war, and to pursue enemies and robbers, as well by sea as by land, even without the limits of this Province, and, by God's assistance, to vanquish and take them, and, being taken, to put them to death by the laws of war, or to save them, at their pleasure; and to do all and every other thing which unto the charge and office of a Captain-General of an army belongeth, or hath accustomed to belong, as fully and freely as any Captain-General of an army hath ever had the same.'

"If, also, none but Quakers came over at first to this Province, with the said proprietor, and the Colony was intended for them, as the addressers seem to intimate, your Petitioners cannot conceive that any other persons could be made Captains or officers, or could be levied, mustered, or trained, at that time, but themselves. Be this as it may, your Petitioners beg leave to deliver, as their humble opinion, that self-preservation is the first principle of nature, and a duty that every man indispensably owes, not only to himself, but to the supreme Director and Governour of the universe, who gave him a being; and that, in a state of political society and government, all men, by their original compact and agreement, are obliged to unite in defending themselves and those of the same community against such as shall attempt unlawfully to deprive them of their just rights and liberties; that those who withdraw themselves from this compact cannot be entitled to the protection of the society; that the safety of the people is the supreme law; that he who receives an equal benefit ought to bear an equal burden; that the doctrine of passive obedience and non-resistance is incompatible with our freedom and happiness, and stands condemned by the conduct of the great Queen Elizabeth, who first assisted the Scotch, and then the French, and to the end of her days continued to protect the States who not only resisted, but shook off the Spanish yoke, and set up a new form of Government—by the conduct of her Parliaments and convocations, who gave her subsidies for those purposes—by King James I., his whole reign—by King Charles I., who, in the beginning of his reign, protected the Rochellers, had supplies from the Parliament for that purpose, and ordered a fast and prayers to be made for them—and by the glorious Revolution, under which the said society of Quakers, as well as others, enjoy their present religious and civil rights; that it is also against the laws of England, and is reprobated by two solemn decisions in the House of Lords—the first against Dr. Manwaring, in 1623, and the other against Dr. Sachevill, in 1710, after the most solemn and fair trials—and in a late instance by the House of Commons, in the case of Dr. Nowell—and, also, by the repeated acts of the Assembly of this Province.

“And your Petitioners cannot avoid thinking, that even the addressers of your Honours, though at a distance and in casuistical reasoning they may affect to exclude all resistance, would yet hearken to the voice of nature, when evident ruin, both to themselves and the publick, must attend a strict adherence to such principles, if there were no other persons in the community to defend them.

“Upon the whole, your Petitioners rest assured you will exert every power you are possessed of, for the security and happiness of the good people of this Province, and that you will do equal justice to all your constituents; and therefore they again repeat their request, that you will not, at a time when the united strength of North-America, and the aid of every individual, is wanted to preserve our common rights, exempt many of the wealthiest among us from co-operating with their countrymen, in some way or other, for their common safety.

“And your Petitioners will pray, &c.

“Signed by an unanimous order of the Committee:

“GEORGE CLYMER, Chairman.”

A Memorial from the Officers of the Military Association of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia was presented to the House, and is as follows, viz:

“To the Honourable Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met:

“The Memorial of the Officers of the Military Association of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, humbly sheweth:

“That your Memorialists have been favoured with a copy of an address, said to be that of the people called Quakers, containing matter of so much importance to the opposition now so universally gone into against ministerial oppression, that your memorialists cannot pass it by with silence, though they apprehend that the contents of it cannot make the intended impression on the minds of men so enlightened as the Representatives of this Province. But as we know, by fatal experience, that papers of a publick nature, coming from a body of men supposed by the Ministry to have very general influence in the Province, have contributed to draw upon us our present calamities, we are constrained to remonstrate against the address; and this with a view not only of expressing our abhorrence of the doctrines contained in it, but of justifying ourselves from the groundless aspersions thrown on us among the other bodies of freemen, who, out of zeal for the publick service, have presented petitions and memorials to your honourable House.

“We cannot but see with astonishment the antiquated and absurd doctrine of passive obedience held up in this age of science, and that before the representative body of this Province, whose existence as a constitutional House of Assembly depends on the contrary to this slavish opinion. We do, in the most solemn manner, protest that we mean not to violate the rights of conscience, as we are unjustly charged; but cannot, from all the lights we are possessed of, discover that, under the idea of conscientious scruples, opinions should be promulgated, subversive of every political principle of that glorious Constitution, to defend which we have put our lives and fortunes to the hazard, and tending to throw a damp upon the plan of opposition which alone, under God, can save from destruction this devoted Country.

“We cannot alter the opinion we have ever held with regard to those parts of the Charter quoted by the addressers, that they relate only to an exemption from any acts of uniformity in worship, and from paying towards the support of other religious establishments than those to which the inhabitants of this Province respectively belong. We know of no distinctions of sects, when we meet our fellow-citizens on matters of publick concern; and ask those conscientiously scrupulous against bearing arms to contribute towards the expense of our opposition, not because of their ‘religious persuasion, but because the general defence of the Province demands it. Therefore, that part of the Charter which relates to people not being’ molested or prejudiced in their person or estate, on account ‘of their conscientious persuasion or practice,’ is totally out of the question, and has been held up with a view to alarm the House with groundless apprehensions.

“We beg leave to remind the honourable House of the constant usage of the Province, and that, in all the wars we have been engaged in, no exemption from fines and taxation has been made in favour of any set of people; but, on the contrary, laws and ordinances have repeatedly been made for the purposes of defence, laying general imposts on the inhabitants of the Province, of all sects and societies.

“We are, however, of opinion that speculative disputes should not now be gone into. The enemy are desolating our Country, and danger daily awaits us. Our situation, therefore, furnishes us with arguments, drawn from the laws of nature and reason, which transcend all local establishments. From these laws, and the general principles of civil society, it is undoubtedly certain that all persons who enjoy the benefits should also bear their proportion of the burdens of the state. We cannot conceive it to be consistent with a reasonable conscience to acquire and engross considerable property, in any country, and not part with some of it to defend the rest. We further think, that those who apply taxes, and not those whom the exigencies of the state and the weight of a majority oblige to pay them, are answerable for the consequences of such application. We conscientiously believe that no member of society should be exempted from paying a reasonable proportion of his property towards the general defence, though he may be exempted from actually bearing arms; and in such case, by paying a fine for such exemption, he is in a better situation than one who risks his life in the service. And if the wealthy members of the society of Quakers are permitted to withhold their proportion, it will in some degree be an invasion of our liberty of conscience, by denying us the means of so effectually making a warlike opposition against our oppressors, which cannot be done without money.

“We know not what ‘schemes’ the addressers allude to; for our parts, we have none, but to defend our lives, liberties, and property, and by every lawful and reasonable mode to obtain an equal and general contribution for this purpose, from all ranks of people.

“We pray the House to recollect the mischievous consequences which have arisen from a former production, said to come from the whole body of the people called Quakers; but which, as we have reason to believe, like that now before your honourable House, flowed from a few individuals, who assumed to themselves the prerogative of speaking the sentiments of the whole society; and that your honourable House will reject from their minutes their present address, which tends to show a disunion among us, and therefore may be of fatal consequences to our cause.

"And, as we fear the people will not longer submit to see the publick burden so unequally borne, we earnestly beg, to preserve the peace of the Province, and the consequence of your honourable House, (which we would wish to govern us in this important struggle, in preference to any other body,) you will be pleased to take into your consideration our former memorials relative to the Association, which we engaged in from the best of motives, and which has been solemnly approved of by a vote of your honourable predecessors.

"By order of a Board of Officers:

"DANIEL ROBERDEAU, Chairman.

"Philadelphia, October 31, 1775."

A Representation from the Committee of Privates of the Association belonging to the City of Philadelphia and its Districts, was presented to the House, and follows in these words, viz:

"To the Honourable the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met.

"We, the Committee of the Privates of the Association belonging to the City of PHILADELPHIA and its Districts, humbly beg leave to represent:

"That it is with no small degree of reluctance that we are obliged either to approach this honourable House with this our representation, or by our silence in some measure to acknowledge the claims and admit the charge of those men who, in their late address to this honourable House, style themselves the people called Quakers, a copy of which we have seen.

"In this extraordinary address we find ourselves and others represented as men who endeavour to induce this honourable House to enter into measures manifestly repugnant to the laws and Charter of this Province, and which, if enforced, must subvert that most essential of all privileges, liberty of conscience; which they apprehend will not only increase the publick distresses, but occasion the grievous sufferings of many conscientious people, of divers religious denominations; and also as persons who 'now forget the equity and justice of their laws and Government of this once peaceful Province, and, by preferring our own schemes, overlook the importance of inviolably maintaining and supporting the principles of civil and religious liberty.'

"We beg leave to assure this honourable House, that we are far from wishing to do any thing which would have the remotest tendency to increase the publick distresses, or to occasion the grievous sufferings of any conscientious people, of any denomination whatever, and are utterly at a loss to comprehend how the prayer of our petition could interfere with the consciences of religious men.

"In our petition we prayed the honourable House, in their wisdom, to recommend to their constituents some general plan of a militia law, which should equally extend to all the good people of this Province; and that any indulgence which might be thought necessary to be granted by the honourable House, to any of the freemen of the Province, might be equally open to all, and granted upon such terms as this honourable House might think adequate to the many difficult and dangerous services of those who were willing to hazard their lives and fortunes in the defence of their Country.

"How this prayer, founded on the most certain and evident principles of equity and justice, could be construed into an endeavour to induce this honourable House to enter into measures manifestly repugnant to the laws and Charter of this Province, and which, if enforced, must subvert that most essential of all privileges, liberty of conscience, surpasses all the ideas we had ever formed of the power of religious prejudices.

"That religion which teaches to deny the demand of justice and equity, cannot be of God; nor will the conscience which is influenced thereby meet with his approbation. Those who believe the Scriptures must acknowledge that civil Government is of divine institution, and the support of it enjoined to Christians; and it is not consonant to the divine wisdom to enjoin and forbid the same thing at the same time. As your addressers have not pointed out any law of the Province to which the prayer of your Petitioners is so manifestly repugnant, we beg to be indulged with the liberty of doubting the existence of any such; and as to the thirty-fifth section of laws agreed upon in England the fifth day of the third month, one thousand six hundred and eighty-two, we would pass it over as a section which we apprehend none but your addressers would apply to the present purpose.

"With regard to arguments drawn from our Charter, we would observe, that the great law of self-preservation is equally binding with the letter of written Charters; nor can it be supposed that a people will be reasoned out of their liberty, and every thing they hold dear, by an over-nice scanning of them.

"Nevertheless, with regard to that clause of the Charter of Privileges on which they ultimately found their claim to a total exemption from contributing their just proportion towards the publick expense incurred in defence of our privileges, we would, with all due submission and deference, represent to this honourable House, that the honourable and worthy proprietor, William Penn, had no right, power, or authority, to grant privileges further than was granted to him by the Royal Charter, and that the royal prerogative of the King of Great Britain does not comprehend any right or authority in the Crown to grant any exemption from supporting the Constitution and Government to any man or set of men, on any pretence whatever. This is a power unknown to the Crown, and therefore could never be granted by the King to the worthy proprietor who granted the Charter of Privileges.

"Liberty of conscience is so sacred a thing that it ought ever to be preserved inviolate, and we will always rejoice to see any body of men assert their right to it. But when, under pretence of this liberty, the very existence of civil Government is struck at, we beg leave to represent, that either the liberty claimed must be given up, or the Government dissolved; and this we apprehend to be the case when any of the members of a community, from a claim of religious liberty, refuse to support the society to which they belong, and under which they claim this very privilege.

"That the clause which they quote never did nor could extend to such exemptions, on any pretence whatever, is plain from itself, because the persons who have a right to claim the liberty granted therein, are by that very clause made to 'profess themselves obliged to live quietly under the civil Government,' which cannot possibly be when they refuse to support the measures often necessary to its very existence.

"Moreover, it is plain that the worthy proprietor who granted this Charter never meant nor intended any such thing by the liberty of conscience therein mentioned, inasmuch as it would have been contrary to the sixteenth section of the Royal Charter granted by the King, and accepted by the proprietor, who, as they inform this honourable House in their address, was united with them in religious profession and principle, which is as follows: 'And because in so remote a Country, and situate near many barbarous nations, the incursions, as well of the savages themselves as of other enemies, pirates, and robbers, may probably be feared; therefore we have given, and for us, our heirs and successors, do give power by these presents to the said William Penn, his heirs and assigns, by themselves or their Captains, or other their officers, to levy, muster, and train all sorts of men, of what condition soever, or wheresoever born, in the said Province of Pennsylvania for the time being, and to make war, and to pursue the enemies and robbers aforesaid, as well by sea as by land, even without the limits of the said Province, and, by God's assistance, to vanquish and take them, and, being taken, to put them to death, by the law of war, or to save them, at their pleasure; and to do all and every other thing which unto the charge and office of a Captain-General of an army belongeth, or hath accustomed to belong, as fully and freely as any Captain-General of an army hath ever had the same.'

"This section of the Royal Charter, together with the clause in the Charter of Privileges, which the addressers have quoted, show evidently that the proprietor, William Penn, never intended to grant an exemption from paying their just proportion towards the support of any power necessary for the good government of the Province, whether civil or military, and therefore can, with no degree of decent modesty, be pleaded in the present or any other case of the same kind. Besides, it is well known that no such claim of exemption from contributing their just proportion towards the support of any civil or military measure entered into for the maintaining of the Government against their external or internal enemies, has ever been granted the society, on account of any such scruple of conscience, in any part of the British Empire, though, as the addressers allege, the society has existed for upwards of an hundred years, during which period it has been obliged to, and still does pay taxes, levied for the purpose of defraying the expenses of military expeditions, both here and in Europe; nor do we recollect to have found the payment of such taxes on the list of grievances annually made out by the society, though they duly commemorate those to which the clause in the Charter of Privileges is evidently directed.

"Thus their own practice becomes a strong proof against them, and shows, at least, that if their religious principles are abridged, we are not the authors of the abridgment. Our petition is, that the scale of justice may hang even; and if there are such consciences as scruple to have impartial justice administered, we pray that this honourable House may, in their wisdom, discountenance them; for if such scruples once obtain favour from Government, it is plain who are most likely to claim and reap the benefit of them.

"We desire to conclude by assuring this honourable House, that we are determined, to the utmost of our power, to support the liberties of America, and to inform them, that as we ask no partial favour for ourselves, so we request that it may not be granted to others. We therefore beg that the prayer of our petition may obtain the most serious attention of this honourable House.

"Signed by order of the Committee:

"WILLIAM ADCOCK, President."

Ordered, That the Military Commissions sent to the House from the Congress be delivered by the Clerk of the House to the respective officers.

Two petitions from George Hoffner and Benjamin Miller, of Philadelphia, were presented to the House and read, praying Commissions in the Battalion to be raised in this Province.

Ordered to lie on the table.

Pursuant to the Order of Friday last, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole House, to take into consideration the present critical state of this Province; and having spent some time in the perusal of the several Memorials, Petitions, and other Papers referred to them, the Speaker resumed the chair, and Mr. Pearson reported, from the Committee, that they had made some progress in the business before them, but not having come to any result thereon, they requested leave to sit again in the afternoon; which being agreed to, the House adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

Several Petitions, from a number of the Inhabitants of the County of Philadelphia, were presented to the House and read, setting forth, that the Regulations heretofore prescribed by the Committee of Safety, for the Associators of this Province, have not had the desired effect in the said County; that the Petitioners being impressed, at this time of difficulty and danger, with the necessity of regulating the Military Association of this Province, pray the honourable House to take the premises into their serious consideration, and grant the petitioners such Regulations as they (the Assembly) shall think most proper.

Ordered, That the said Petitions be referred to the consideration of the Committee of the Whole House.

The Order of the forenoon being read,

The House resolved itself a Committee of the Whole House on the Papers referred to them; and after further deliberation thereon, the Speaker resumed the chair, and Mr. Pearson reported, from the Committee, that they had made further progress in the business before them, but not being ready to report thereon, the Committee requested leave to sit again in the morning.

The House adjourned to ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

Wednesday, November 1, 1775.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

A Representation from the City and Liberties of Philadelphia was presented to the House and read, setting forth, that the said Committee having been informed that the late honourable House had, on the 30th of June last, ordered fifteen hundred stand of Arms for this City and County, used their influence with the most considerable Gunsmiths to forbear engaging any work to go out of the Province, until the said Arms shall be completed, which they readily agree to, in expectation of being employed in making the said Arms; that having had some reason to fear the necessary vigilance had not been used by the Commissioners and Assessors, in the discharge of their trust, and apprehending it to be their duty so to do, applied to them to know whether the said Arms had been provided, to which application they have received no satisfactory answer, at which many of their fellow-citizens have expressed great uneasiness; that the said Committee are well assured there are divers able Gunsmiths now unemployed, and the pressing necessity of the times making the least delay extremely dangerous, they therefore do most earnestly pray the honourable House will appoint some persons to procure the said Arms, who will give the necessary attention to that important duty.

Ordered to lie on the table.

The Order of last night being read,

The House again resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole House, to consider the state of the Province; and after some time spent therein, the Speaker resumed the chair, and Mr. Pearson reported, from the Committee, that they had made further progress in the business before them, but not having finished their deliberations thereon, they desired leave to sit again in the afternoon; and the same being agreed to, the House adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

Upon motion, Ordered, That the Barrackmaster do forthwith put the Barracks near this City into proper repair for receiving the Troops now raising in this Province; and that the said Barrackmaster do in future receive and comply with such orders from the Committee of Safety as they may find necessary to issue, for quartering Troops in the said Barracks.

The Order of the forenoon being read,

The House again resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole House, to consider the state of this Province; and having spent some time therein, the Speaker resumed the chair, and Mr. Pearson reported, from the Committee, that they had not yet concluded their deliberations on the business referred to them, and desired leave to sit again to-morrow morning.

Ordered, That the Committee do sit again accordingly.

The House adjourned to ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

M.

The Order of the forenoon being read,

An Address or Declaration, signed by divers persons in behalf of the Societies of Menonists and German Baptists in this Province, was presented to the House, and follows in these words, viz:

"In the first place, we acknowledge us indebted to the most high God, who created heaven and earth, the only good being, to thank him for all his great goodness and manifold mercies and love, through our Saviour, Jesus Christ, who is come to save the souls of men, having all power in heaven and on earth.

"Further, we find ourselves indebted to be thankful to our late worthy Assembly, for their giving so good an advice, in these troublesome times, to all ranks of people in Pennsylvania, particularly in allowing those who, by the doctrine of our Saviour, Jesus Christ, are persuaded in their consciences to love their enemies, and not to resist evil, to enjoy the liberty of their consciences; for which, as also for all the good things we enjoyed under their care, we heartily thank that body of Assembly, and all high and low in office who have advised to such a peaceful measure, hoping and confiding that they, and all others intrusted with power in this hitherto blessed Province, may be moved by the same spirit of grace which animated the first founder of this Province, our late worthy proprietor, William Penn, to grant liberty of conscience to all its inhabitants, that they may, in the great and memorable day of judgment, be put on the right hand of that just Judge, who judgeth without respect of person, and hear of him these blessed words: 'Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you, &c. What ye have done unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done unto me.' Among which number (i. e. the least of Christ's brethren) we, by his grace, hope to be ranked; and every lenity and favour shown to such tender consciences, although weak followers of this our blessed Saviour, will not be forgotten by him in that great day.

"The advice of those who do not find freedom of conscience to take up arms, that they ought to be helpful to those who are in need and distressed circumstances, we receive with cheerfulness towards all men, of what station they may be, it being our principle to feed the hungry, and give the thirsty drink. We have dedicated ourselves to serve all men, in every thing that can be helpful to the preservation of men's lives, but we find no freedom in giving or doing, or assisting in any thing by which men's lives are destroyed or hurt. We beg the patience of all those who believe we err in this point.

"We are always ready, according to Christ's command to Peter, to pay the tribute, that we may offend no man; and so we are willing to pay taxes, and to render unto Cesar those things that are Cesar's, and to God those things that are God's, although we think ourselves very weak to give God his due honour, he being a spirit and life, and we only dust and ashes.

"We are also willing to be subject to the higher powers, and to give in the manner Paul directs us: 'For he beareth the sword not in vain, for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil.'

"This testimony we lay down before our worthy Assembly, and all other persons in Government, letting them know that we are thankful as abovementioned, and that we are not at liberty, in conscience, to take up arms to conquer our enemies, but rather to pray to God, who has power in heaven and earth, for us and them.

"We also crave the patience of all the inhabitants of this Country. What they think to see clearer in the doctrine of the blessed Jesus Christ, we will leave to them and God, finding ourselves very poor; for faith is to proceed out of the word of God, which is life and spirit, and a power of God, and our consciences is to be instructed by the same, therefore we beg for patience.

"Our small gift, which we have given, we gave to those who have power over us, that we may not offend them, as Christ taught us by the tribute penny.

"We heartily pray that God would govern all hearts of our rulers, be they high or low, to meditate those good things which will pertain to our and their happiness."

Ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. Dickinson reported, that in pursuance of the Order of Saturday last, Mr. Humphreys and himself had made inquiry upon what ground the Congress were apprehensive that hostilities will be commenced at or near Wyoming, between the inhabitants of Pennsylvania and those of Connecticut, and expect to be enabled to report an answer to the House to-morrow, as that matter is then to come under consideration in Congress.

Upon motion, Ordered, That Mr. Dickinson, Mr. Gray, Mr. Brown, Mr. Jacobs, Mr. Slough, Mr. Swoope, Mr. Taylor, and Mr. Dougherty, be a Committee to prepare and report to the House a draught of Instructions for the Delegates appointed to serve in Congress on the part of this Province.

2. Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that the Military Association, entered into for the defence of this Province, ought to be continued, encouraged, and supported.

3. Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that it be recommended to all male white persons within this Province, between the ages of sixteen and fifty years, who have not already associated, and are not conscientiously scrupulous of bearing arms, to join the said Association immediately.

4. Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that certain Rules and Regulations, for the government of the said Associators, are necessary.

5. Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that all male white persons, between the ages aforesaid, capable of bearing arms, who shall not associate for the defence of this Province, ought to contribute an equivalent to the time spent by the Associators in acquiring the military discipline—Ministers of the Gospel, of all denominations, and servants purchased bona fide, and for valuable consideration, only excepted.

6. Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that it be recommended to the Committee of Safety to give orders for erecting a Magazine or Magazines in different places, as soon as the season will allow, for the greater security of the Ammunition belonging to the Province.

7. Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that the sum of Eighty Thousand Pounds be immediately struck in Bills of Credit, for answering the present exigencies of the Province.

"HONOURABLE SIR: On the 21st of last month, we sent to the Secretary of State for America a copy of the petition from the General Congress; and yesterday, the first moment that was permitted us, we presented to him the original, which his Lordship promised to deliver to the King.

"We thought it our duty to press his Lordship to obtain an answer; but we are told that, as His Majesty did not receive it on the throne, no answer would be given.

"We have the honour of being, honourable Sir, your most faithful servants,

"RICHARD PENN,
"ARTHUR LEE."

The Committee appointed to prepare and bring in a draught of Instructions for the Delegates of this Province in Congress, reported an essay for that purpose; which, being read and considered, was agreed to by the House, and is as follows, viz:

GENTLEMEN: The trust reposed in you is of such a nature, and the modes of executing it may be so diversified in the course of your deliberations, that it is scarcely possible to give you particular instructions respecting it.

We therefore, in general, direct that you, or any four of you, meet in Congress the Delegates of the several Colonies now assembled in this City, and any such Delegates as may meet in Congress next year; that you consult together on the present critical and alarming state of publick affairs; that you exert your utmost endeavours to agree upon and recommend such measures as you shall judge to afford the best prospect of obtaining redress of American grievances, and restoring that union and harmony between Great Britain and the Colonies, so essential to the welfare and happiness of both Countries.

Though the oppressive measures of the British Parliament and Administration have compelled us to resist their violence by force of arms, yet we strictly enjoin you, that you, in behalf of this Colony, dissent from and utterly reject any propositions, should such be made, that may cause or lead to a separation from our Mother Country, or a change of the form of this Government.

You are directed to make report of your proceedings to this House.*

Mr. Speaker laid before the House a Resolve from the honourable Continental Congress, which was read by order, and is as follows, viz:

"Resolved, That it be recommended to the Assemblies, Conventions, and Committees of Safety of the thirteen United Colonies, to appoint certain persons within each of the said Colonies, whose business it shall be to employ and set to work as many persons as they may think proper, both to work up such earth as is now fit for making Saltpetre, and to collect together, and place in beds or walls, under sheds, all such earth and composition of materials as are suitable to produce Saltpetre, after being duly exposed to the air, in order to increase the produce of it; and that the Delegates of the respective Colonies be directed to send this Resolve, together with the Resolve of last Session respecting Saltpetre making, to their re-

*I have lately seen, in the publick papers, an instruction from the House of Representatives in Pennsylvania, to their Delegates in Congress, which to me appeared very odd, and even inconsistent. They very properly observe, at first, that the mode of executing their trust may be so diversified, in the course of their deliberations, that it is scarcely possible to give particular instructions respecting it, and yet in a few minutes they so see into futurity as to venture to give one instruction very peremptorily respecting a separation from our Mother Country. 'Tis not easy to understand what they may precisely mean by such a separation. Without asserting any thing, I would take the liberty to ask a few questions. There can surely be no hurt in querying a little. I would therefore ask, are they certain that Great Britain cannot, or will not, in the course of the year, treat us in such a manner as to forfeit all right to our dependance upon them? Are they sure that, if Great Britain does so, it will still be best, at all adventures, to put our necks into their yoke? Are they sure that Britain will not call in foreign aid, so as to oblige us also to do the same? Are they sure that if Britain should thus oblige us to call in foreign aid, we should not be as much under obligation to our new allies as to Britain? Are they sure that, if we submit to British Government, they will not, as heretofore, try to fill all places of trust and profit with their creatures, so as by degrees entirely to bring us under? Are they sure that such a resolution, in the Province of Pennsylvania, will not encourage Britain, and make them rise in their demand upon us, since they may expect, from such an instruction, that we should submit to any thing rather than a separation from them? Are they sure that if all the other Colonies should agree in a form of Government, it would be best for their Delegates to reject it and stand out? Was there any need of mentioning the change of the Government in their own Province? Could there be any the least ground for a suspicion of that, let our separation from our Mother Country be as it would? Is this instruction agreeable to the wisdom and prudence that has generally appeared in the Assembly of that Province? Are they sure that it is best America should not be independent as to Government, and that several nations, suppose Britain, Holland, France, and Spain, should have equal advantage of our trade, and they should all be bound to maintain our independency in other respects? Suppose that Britain should have all the advantage of our trade, is not that all that can really be beneficial to them? May there not be a proper treaty for Britain's having the advantage of our trade, without being any other way under their Government? Have we not already tasted too much of their legislative power ever to let them have the advantage in their hands again? Is not the advantage of our trade, regulated by a proper treaty, all that Britain has a right to expect or desire, and all that we have a right to grant?

spective Colonies, and cause them to be printed and made publick there.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

The Committee appointed to prepare and bring in a Bill for the relief of certain Insolvent Debtors, who have petitioned for the discharge of their persons from imprisonment, reported they had essayed a draught for that purpose, which they presented at the table; and the same being read the first time, was ordered to lie on the table for a second reading.

The Committee appointed to inquire into the progress made in the manufacturing of Saltpetre in this Province presented at the table a report thereon, in writing, which was read by order, and is as follows, viz:

Your Committee have viewed the buildings erected by order of the Committee of Inspection, on a lot of ground in Market-Street, and also sundry conveniences and utensils placed there for the purpose of making Saltpetre, and are sorry to find that it has not yet been attended with the desired success; but the gentlemen who superintended this work are of opinion the manufacture may be carried on there to good effect, if supported with the necessary funds, as they have now employed a person that certainly understands the business, and the quantity of Saltpetre to be made will depend on and be proportioned to the sum employed.

Your Committee also report, that Baltis Moody has made, in a few weeks, a considerable quantity of Saltpetre, at Yorktown, part whereof has been delivered to the Committee of Safety, and is very good in quality; the remainder is soon expected down. The said Moody, being the person now employed at the above works, gives assurances of producing the said article very fast, as he finds plenty of impregnated materials in this City.

Your Committee are also informed of other persons in the Province, who understand making Saltpetre, and are willing to engage therein, on meeting with suitable encouragement.

It seems, therefore, absolutely necessary that such encouragement should be given, and the greatest pains taken to establish so useful a manufacture in this Province.

Your Committee do therefore recommend to the consideration of the House—

First. Whether it would not be proper to take the works already erected in this City under their direction, for the publick benefit.

Secondly. Whether it might not be of great use to offer, by vote, a good price for all Saltpetre made in this Province within twelve months from this time.

Thirdly. Whether it would not be a great encouragement to individuals to attempt making Saltpetre, if premiums were ordered by the House to be paid to those who shall produce the greatest quantity during the next twelve months.

Fourthly. Whether it may not be of publick utility to direct proper persons to be instructed by the said Moody in the art of making Saltpetre.

Fifthly. Whether the said Moody should not be rewarded for giving such instruction; and, also, whether he is not already entitled to encouragement from the publick, as the first person who has produced a considerable quantity of Saltpetre in the Province.

Resolved, That the sum of twenty-five Pounds be paid for every hundred weight of good merchantable Saltpetre that shall be made and manufactured in this Province, and delivered to the Committee of Safety within the space of twelve months from this time.

Twentieth. The Standard-Bearer of each Battalion to rank as eldest Lieutenant of the Battalion.

Twenty-First. All national distinctions in dress or name to be avoided, it being proper that we should now be united, in this General Association for defending our liberties and properties, under the sole denomination of Americans.

Twenty-Second. No Field-Officers to have Companies.

Twenty-Third. For the better order and government of Companies which may be raised after the completion of the several Battalions already formed in the City and Counties, such Companies are not to be admitted as independent, but are to be annexed to the most convenient Battalion, until a sufficient number of Companies are raised to form a new Battalion; and no number of Associators are to be considered as a Company, unless they consist of at least forty Privates; but it is recommended that, till that number be completed, the Associators join the most convenient Company, exercise and do duty with such Company.

Twenty-Fourth. All Battalions now formed, as well as those hereafter to be formed, are desired to make the necessary returns of their Officers, with their respective ranks, to the Committee of their County, and the Committees are desired to certify such returns, with the respective rank of each Battalion in their County, to the Committee of Safety, that Commissions may be issued immediately for every Officer, in conformity with these Rules.

Twenty-Fifth. Every Associator, except Riflemen, is required to furnish himself with a good and sufficient firelock, fit for actual service, a bayonet fitted thereto, steel ramrod, worm, priming-wire and brush, a cartridge-box that will contain twenty-three rounds of cartridges, twelve flints, a knapsack, a sufficient powder-horn, and a pouch at the bottom of his cartridge-box, or a strong bag, that will hold four pounds of ball.

Twenty-Sixth. The Commissioners and Assessors of the several Counties within this Province shall deliver the firelocks, bayonets, cartridge-boxes, and knapsacks, directed to be provided by the resolutions of the late House of Assembly, to the Commanding Officers of the several Battalions in their respective Counties, in due proportions, according to the number of men in each Battalion, for the use of such Associators, in their Battalions, as are unable to supply themselves, taking receipts for the same, which they shall immediately transmit to the Committee of Safety, first having entered the accounts of the same in their respective minute books; and the said Commanding Officers shall be accountable for the delivery of such arms and accoutrements, unless lost in actual service, whenever they shall be called upon by the Assembly or Committee of Safety.

Twenty-Seventh. Every Associator is required to attend constantly, with his arms and accoutrements in good order, on the last Monday in the month of February, the two last Mondays in the month of March, the three last Mondays in the month of April, the four Mondays in the month of May, the two first Mondays in the month of June, the last Monday in the month of July, the three first Mondays in the month of August, the three last Mondays in the month of September, and the second Monday in the month of October, at the places appointed by their Commanding Officers, to be trained and exercised in Companies or Battalions, as the officers shall direct.

And it is also recommended to such Associators as are not sufficiently expert in the exercise to meet as frequently as they conveniently can, at other times, to perfect themselves in the same. It is also directed, that the Commanding Officers, respectively, shall give due notice to the Associators of the places and hours of meeting, either in Companies or Battalion; and if the Associators are prevented from meeting on any of the days herein appointed, by the inclemency of the weather, they are to meet on the next fair day.

Twenty-Eighth. No Company or a Battalion shall meet at a tavern on any of the days of exercise, nor shall march to any tavern before they are discharged.

Twenty-Ninth. The Associators, on days of exercise, may be detained, under arms, on duty in the field, any time not exceeding six hours, provided they are not kept above three hours under arms at any one time, without allowing them a proper time to refresh themselves.

Thirtieth. The Sergeant or Clerk of any Company to be for this purpose appointed by the Captain, Lieutenants, and Ensigns of the Company, is required, at the end of one hour after the time appointed for the meeting of the Company or Battalion, to call over the Muster-Roll of the Company, noting those who are absent, and that day to make return, in writing, to the Captain, of such absentees; and all persons so absent at the time of calling over the Roll are to be liable to the fines hereafter mentioned in the Articles for non-attendance.

Thirty-First. The Captain of every Company, as soon as he is supplied by the publick with powder and lead for the purpose, is to take especial care that twenty-three rounds of Cartridges are properly made up and suited to the bore of each firelock, respectively, belonging to his Company, and shall keep all the Cartridges that are so made up in some dry and convenient place, with the name of the private affixed for whose firelock they are fitted, ready to be delivered out when occasion requires.

Thirty-Second. Adjutants, Drummers, and Fifers, shall receive the following Pay for every day of service they attend their respective Battalions or Companies by order of the Commanding Officer: An Adjutant, seven Shillings and six Pence; a Drummer, three Shillings; a Fifer, three Shillings. The Drum-Major and Fife-Major of every Battalion shall receive each a sum not exceeding fifteen Shillings per week, and be continued in pay as long as the Colonels of the several Battalions shall think necessary; and it is required that such Drum-Majors and Fife-Majors, when not in service on days of exercise, shall be diligently employed in instructing a proper number of persons for Drummers and Fifers of the several Battalions.

Thirty-Third. All Officers and Soldiers of the Association, when employed on military watch and ward, or when called into actual service, in case of an invasion or insurrection, or imminent danger of either, by this House of Assembly, or, in their recess, by the Committee of Safety, shall, while on such watch or in such service, be entitled to and receive the same pay that the Officers and Soldiers of the Continental Troops receive.

Thirty-Fourth. If any Officer or Soldier, not labouring under any infirmity incapacitating him to serve, shall, when so called into actual service, refuse to appear and march, with his arms, ammunition, and accoutrements, or shall depart without leave of the Commanding Officer, he shall be held up to the publick as a coward and a betrayer of his Country.

Thirty-Fifth. If any Associator so called into actual service shall leave a family not of ability to maintain themselves in his absence, the Justices of the Peace of the City or County, and the Overseers of the Poor of the City, Township, or District, respectively, shall immediately make provision for the maintenance of such family.

Thirty-Sixth. When any of the Associators shall be so called into actual service, the Commissioners of the respective Counties, or any one of them, shall immediately provide such Carriages as may be necessary for their accommodation, at the expense of the publick.

Thirty-Seventh. As there may happen occasions where-in it may be necessary to call out a part of the Associators to actual, though temporary service, and not the whole body, and it would be inconvenient and burdensome, if, upon every alarm, where the assistance of part only may be wanted, the whole should come together, or any much greater number than the occasion required, it is recommended, that orders may issue from the Committee of Safety, to the Colonels, either to march their whole Battalions, or to send to an appointed rendezvous one or more Companies, as they may be wanted, according to the respective rank of the Companies, each Company serving on such calls in its turn, and for such proportion of time as shall make the burden nearly equal; and if the Associators who are called forth are not all provided with good Arms, it is recommended to those who have such, and are not called out, to lend the same for that occasion, at the risk of the publick.

Thirty-Eighth. The Field-Officers of every Battalion shall appoint some person in each Company of their respective Battalions in whom they can confide, and the Officers in every Troop of Horse and Company of Artillery shall, in like manner, choose some person in their Troop or Company, respectively, whose names shall be returned by the said Officers, respectively, to the County Treasurers for the Provincial taxes in their several Counties; which persons so appointed shall, from time to time, collect all fines incurred by the Associators in their Companies for non-attendance, and shall severally pay the same to the said County Treasurers, respectively, first deducting a commission of five per centum for their trouble, which said County Treasurers, respectively, shall pay the same to Michael Hillegas, Esq., after deducting a commission of one per centum for their trouble; and the said Michael Hillegas having exchanged the said money, in which such fines shall be so paid, into bills of credit of this Province, emitted by this or the late House of Assembly, after deducting five Shillings for every hundred Pounds for his trouble, shall deliver the same into the hands of the Committees of Assembly appointed to audit and settle the publick accounts, to be by them burnt, sunk, and destroyed, in abatement of the taxes. It is directed that the said Collectors shall account with the officers who severally appointed them, as often as such officers shall require them so to do; and the said officers shall, in due time, transmit the accounts of the said Collectors to the respective County Treasurers for the Provincial taxes.

Lastly. This House having drawn up the following Articles of Agreement for all the Associators in the Province, they do earnestly recommend the same to be adopted, signed, and agreed to by all the said Associators, in order that one general system may prevail in Pennsylvania.

Articles of Association in PENNSYLVANIA.

We, the Officers and Soldiers engaged in the present Association for the defence of American liberty, being fully sensible that the strength and security of any body of men acting together consists in just regularity, due subordination, and exact obedience to command, without which no individual can have that confidence in the support of those about him that is so necessary to give firmness and resolution to the whole, do voluntarily and freely, after consideration of the following articles, adopt the same as the rules and regulations by which we agree and resolve to be governed in all our military concerns and operations, until the same, or any of them, shall be changed or dissolved by the Assembly of this Province, or a happy reconciliation shall take place between Great Britain and the Colonies.

First. If any Officer make use of any profane oath or execration, when on duty, he shall forfeit and pay for each and every such offence the sum of five Shillings; and if a Non-Commissioned Officer or Soldier be thus guilty of cursing or swearing, he shall forfeit and pay for each and every such offence the sum of one Shilling.

Second. Any Officer or Soldier who shall refuse to obey the lawful orders of his superior Officer, may be suspended from doing duty on that day, and shall, upon being convicted thereof before a Regimental Court of Associators, make such concessions as said Court shall direct.

Third. Any Officer or Soldier who shall begin, excite, cause, join in, or promote any disturbance in the Battalion, Troop, or Company to which he belongs, or in any other Battalion, Troop, or Company, shall be fined or censured, according to the nature of the offence, by the judgment of a General or Regimental Court of Associators.

Fourth. Any Officer or Soldier who shall strike his superior Officer, or draw, or offer to draw, or shall lift up any weapon, or offer any violence against him, being in the execution of his office, shall, upon a conviction before a General or Regimental Court of Associators, be dismissed, and shall be deemed to be thereby disgraced as unworthy the company of freemen.

Fifth. Any Commanding or other Officer who shall strike any Associator, when on duty, shall, upon conviction before a General Court of Associators, suffer such punishment as the said Court shall inflict.

Sixth. Any Officer or Soldier who shall make use of insolent, provoking, or indecent language, while on duty, shall suffer such censure or fine as shall be inflicted by a General or Regimental Court of Associators, according to the nature of the offence.

Seventh. If any Officer or Soldier shall think himself injured by his Colonel or the Commanding Officer of the Battalion, and shall, upon due application made to him, be refused redress, he may complain to the General or Commander-in-Chief of the Pennsylvania Associators, or to the Colonel of any other Battalion, who shall summon a General Court of Associators, that justice may be done.

Eighth. If any inferior Officer or Soldier shall think himself injured by his Captain, or other superior Officer in the Battalion, Troop, or Company to which he belongs, he may complain to the Commanding Officer of the Battalion, who shall summon a Regimental Court of Associators, for the doing justice, according to the nature of the case.

Resolved, That Mr. Robert White and Mr. Samuel Morris, Junior, repair any Buildings that may be on the Island, and erect such others as may be found necessary; and that they employ a sufficient number of hands to throw up a Bank and build a small Pier at the upper end of Fort-Island, for the purpose of sending with more speed any succours that there may be occasion for at the Island from the main.

The four following Soldiers, taken prisoners with Captain Campbell, now in the Jail of this County, were ordered by this Board to be removed to the Work-House, viz: Edward Mulloy, Robert Colebrook, John O'Neill, and Joseph Taylor.

The Board informed the Jailer and the Work-House Keeper of the City and County of Philadelphia, that Captain Campbell and Lieutenant Symes were allowed by the Continental Congress one Dollar and one-third of a Dollar per week for their subsistence, and one Dollar per week for the Soldiers taken with Captain Campbell; and that no greater sum will be allowed them.

Doctor Duffield reports his having been down to Province-Island, and examined the Pest-House, and finds it in good order, and provided with Beds and other necessities sufficient for the accommodation of forty sick men.

Agreeably to a Resolve of yesterday, Colonel Cadwallader and Mr. Clymer drew up the following Memorial; which was approved of, and signed by the Vice-President: To the Honourable the Continental Congress:

The Memorial of the Committee of Safety for the Province of Pennsylvania, sheweth: That this Committee having carried into execution the sentence passed by Congress against Captain Campbell, Lieutenant Symes, and the several Soldiers under their command, by putting them into confinement in the Jail and Work-House of this City, they now beg leave to offer to Congress, at the instance and request of Lieutenant Symes, the reasons on which he grounds his pretensions to be considered and treated as a prisoner of war; that he came from England to Boston in the capacity of an Army Surgeon, and afterwards was commissioned as an officer in the Regiment of Royal Highland Emigrants; that being ordered on board the Transport Rebecca & Francis, placed under the absolute direction of Captain Campbell, whom he had never seen or heard of, he was ignorant of the nature of the service he was sent on, and of the instructions jointly issued by General Gage to him and Captain Campbell, until some days after he was at sea. This Committee, having examined into these circumstances, have reason to believe they are consistent with truth.

Upon motion made, Ordered, That the following Resolves of Congress be entered upon the Minutes of this Committee, viz:

"In Congress, Wednesday, November 22, 1775.

"The Congress resumed the consideration of the Report from the Committee of the Whole, and the same was agreed to, as follows:

"The Committee of the Whole House to whom were referred the several Petitions from the Island of Bermuda, representing the distress to which they are exposed by the Non-Importation Agreement, and praying to be relieved in such manner as the Congress may deem consistent with the safety of America, report, that they have considered the same, and thereupon came to the following Resolutions:

"That the inhabitants of the Island of Bermuda appear friendly to the cause of America, and ought to be supplied with such and so great a quantity of the produce of the Colonies as may be necessary for their subsistence and home consumption; that, in the opinion of this Committee, they will annually require, for the purposes aforesaid, seventy-two thousand bushels of Indian Corn, two thousand barrels of Bread or Flour, one thousand barrels of Beef or Pork, two thousand one hundred bushels of Peas or Beans, and three hundred tierces of Rice; and that they be permitted to export the same yearly.

"That the said inhabitants ought to pay for the above annual allowance in Salt; but it is not the design of this resolution to exclude them from the privilege of receiving American produce, to any amount, in exchange for Arms, Ammunition, Saltpetre, Sulphur, and Field-Pieces, agreeable to a resolution of Congress passed the 15th of July last.

"That to enable such of these Colonies as conveniently can furnish the Island of Bermuda with the abovementioned annual allowance, to divide whatever advantages may result therefrom, in proportion to their respective shares of the general expense, it is further the opinion of this Committee—that the Colony of South-Carolina supply them with three hundred tierces of Rice; that the Colony of North-Carolina supply them with sixteen thousand bushels of Indian Corn, and four hundred and sixty-eight bushels of Peas or Beans; that the Colony of Virginia supply them with thirty-six thousand bushels of Indian Corn, and one thousand and fifty bushels of Peas or Beans; that the Colony of Maryland supply them with twenty thousand bushels of Indian Corn, and five hundred and eighty-two bushels of Peas or Beans; that the Colony of Pennsylvania supply them with twelve hundred barrels of Flour or Bread, and six hundred barrels of Beef or Pork; that the Colony of New-York supply them with eight hundred barrels of Flour or Bread, and four hundred barrels of Beef or Pork.

"That the Conventions or Committees of Safety of the abovementioned Colonies ought to superintend the exportation, provide against fraud, and take care that, in exchanging the said commodities of Salt and Provisions, no undue advantage be taken by either party of their mutual wants; and further, that no vessel employed in this business ought to load without their permission; and that when they shall, in pursuance of these resolutions, permit any of the said vessels to load, they do give notice thereof to the Committee of Inspection of the County, City, or Town, where such vessel shall load, and inform them that the same is done under the authority and by order of this Congress.

"That these resolutions ought to be kept as private as the execution of them will admit; that they should be transmitted to the several Conventions, Assemblies, or his contract with Captains Shee, Wilcocks, and Cadwallader. That those gentlemen take proper security from the said Wigfal, and draw an Order on this Committee for said sum of one hundred Pounds.

On motion made, Resolved, That the following Resolve of Congress be entered on the Minutes of this Committee:

"In Congress, Monday, November 27, 1775.

"On motion made, Resolved, That the Troops in the service of the Continent be supplied with Fuel and Bedding, at the expense of the Continent.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

The Committee of Safety are of opinion that it is not improper for Mr. James Innis to purchase any second-hand Arms which he may find in the hands of individuals of this Province, and therefore have no objection of his buying them; but as they have employed and are endeavouring to employ all the artificers that can be procured, in making new Arms for the publick, they apprehend any application by Mr. Innis to such artificers will be attended with bad consequences to the general cause, by enhancing the price of Arms; and that, as fast as Arms come into the hands of this Board, they will readily spare such proportion of them, for the use of the Colony of Virginia, as the necessities of this Province will admit.

A Letter was this day wrote to Colonel Thomas Mifflin, enclosing Lieutenant Symes's Order on Major Small for fifty Pounds sterling, which Colonel Mifflin is desired to receive, and inform this Board when he is in Cash, and when this Board receives an account of said Bills being paid, they will pay the amount to Lieutenant Symes.

And the same, by order of the House, was read, and is as follows, viz:

Gentlemen of the Council,

and Gentlemen of the Assembly:

I have called this meeting that you might have an opportunity of transacting such business as the publick exigencies of the Province require.

Having lately said so much to you concerning the present unhappy situation of publick affairs, and the destructive measures which have been adopted in the Colonies, under the pretence of necessity; and as I do not yet see that the urging any more arguments on that head has a chance of producing any good effect, I shall not endanger the harmony of the present session by a further discussion of the subject.

It is necessary, however, that you should be informed, "that His Majesty laments to find his subjects in America so lost to their own true interests as neither to accept the Resolution of the House of Commons of the 20th of February, nor make it the basis of a negotiation, when, in all probability, it would have led to some plan of accommodation; and that, as they have preferred engaging in a rebellion which menaces to overthrow the Constitution, it becomes His Majesty's duty, and is his firm resolution, that the most vigorous efforts should be made, both by sea and land, to reduce his rebellious subjects to obedience. But it is hoped that, unfavourable as the prospects are at present, the time will come when men of sense and friends to peace and good order will see the fatal consequences of the delusions which have led to the measures the people of America are now pursuing, and that we may yet see the publick tranquillity re-established, on the ground of the terms held out by His Majesty and the Parliament."

It is likewise proper that you should know "that the Commanders of His Majesty's Squadrons in America have orders to proceed, as in the case of a Town in actual rebellion, against such of the seaport Towns and places, being accessible to the King's Ships, as shall offer any violence to the King's Officers, or in which any Troops shall be raised or military works erected, other than by His Majesty's authority, or any attempts made to seize or plunder any publick magazine of Arms or Ammunition."

Although the King's Officers in this Province have not as yet, except in one or two instances, met with any insults or improper treatment from any of the inhabitants, yet such has been the general infatuation and disorder of the times, that had I followed the judgment and advice of some of my best friends, I should ere this have sought (as other of the King's Governours have done) an asylum on board of one of His Majesty's Ships; but as I am conscious that I have the true interest and welfare of the people at heart, (though I am so unhappy as to differ widely in opinion with their Representatives, respecting the best means of serving them in the present crisis,) I shall continue my confidence in that affection and regard which I have on so many occasions experienced from all ranks, during my residence in this Colony. I have indeed the stronger inducement to run this risk, and to use my influence with the other Crown Officers to do the same, because our retreat would necessarily be attributed to either the effect or well grounded apprehension of violence, and of course subject the Colony to be more immediately considered as in actual rebellion, and be productive of mischiefs which it is my earnest inclination and determination to prevent, as far as may be in my power. Let me therefore, gentlemen, entreat you to exert your influence likewise with the people, that they may not, by any action of theirs, give cause for the bringing such calamities on the Province. No advantage can possibly result from the seizing, confinement, or ill treatment of officers, adequate to the certain damage such acts of violence must occasion the Province to suffer.

However, gentlemen, if you should be of a different opinion, and will not or cannot answer for our safety, all I ask is, that you will tell me so in such plain, open language as cannot be misunderstood; for as sentiments of independency are, by some men of present consequence, openly avowed, and essays are already appearing in the publick papers to ridicule the people's fears of that horrid measure, and remove their aversion to Republican Government, it is high time that every man should know what he has to expect. If, as I hope, you have an abhorrence of such design, you will do your Country an essential service by declaring it in so full and explicit terms as may discourage the attempt. You may always rely on finding me ready to co-operate with you in every proper expedient for promoting peace, order, and good Government; and I shall deem it a particular happiness to have an opportunity of being instrumental in saving this Province from the present impending danger.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN.

A Message from his Excellency, by Mr. Deputy Secretary Pettit.

A Message to the Assembly.

GENTLEMEN: As I understand that there is now a sufficient number of members met to proceed on business of every kind proper for your consideration, I am to lay before you a requisition from His Majesty. It is contained in a letter which I lately had the honour of receiving from the Right Honourable the Earl of Dartmouth, one of His Majesty's principal Secretaries of State. His Lordship writes thus:

"I enclose an order of His Majesty in Council, approving an act for striking one hundred thousand Pounds in bills of credit, and directing the modes for sinking the same."

"The very great attention which has been shown to the wishes of the Province, in the allowance of the loan act, is an evidence of His Majesty's gracious inclination to grant them every indulgence that can consist with the true principles of commerce and the Constitution; and I beg leave to assure you that no part of my duty is more agreeable to me than carrying into execution these gracious intentions of my royal master."

"At the same time, I am commanded by the King to say to you that it would have been more agreeable to His Majesty, if the Assembly, instead of a general appropriation of the interest of the loan to the support of Government, in such manner as shall be directed by future acts, had thought fit to make a settlement, during the existence of that loan, upon the civil officers of Government, of salaries more suitable to their respective offices than what they now receive; and to appropriate a specifick portion of the said interest to building houses for the residence of the Governour and the meeting of the Legislature, of which you say there is a shameful want. Such an appropriation is no more than what they owe to the dignity of their own Government and His Majesty's just expectations; and therefore it is His Majesty's pleasure, that you do require the Assembly, in His Majesty's name, to make such provision accordingly, trusting that they will not make such an ill return to His Majesty's grace and favour, in the confirmation of this law, as not to comply with so just and reasonable a requisition."

I shall not, gentlemen, so far hazard the giving you offence as to suppose that any arguments can be requisite to persuade you to a compliance with His Majesty's desire and expectations in this respect; more especially as the mode for raising the money does not require any tax to be laid on the inhabitants of the Province, and will, if adopted, most probably be the means of establishing a precedent that may render all taxes for the future support of Government unnecessary. You must likewise be fully sensible, that as the King has manifested such confidence in the legal representatives of the people, it cannot but be their interest as well as duty, particularly at this time, to convince him that that confidence is not misplaced. Besides, such repeated declarations have been made to His Majesty, that he might always have the firmest reliance on the compliance of his subjects in this Colony with every reasonable requisition in their power; and this being so evidently of that nature, I cannot entertain a doubt of your being happy in having so good an opportunity of demonstrating that you mean your actions should ever correspond with your professions.

The Committee appointed to consider the Governour's Message at the last session informed the House that they were ready to make a report, and at the same time mentioned to the House, that the report was necessarily drawn up in such a manner as they apprehend might possibly occasion a longer session than the House at this time might incline to, and might be productive of some controversy. Whereupon, the House taking the same into their consideration, and also being of opinion that any thing which might interrupt the harmony, in this present critical situation of the Province, ought not to be entered into at the present session, unless something should occur during their sitting which may, in their opinion, render it necessary, do order that the report be postponed.

A Message from his Excellency, by Mr. Deputy Secretary Pettit:

MR. SPEAKER: His Excellency is in the Council Chamber, ready to receive the Address of the House.

Whereupon, Mr. Speaker left the chair, and, with the House, went to wait upon the Governour; and being returned, Mr. Speaker resumed the chair, and reported, that the House had waited on the Governour, and delivered their Address, in these words:

To His Excellency WILLIAM FRANKLIN, Esq., Captain-General, Governour, and Commander-in-Chief, in and over His Majesty's Colony of NOVA-CESAREA, or NEW-JERSEY, and Territories thereon depending, in AMERICA, Chancellor and Vice-Admiral in the same, &c.

The humble Address of the Representatives of the said Colony, in General Assembly convened.

May it please your Excellency:

We, His Majesty's loyal and dutiful subjects, the Representatives of the Colony of New-Jersey, in General Assembly convened, have considered your Excellency's speech at the opening of the present session.

We sincerely lament the unhappy situation of publick affairs; and we regret that, though we have presented a dutiful petition to His Majesty, yet we have little prospect of his favourable interposition for the removal of those grievances under which we suffer, in common with his other American subjects.

There is nothing we desire with greater anxiety than a reconciliation with our Parent State, on constitutional principles. But if the resolution of the House of Commons, of the 20th of February, could, without departing from the duty we owe to our constituents, have been accepted, or made the basis of a negotiation which would probably have led to any plan of accommodation, we have been and still are greatly mistaken.

We are surprised to hear that any persons could have advised your Excellency to have sought an asylum on board of one of His Majesty's ships. We cannot imagine that your Excellency could have had any just reason to fear any insult or improper treatment from the people of the Colony; and if your retreat would necessarily be attributed to either the effect or well-grounded apprehensions of violence, and be productive of mischiefs to the inhabitants, however such advisers may deserve to be esteemed your "best friends," we cannot suppose them to be really so to the Colony.

Your Excellency's safety, or that of any of the officers of Government, we apprehend to be in no danger. We place our own safety in that protection which the laws of our Country and the executive powers of the Government afford to all the King's subjects. It is the only asylum which we have to fly to; and we make no doubt but that it will be, as it hitherto hath been, found fully equal to the purpose both of securing your Excellency and others. And we hope to find that the officers of Government will conduct themselves so prudently as not to invite any ill usage, and that they will not make any supposed "infatuation, or disorder" of the times, a pretence to leave the Province, and thereby endeavour to subject the inhabitants to any calamities.

We know of no sentiments of independency that are, by men of any consequence, openly avowed; nor do we approve of any essays tending to encourage such a measure. We have already expressed our detestation of such opinions, and we have so frequently and fully declared our sentiments on this subject, and in particular in our petition to the King at the last session of Assembly, that we should have thought ourselves, as at present we really deserve to be, exempt from all suspicion of this nature.

We have already resolved to support His Majesty's Government, and look upon it to be our duty to use our influence to promote peace, order, and good government.

By order of the House:

CORTLAND SKINNER, Speaker.

House of Assembly, November 29, 1775.

To which His Excellency was pleased to make the following answer:

GENTLEMEN: I return you my thanks for your resolution to support His Majesty's Government, and cannot but approve your determination to promote peace and good order.

I shall avoid, for the reasons I gave you in my speech, any remarks on your sentiments respecting the present unhappy situation of publick affairs, and shall transmit to His Majesty your opinion of the resolution of the House of Commons. Thus much, however, I would only observe, that if you really thought, or still think, that the making that resolution the basis of a negotiation would not have led to some plan of accommodation, on terms that Americans have heretofore solemnly and repeatedly declared would give them full content, then you have been and still are greatly mistaken.

Your surprise that any persons could advise me to seek an asylum, when so many Governours and Crown officers had been before compelled to do the like, is as extraordinary as your supposition that those persons must therefore be no friends to the Colony.

It gives me pleasure, however, to find that you make no doubt but that the laws of the Country, and the executive powers of the Government, will afford safety, and prove an asylum to all the King's subjects. On the strength of this assurance, His Majesty's officers, who have now the misfortune of being confined in Trenton, by some supposed unlawful authority, cannot hesitate to apply for that legal remedy, an habeas corpus; nor can any of His Majesty's Justices of the Supreme Court have the least scruple to grant it, nor ought any one to doubt "but that it will (as you say) be found fully equal to the purpose."

Your hope that the officers of Government will conduct themselves prudently, will, I trust, be greatly gratified, at least by some of them, if a manly, conscientious discharge of their duty to their King and Country, as far as may be in their power, is consistent with your ideas of prudence. As they have not even made the real disorders of the times a pretence for leaving the Province, it seems rather unkind to intimate any suspicion that they would do it on a "supposed disorder of the times;" equally unjustifiable is it to insinuate that any of them would be so absurd as to "invite ill usage," or so wicked as to "endeavour to subject the inhabitants to any calamities." But such suspicions and such language must, I suppose, be attributed to the fashion of the times.

In speaking of the sentiments of independency, openly avowed by some men of present consequence, I had not the most distant thought that you would consider the remark as at all meant for or applicable to your House. If any faith is to be put (as you say) in your frequent and full declarations of your sentiments on this subject, you certainly deserve to be exempt from all suspicions of that nature. I even intimated, in my speech, that you must entertain "an abhorrence of such design." Your present disapprobation of the essays tending to encourage that measure gives me great satisfaction, and I sincerely wish that both you and I may, ere long, have the happiness to see those, who either openly or privately avow sentiments of independency, men of no consequence.

On motion made, that this House do send a message to his Excellency, requesting him to dissolve the present Assembly at the end of the present session, and give the people another choice of Representatives: The Previous Question was demanded, "Whether the said question shall now be put or not." It passed as follows, viz:

Yeas.	Yeas.	Yeas.
Mr. Lawrence,	Mr. Gibbon,	Mr. Tucker,

— Wednesday, December 6, 1775.

The House met.

The engrossed Message to his Excellency was read and compared.

Ordered, That the same be sent accordingly.

And the said Message is as follows, viz:

House of Assembly, December 6, 1775.

Ordered, That Mr. Hinchman and Mr. Mehelm do wait on his Excellency, and, in answer to his Message of the 21st of November, inform him that this House have taken the same into their serious consideration, and although they entertain the most grateful sense of the attention that has been shown to the wishes of the Colony in the allowance of the Loan Act, and of His Majesty's gracious inclinations to give "every indulgence that can consist with the true principles of commerce and the Constitution," and are sincerely disposed to grant His Majesty's requisitions, as far as the circumstances of the Colony will allow; yet at this time the House cannot think it prudent to go into any increase of the salaries of the officers of Government, nor do they apprehend that it will be beneficial for his government over us to settle them longer than for the usual time, or expedient to erect buildings at present, better to accommodate the branches of the Legislature.

That the House hopes, when it is considered that on his Excellency's arrival to this Government, the salary was raised from one thousand Pounds to one thousand two hundred Pounds per annum, which has been continued ever since; that sixty Pounds a year has constantly been granted to provide a house for his Excellency's residence; that the salaries of the Justices of the Supreme Court have been lately raised from fifty to one hundred and fifty Pounds per annum; that the other Crown officers either have salaries given to them or fees equal to the importance of their service; that there are places provided for the Legislature to meet and do the publick business at Perth-Amboy, and that although such provision is not made at Burlington, yet no considerable inconvenience has attended it—when his Excellency considers these matters, he will, we hope, be of opinion with us, that the House has shown a disposition to make such suitable provision for the support of Government as, from time to time, was in their power, which nothing has retarded more than the inconvenience of two seats of Government, a circumstance they sincerely wish was removed. But the House assures his Excellency that, at a future day, when this inconvenience shall be remedied, and the unnatural controversy now subsisting is happily settled, they will show their readiness to comply with every just requisition, and demonstrate that they ever mean their actions shall correspond with their professions.

By order of the House:

RICHARD SMITH, Clerk.

Ordered, That Mr. Kinsey and Mr. Eldridge do wait on the Council, and inquire whether the Council have any thing further before them; if not, that this House proposes to apply to his Excellency for a dismission.

THE HUMBLE ADDRESS OF HIS MAJESTY'S COUNCIL FOR THE PROVINCE OF NEW-JERSEY, TO HIS EXCELLENCY GOVERNOUR FRANKLIN.

Council Chamber, November 25, 1775.

May it please your Excellency:

We beg leave to express the satisfaction we feel in the opportunity you have given us of meeting your Excellency in General Assembly at this time, for the despatch of such business as the exigencies of the Province require, and thank you for that freedom with which you communicate to us, from time to time, such parts of the letters you receive from His Majesty's Ministers, as may be of consequence to the welfare of this Province.

It is with the greatest pleasure we assure your Excellency, that we know of no reason to doubt but that the confidence you are pleased to say you have in the affection and regard of the good people of this Colony is well founded. We are sorry, however, to observe that, notwithstanding this confidence and trust, your Excellency expresses some degree of apprehension as to the safety of your own person, and the persons of the other officers of the Crown. We can with truth declare, that we are totally ignorant as to any circumstances, in this Province, that may give rise to such an apprehension, and are happy in believing that it must be without any real foundation.

You are pleased to call on us for an explicit declaration of our sentiments respecting those aims at an Independency on Great Britain, which you say are at this time openly avowed by some men of present consequence. In answer to which, we make no hesitation to assure your Excellency, that we have the utmost abhorrence of any design whatever to subvert that happy Constitution of Government under which not only this, but every other Colony in America, hath long enjoyed the blessings of security and prosperity; and that we will, by every means in our power, exert ourselves in the defence of it, and in defence of your Excellency and the other officers of the Crown, acting under the influence and by virtue of that inestimable Constitution.

We flatter ourselves that your Excellency will not doubt but that we shall be ready, on all occasions, to join you in the promotion of peace, order, and good government, and eagerly improve every opportunity that may tend to the restoring this Province to its former state of happiness and tranquillity.

By order of the House: JOHN STEVENS, Speaker.

To which his Excellency was pleased to make the following reply:

GENTLEMEN: I am greatly obliged to you for the sentiments of regard expressed in this address, and heartily thank you for the assurances you give me of your readiness to exert yourselves in the defence of our happy Constitution and of the officers of the Crown in this Province.

At the same time, it gives me concern that I cannot agree with you in opinion, that there are not any circumstances in this Province, which may justify some degree of apprehension, as to the safety of myself and the other officers of Government. It is true, I have not actually seen the Associations signed, nor the orders and resolutions of Congresses or Committees issued, yet I cannot, on that account, without being guilty of a subterfuge, which gentlemen of your conduct must disapprove, pretend a total ignorance either of their contents or of their effects, both in this and the neighbouring Colonies. From what has already happened, the officers of the Crown will be naturally led to form a judgment of what may happen. Such of them, therefore, as have conscientiously done their duty here, must of course have some reason to expect the same fate with those who have done their duty elsewhere. It must be allowed, however, that those who, from timidity or other motives, have been induced to pursue a different conduct, may have present safety; but then, as it must be at the expense of their honour, it is not likely that there will be found many of them who will choose to pay such a price for such a consideration; nor is it probable, if they should, that they would meet with your approbation.

MESSAGE TO THE GOVERNOUR FROM THE COUNCIL.

Council Chamber, December 4, 1775.

May it please your Excellency:

When we consider the uninterrupted harmony which for many years hath subsisted between the Governour and Council of this Province; when we reflect upon the repeated assurances we have received of your approbation of and confidence in our unwearied endeavours zealously to discharge the duties of our station; and as we flatter ourselves the constant tenor of our conduct towards your Excellency has ever manifested the most respectful regard to your person and station; it is with no small degree of pain and regret we find ourselves constrained to lay before your Excellency some observations on the reply you were pleased to make to the Council's address in answer to your speech at the opening of the present session of Assembly; more especially at this unhappy period, when even the appearance of disunion between the several branches of the Legislature ought carefully to be avoided. Your reply, Sir, though rather darkly penned, contains, we apprehend, some reflections and innuendoes which our consciences tell us we do not deserve, and which we cannot, therefore, with honour, or due regard to our station, pass unnoticed.

Your Excellency was pleased, in your speech, to ask us whether we could answer for your personal safety. We replied, in our address, in such plain and open language as we thought could not have been misunderstood, could not have admitted any doubt or cavil, nor the most distant hint of subterfuge, that you and the other officers of the Crown are, in our apprehension, perfectly safe in this Province. From persons who have too much at stake not to dread the consequence of a total subversion of Government, order, and authority; who, while they lament the publick disorders of the present times, are anxiously studious to lessen their effects on the inhabitants of this Province, such a declaration might, we think, have been received with joy and gladness by your Excellency, rather than with insinuations of your doubts and apprehensions, drawn from the language of Associations, the orders and resolutions of Congresses and Committees, or from the effects of either of them, in this or the neighbouring Colonies. We trusted that you would have congratulated us on the degree of serenity still existing in this Province, rather than damp our hopes by foreboding what may happen here from what has happened elsewhere, or by throwing an unworthy reflection on the inhabitants of this Province, in supposing that such officers of the Crown who have or shall conscientiously discharge their duty need be under any doubts of the protection, support, and applause of the people.

It is not necessary or proper for us to extend our views to other Colonies, in order to form our sentiments or opinions of the conduct and behaviour of officers of the Crown. With respect to Crown officers in general in this Province, we cannot but think it an ungenerous insinuation that there are any who have departed from the line of their duty, from the impulse of timidity or other motives, in view to present safety. Such aspersions, permit us to say, ought not to be thrown out, but on the surest grounds that such characters really exist amongst us.

If the return for the affection and regard which your Excellency acknowledges you have experienced from all ranks of people in this Province is to be general calumny and detraction, it is not likely there will be found many who will choose to pay "such a price for such a consideration."

We promised ourselves that the experience you have long had of our zeal in the cause of publick justice, the honour of Government, and support of the Constitution, might have induced more confidence in our assertions than the language of your reply seems to convey. However, Sir, if ever we again have the honour of a reply from you to an address, we trust, that whilst the Council of New-Jersey preserve a conduct which calumny dares not openly asperse, though they should happen to differ in opinion with your Excellency as to the real circumstances of the Province, they will escape every insinuation of subterfuge or insincerity; which, however applicable to secret foes, must be heard with disdain by the known friends and real well-wishers to this Country.

MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOUR TO THE COUNCIL.

December 6, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: The uninterrupted harmony which has subsisted between me and the Council has been one of the most satisfactory events of my administration. It has been my constant inclination and endeavour to preserve it by every means consistent with my duty. My conduct to you, as a body and as individuals, has ever been such as to manifest a disposition to oblige you as far as was in my power. If this has been hitherto the case, which I believe none of you will deny, it is not probable that I should, at this unhappy period, wantonly, and without cause, do any thing that might endanger that harmony, or occasion "even the appearance of disunion." Why you should therefore, of a sudden, apprehend that I meant, in my reply to your address, to cast any reflections on your conduct, I cannot conceive. If my expressions are, as you say, darkly penned, that circumstance might have afforded you a just pretence for asking an explanation, but surely not for an unhesitating application to yourselves of any matter "which your consciences tell you that you do not deserve."

Your address was perfectly satisfactory to me, except that part in which you gave your opinion respecting the personal safety of the officers of this Government. I should have been very happy if I could have joined you in that opinion, and should not then have failed congratulating you on so joyful an occasion. It did not appear to me that it was warranted by the circumstances really existing in the Province, and it evidently carried with it an implication that the degree of apprehension mentioned in my speech was ill founded. As nothing was further from my intentions than the exciting of false alarms, I did not choose to lie even under the suspicion. On that account, I thought it necessary to particularize some of the reasons which induced me to differ in sentiments with you on that point. Whether you or I have the best grounds for our opinion, others will judge. I expressed not the least doubt of your thinking the opinion you have just and right, but I thought it proper, at the same time, to assure you that I could not agree with you in that opinion, "without being guilty of a subterfuge, which gentlemen of your candour must disapprove." Why you should, from these words, suppose that I meant a distant hint that you had been guilty of such a subterfuge, I cannot imagine; especially as your "consciences tell you that you do not deserve it." Nor can I conceive that you have the least pretence for taxing me with "throwing an unworthy reflection on the inhabitants of this Province." Whatever I may think applicable to some individuals on the present occasion, I have said nothing which can, without manifest perversion of my words, be applied to the people at large. My real opinion of them, and my confidence in their affection and regard, are too fully and clearly expressed in my speech, (and my conduct has been conformable thereto,) not to defeat any purpose that may be intended by such an unworthy suggestion.

Though I think as favourable of the Crown officers in general in this Province as you can do, yet I am not able to comprehend that it must therefore be an "ungenerous insinuation" to intimate that some of them may have been induced, by timidity or other motives, to "depart from the line of their duty." That some have actually departed from the line of their duty, from some motives or other, is a matter too publickly known to justify any attempt at concealment, particularly as you have at this session advised me to suspend one of the most considerable of them from his office, on that account only.

I entirely agree with you, that "aspersions ought not to be thrown out but on the surest grounds." Why then, have you, without any foundation whatever, thrown out that a "general calumny and detraction" on "all ranks of people in this Province" is to be found in my reply? Is it because I there told you that "it is not likely that there will be found many of them who will choose to pay such a price (as their honour) for such a consideration" as their safety? Or is it because I said that it was not "probable (if they should) that they would meet with your approbation?" Or is it merely to give you some pretence for introducing an otherwise inapplicable quotation?

Far be it from me, however we may differ in sentiments on particular points, to pretend any doubt of your zeal in the cause "of publick justice, the honour of Government, and support of the Constitution." I have never given the least intimation of the kind; but, on the contrary, I have had frequent occasion, and never omitted any opportunity of signifying my approbation of your conduct. Even the reply at which you have so causelessly taken offence contains "my hearty thanks for the assurances you gave me of your readiness to exert yourselves in the defence of the Constitution," &c. But if you expect an implicit "confidence in your assertions," even when they may happen to appear to me evidently not well founded, you expect more than is possible for you to obtain. I ever wish you to give me your sentiments fully and freely on all occasions. They will always have weight with me, if not too repugnant to my judgment. But if, from my own knowledge of things, I entertain a different opinion, I shall not hesitate to tell you so, nor to give you my reasons, even though I should be previously certain that my expressions would be again tortured for reflections and innuendoes never intended.

Were it proper for me to mention here the steps I took, in a private way, to prevent all cause of dissatisfaction on account of the exceptionable part of your address, before it was presented in form, no one could be at the least loss to determine which of us have given the strongest proofs of a sincere disposition to avoid "even the appearance of disunion." But of this circumstance, though well known to some of your members, you, as a body, may, perhaps, with a specious propriety, declare yourselves "totally ignorant."

WILLIAM FRANKLIN.

GOVERNOUR FRANKLIN TO THE EARL OF DARTMOUTH.

[Secret and confidential.]

Perth-Amboy, January 5, 1776.

MY LORD: I did myself the honour to write to your Lordship on the 3d of last month, from Burlington, and to enclose copies of my speech, and the Council and Assembly's addresses, at the opening of the session of General Assembly, together with sundry other papers. The minutes of the Assembly not being yet printed, I enclose the written copy of them, which I received daily from the clerk during the session.

Several petitions were presented to the Assembly, praying them to discourage any attempt to promote an Independence on Great Britain, and that they would grant the support for His Majesty's Government, in this Colony, as usual. Their resolves, respecting the first, your Lordship will see in their minutes of November 28, which are nearly similar to those before passed in the Assembly of Pennsylvania, on the like occasion. It seems, indeed, to be the general opinion of those with whom I converse, that the majority of people, in both Provinces, are greatly averse to an Independence, and, if they could once be convinced that their present leaders have such intentions, would immediately unite to oppose them in every such attempt. But the danger seems to be that the design will be carried on by such degrees, and under such pretences, as not to be perceived by the people, in general, till too late for resistance. That some have such designs, is too evident from the publications in those newspapers which are more immediately under the influence of the Congress and their adherents, if not by the system of measures which have been uniformly pursued by them. Some of those papers I enclose for your Lordship's perusal.

The Assembly granted the usual support of Government, but they evaded complying at present with His Majesty's requisition to them on that subject, communicated in my Message of the 21st of November. The reasons they thought proper to give, for their non-compliance, are contained in their Message of the 6th of December, which being the day they were to be prorogued, agreeably to their and the Council's request, I did not think it expedient to delay the session longer, merely on that account, or I should have pointed out the absurdity and insufficiency of those reasons. However, I shall not fail doing it at the next session, when, perhaps, it may be of some service, which there was no probability of its being at the last.

By the minutes of December 5, your Lordship will perceive that the Assembly had it in their intentions to petition His Majesty again on the subject of the present unhappy disputes; but after the draught of an address was prepared, which would probably have passed the House, a Committee of the General Congress at Philadelphia came in great haste to Burlington, desired admittance into the Assembly, which being granted, they harangued the House for about an hour on the subject, and persuaded them to drop the design. That your Lordship may have some idea of the arguments they used on this occasion, I have obtained a copy of the notes taken by a gentleman present, which contain the substance of the speech of Mr. Dickinson, of Philadelphia. The other members of the Committee were Mr. Jay, of New-York, and Mr. Wythe, of Virginia. I have not seen the draught of the address, but I am told that it contained some plan or proposals for an accommodation, and that it was this part which alarmed the Congress, and occasioned them to take so extraordinary a step to prevent its being sent; they being of opinion that no Colony ought to presume to make separate proposals, or to take separate measures, on the present occasion, but to leave the whole to their management.

A day or two before the end of the session, I received a very unexpected attack from the Council. The pretence was, an expression in my reply to their address; but as the expression alluded to was very far from warranting any such interpretation, I cannot but imagine it was intended merely ad populum. However, if that was their aim, they have been greatly disappointed, for the purport and language of their Message is much disapproved by all ranks of people. Even one of the members of Assembly, who is far from being a friend of mine, speaking of it in the House, called it "an unwarrantable, ungenerous, and ungentelemanly attack on the Governour." The truth is, as I have reason to believe, that three of the leading members of the Council are strongly inclined to favour the measures of the Congress, and that the rest who were present have a leaning the same way, except two or three, at most, and even these think it necessary to their safety to observe a kind of trimming conduct. A seeming difference, therefore, with the Governour, who publicly and privately avowed his disapprobation of those measures, would be likely to answer their purpose at such a time as the present. My situation is, indeed, somewhat particular, and not a little difficult, having no more than one or two, among the principal officers of Government, to whom I can now speak confidentially on publick affairs.

Notwithstanding the declarations of the Council and Assembly, in their addresses, with regard to the perfect safety of the officers of the Crown in this Province, yet, in less than a fortnight after the session was over, two Judges and one Justice of the Peace, who live in three different Counties, have been seized by order of Committees, and one of them is a member of the Assembly. What is to be their fate I know not; but I cannot learn that they are even charged with having taken any active part against the measures of the Congress, though they have refused signing Associations, and spoke against some of their proceedings.

I have suspended William Alexander, Esq., (claiming to be and commonly called Earl of Stirling), from the Council, until His Majesty's pleasure shall be known. The reasons will appear in the minutes of Privy Council, now copying, and which will be transmitted by the next packet. If His Majesty shall think proper to remove him, I shall then recommend such person as I may think most suitable to serve the Crown in that capacity.

Since correspondence by letter is become so precarious, and, indeed, dangerous, I obtain very little more intelligence of publick matters than what is to be found in the newspapers. But I find it is generally believed that the Congress have well-grounded assurances of assistance from France, if not from Spain, and that they are determined to apply for foreign aid, if they find Government likely to employ foreign troops against them. It is certain that they meet with little or no difficulty in getting powder, &c., from the French Islands, and I have reason to think it is with the connivance of the French Governours there. It is also suggested that the French Ambassador, in England, has immediate and full intelligence of what passes in the Privy or Cabinet Council, and conveys the same to some person in London, connected with America. It has been likewise intimated that a French fleet is expected in the River St. Lawrence, as early as the season will admit; and we have certain intelligence of a considerable body of French Troops being arrived in the West-Indies.

Enclosed is a copy of a paper said to be wrote in New-England, and sent to all the sea-coast Towns in North-America, to persuade the people to suffer their Towns to be destroyed, rather than supply the King's ships with provisions.

In Sussex County, in this Province, there are, I am told, a considerable body of people who are called Tories, and, it is said, they have been lately furnishing themselves with arms and ammunition, and that the Committee of Safety are to meet next Tuesday, at Princeton, to consult on meatures for disarming them, &c. The Provincial Congress here have given leave to some persons to export country produce, on condition of importing the value in powder and other military stores. A copy of one of their resolves for that purpose is enclosed. I have no doubt but a great quantity will be smuggled into some of the harbours on the New-Jersey shore, from Sandy-Hook to Cape-May, particularly into Barnegat, Little and Great Egg Harbour, unless prevented by the King's ships.

Two of the New-Jersey Delegates to the Continental Congress (Messrs. Kinsey and De Hart) have resigned their seats, on pretence of inconveniency; but it is generally attributed to apprehension of danger. I enclose a copy of the latter's resignation, that your Lordship may have an opportunity of seeing what extravagant ideas of the measures of Government these men endeavour to instil into the minds of the people.

For further information, respecting the publick transactions in this and the other Colonies, I must beg leave to refer your Lordship to the enclosed newspapers, and to the printed journal of the proceedings of the Congress, sent herewith.

The Assembly did not think proper to make any further attack on me, on account of the extract of my letter to your Lordship, printed in the Parliamentary Register; for which they have given some reasons (probably not the true ones) in their minutes of November 30. But I am told that they have obtained a copy of the whole of that letter, though only a part was laid before Parliament. By what means this has been done, I cannot learn; but I find it is suspected that it has been obtained by some management of Mr. De Berdt, and that this has been one reason for the Assembly's appointing him their agent. I think it proper to give your Lordship this hint, as it is represented by his friends here that he has some share of your Lordship's confidence and regard, though, perhaps, without any just foundation. At any rate, as I have no doubt but some measures will be, if they are not already taken, to influence clerks in office, I hope this letter will be communicated only to His Majesty's most confidential servants.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect and regard, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient and most humble servant,

WM. FRANKLIN.

Right Honourable the Earl of Dartmouth, &c., &c.

[Papers enclosed in the preceding Letter from Governour Franklin to the Earl of Dartmouth.]

PETITION TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The Petition of divers Freeholders of the County of BURLINGTON respectfully sheweth:

That your Petitioners are deeply impressed with a sense of the calamitous state of publick affairs, in the unhappy contest which at present subsists between Great Britain and her Colonies. That they sincerely lament that either Country should dwell so much on their own dignity or importance as to delay, for one moment, to make such reasonable propositions as should lead to a happy reconciliation of the present differences. That your Petitioners are greatly alarmed at the sentiments of independency which are openly avowed by too many people at this time; your Petitioners conceiving that, should such an event take place, the consequence would be the destruction of the interests of the whole British Empire, and a perpetual bar to every door of peace and reconciliation between the Parent State and the Colonies. That your Petitioners conceive that the expenses of the opposition, against the oppressive measures of the British Ministry and Parliament, will fall most heavy on the landed interest, being the only permanent estate; and that your Petitioners, as a part of that interest, have an undoubted right to be heard, and their reasonable requests considered, with that attention which their situation particularly merits. That, in the opinion of your petitioners, an effectual opposition may be made against the measures now pursuing by the Ministry and Parliament of Great Britain, without changing the constitutional form of Government, in the British Empire established; and that your Petitioners have not the least desire that the union of the Colonies, in that opposition, should be broken, which they think the establishment of an independency would effect. That as the King has objected to the receiving of the Petition of the Congress, (as we suppose,) because it did not come through the accustomed and constitutional channel, with due submission to the honourable House, it is the sense of your Petitioners that that mode ought to be tried, and the reasons why we cannot accede to the proposition of the House of Commons, on the 20th day of February last, should modestly be set forth; at the same time declaring our desire of a perpetual union, and our willingness to contribute our just proportion to the support of the whole Empire, according to the utmost of our ability, whenever constitutionally required so to do.

Your Petitioners therefore pray that your honourable House will take into consideration the subject-matter of this Petition, and make such resolves as may discourage an independency, should such a measure be attempted, and also make such provision for the support of the civil Government of this Colony as heretofore; your Petitioners hereby making their solemn protest against the change of the form of Government, as by law established, and declaring that it is not, nor never was their intention to vest any Congress or body of men whatsoever with that power.

NOTES OF WHAT MR. DICKINSON SAID BEFORE THE HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

(The words scored are his own words.)

He began with informing the House that the Congress, alarmed at the reports of the House going to petition the King, had taken the matter into their serious consideration; the result was, that he and his colleagues were deputed by Congress to wait on the House. He then began with the first Congress; their first meeting to appease the disorders occasioned by oppressive acts of Parliament; their humble Petition and Declaration of Rights, which was approved by all America, particularly by this House, which adopted, in great part, the very words; but the Congress petition was rejected, and Britain prepared for war. She had been taught to believe we were a rope of sand, and would not fight. To divide us, the resolution of the 20th of February was sent out, which Congress rejected, Pennsylvania rejected, and this House, to their honour, in a most manly manner, in their excellent address to their Governour. In the spring, General Gage sent a detachment to Lexington, which, without cause, put to death some Americans; but, in the end, they were forced to retreat shamefully.

When the new Congress met, a general ferment was raised through the Colonies, and an universal union. Had the Congress then drawn the sword, and thrown away the scabbard, all lovers of liberty, all honest and virtuous men, would have applauded them; but they again humbly petitioned, sent it by the Hon. Mr. Penn, which he would not have the House believe was rejected, because no answer was given. Said no answer was ever given to petitions unless received on the throne; said that the conduct of Parliament and Administration would be the only answer; suggested that it was received, and some proposals or an act of Parliament would be the consequence. He then went on: But it was necessary to convince Britain that we would fight, and were not a rope of sand. Therefore, an Army was formed, &c. Expedition against Canada, &c. Success attended us every where. The savages, who were to be let loose to murder our women and children, were our friends; the Canadians fought in our cause; and Canada, from whence armies were to overrun us, is conquered in as few months as it took Britain years. We have nothing to fear but from Europe, three thousand miles distant; but a Country so united cannot be conquered.

The eyes of all Europe are upon us. Until this controversy, the strength and importance of this Country were not known. The nations of Europe look with jealous eyes on the struggle. Britain has natural enemies—France and Spain. Should we be unsuccessful in the next campaign, France will not sit still and suffer Britain to conquer. He then bragged of our success and courage. Said nothing would bring Britain to terms but unity and bravery. That all Britain wanted was to procure separate petitions, which we should avoid. It would break our union. We would become a rope of sand, he repeated, as if to frighten; that neither mercy nor justice was to be expected from Britain. He again complimented the House on their former petition and noble answer to the Governour, in their address on the resolution of the 20th of February, and entreated us not to petition, but rest on our former petition and that of United America. He spoke more than half an hour.

Mr. Jay said we had nothing to expect from the mercy or justice of Britain. That petitions were now not the means; vigour and unanimity the only means. That the petition of United America, presented by Congress, ought to be relied on, others unnecessary, and hoped the House would not think otherwise. He spoke about twelve minutes.

Mr. Wythe spoke about eight minutes, to the same purpose.

REASONS WHY THE AMERICANS SHOULD NOT FURNISH THE KING'S SHIPS WITH PROVISIONS, WRITTEN BY SOME PERSON IN NEW-ENGLAND, AND SENT TO ALL THE SEA-PORT TOWNS, OCTOBER, 1775.

1. The inconsistency of fitting out privateers, at a great expense, to intercept ships laden with provisions for the enemy, and at the same time recommending it to each particular sea-port Town to furnish, at least not to prevent them from furnishing the men of war with all provisions and necessaries, is so manifest that it would be idle to dwell upon it.

2. If it be said that it is prudent, by this act of compliance, to save the Towns from cannonade, it may be answered, the men of war will certainly make further demands, and, on the same principles, their demands must be complied with.

3. Is it not reasonable to suppose, when the ministerial instruments reap such fruits from their menaces, that they will point out to their masters the weak part of America, and, consequently, that they will be encouraged to persist in their plan?

4. Is it not probable, or almost certain, if one Town bids them defiance, that the rest would be ashamed not to follow the example? and, vice versa, if the sanction of the Congress is given to any degree of compliance and submission to their terms, is it not probable that some one Town will avail itself of the sanction, and extend their complacency in proportion to the magnitude of the threats? That another and another will plead precedent, and thus, ultimately, the enemy will be enabled, by our own assistance, to continue the war to our destruction?

5. Is it not certain that if once the spirit prevails, of denying every kind of refreshment to the ships of war, they cannot possibly keep their station; that diseases and desertions of the crews would, in a short time, unman the fleet, and, consequently, the distresses of America be brought to a speedy issue? but, if it becomes an established rule to furnish the ships with necessaries, may not the war and distresses of America be prolonged ad infinitum?

6. Is it, in fact, a clear case that ships of war can, with so great facility, destroy sea-port Towns? If, indeed, they have force sufficient to land,* they may effect this destruction; but those who suppose it can be done by dint of cannonade must be very little acquainted with the effects of cannon. Cannon make a formidable noise to ears unused to the sound; but Towns will receive inconsiderable damage from the utmost fury of any ships of war which can come into our harbours.

But, in our present circumstances, (taking it for granted that ships and cannon can work all this mischief,) is it not necessary to inculcate the principle of making partial sacrifices for the general good? for, if this principle is not established, could a poor defenceless Town be censured for submission to any terms which their lords may choose to dictate?

Would any circumstances so effectually reduce the Ministry to despair, as showing an indifference about the existence or destruction of our Towns?

EXTRACT FROM THE MINUTES OF THE PROVINCIAL CONGRESS OF NEW-JERSEY.

Application having been made to this Congress, by Mr. Richard Westcott, of Gloucester County, for leave to freight a Vessel to some foreign port, with the produce of this Colony, to purchase Gunpowder and other military stores for the use of this Province, offering to give sufficient security that the nett proceeds of such produce shall be laid out in the purchase of such Powder and military stores; the whole thereof to be landed in this Colony, (the danger of the seas and enemies only excepted,) and that this Congress or the Committee of Safety are to have the election to purchase the same: And this Congress having taken the said proposal into consideration, and the same appearing not to be repugnant to, but strictly consistent with the spirit and design of the Resolves of the Continental Congress for encouraging the importation of those necessary articles; and proposals of this nature, under certain restrictions as to the number of Vessels to be employed on this occasion, appearing to this Congress to be of publick utility at this critical time: It is, therefore, unanimously

Resolved, That Mr. Westcott's proposals be accepted, provided that sufficient security be given to the Committee of the County of Gloucester, that the same be punctually and duly complied with, (subject, nevertheless, to the above exceptions,) and that no other Goods or Merchandise, of any sort, be imported in such Vessel.

Mr. Richard Somers having made the same proposals, subject to the same conditions as above, it is therefore ordered, unanimously, that Mr. Somers's proposals be also accepted.

MR. DE HART'S RESIGNATION.

Elizabethtown, November 13, 1775.

Gentlemen of the General Assembly of the Colony of New-JERSEY:

Your resolution, of the 24th of January past, having appointed me, with others, to attend the Continental Congress of the Colonies, then intended to be held at Philadelphia, in May following, with instructions to propose and agree to every constitutional measure for the accommodation of the unhappy differences then subsisting between our Mother Country and the Colonies: In obedience to the said resolution, with the other gentlemen, I attended the said Congress, but have not been able, by any reasonable and constitutional measure, to obtain that accommodation so ardently wished for by the House; on the contrary, His Majesty seemeth to have turned a deaf ear to all the supplications of his loyal Colonists, and his Ministers and Parliament have denounced vengeance against all those in America who refuse absolute submission to acts of Parliament, in all cases whatsoever, and have caused the blood of numbers of His Majesty's most loyal American subjects to be spilled, which, with other arbitrary and barbarous actions, hath compelled the Colonies to arm in their own defence, and hath brought them to the verge of a civil war with the Parent State; so that all prospect of procuring an accommodation, by constitutional measures, seemeth to be nearly at an end.

The peculiar circumstances of my family hath prevented me from attending the Congress for some time past; and the same still continuing, renders it uncertain when I shall be able to attend. This and other reasons, needless to be mentioned, induces me earnestly to desire and request that the honourable House will now be pleased to appoint another to attend the Continental Congress in my stead.

I am, Gentlemen, your most obliged and most obedient humble servant,

JOHN DE HART.

CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, Tuesday, September 5, 1775.

Agreeable to adjournment, a number of the Members met; but there not being sufficient to enter upon business, the Congress was adjourned from day to day until Wednesday, the 13th.

Wednesday, September 13, 1775.

The Congress met according to adjournment.

The Province of Georgia, having appointed Delegates to represent them in Congress, and three of the said Delegates attending, their Credentials were produced, read, and approved, as follows:

"GEORGIA.

"The alarming and critical situation of affairs upon the Continent of America having, at length, roused the attention of this Province, and the several inhabitants thereof being desirous of uniting with their Sister Colonies in the great and important cause, a general election was held throughout the Province, for Delegates to sit in Provincial Congress; and the said Delegates having so met in Savannah, on the fourth day of July, proceeded upon the consideration of such business as appeared to be fit and necessary; and, among other things, they made choice of five Delegates to represent this Province in the Grand Continental Congress, now sitting in Philadelphia, viz: Archibald Bullock, Esq., John Houston, Esq., the Rev. Dr. Zubly, Noble Wimberly Jones, Esq., and Lyman Hall, Esq. Now, therefore, be it known, and we, the several Delegates for the different Parishes and Districts in this Province, in Provincial Congress assembled, do hereby declare the said Archibald Bullock and John Houston, Esqrs., the Rev. Dr. Zubly, Noble Wimberly Jones and Lyman Hall, Esqrs., duly and fairly elected as the Delegates for this Province; and we do authorize and require the said Archibald Bullock and John Houston, Esqrs., the Rev. Dr. Zubly, Noble Wimberly Jones and Lyman Hall, Esqrs., or any three of them, immediately to repair to the said City of Philadelphia, and there to take their seats, as the Representatives of the Province of Georgia, in the General Congress now sitting, to do, transact, join, and concur with the several Delegates from the other Colonies and Provinces upon this Continent, in all such matters and things as shall appear eligible and fit, at this alarming time, for the preservation and defence of our rights and liberties, and for the restoration of harmony, upon constitutional principles, between Great Britain and America.

"And we give and grant to the said Archibald Bullock and John Houston, Esqrs., the Rev. Dr. Zubly, Noble Wimberly Jones and Lyman Hall, Esqrs., or any three of them, in whose fidelity, honour, and ability, we very much confide, our full and whole power in the premises; and do promise and engage, in behalf of ourselves and our constituents, respectively, (the inhabitants of the Province of Georgia,) under the sacred ties of virtue, honour, and love of our Country, to abide by, enforce, and carry into execution, or endeavour, at the risk and expense of life and property, so to do, all and whatsoever our said Delegates, or any three of them, in concurrence with the rest of the Delegates from the several Colonies and Provinces upon this Continent, shall resolve and agree upon, or as shall be agreed and resolved upon by the said Continental Congress, now sitting in Philadelphia aforesaid, while our said Delegates, or any three of them, shall be so sitting.

"Signed in Provincial Congress, this 15th day of July, 1775, by fifty-three Members."

The Delegates from Virginia, appointed by a Convention of that Colony, at Richmond, August 11, 1775, produced their Credentials, which were read and approved, as follows:

"VIRGINIA, IN CONVENTION, August 11, 1775.

"The Convention being about to proceed to the choice of Deputies to represent this Colony in General Congress, Edmund Pendleton, Esq., expressed his most grateful acknowledgments for the honour done him in two former appointments to that important trust, but, on account of the declining state of his health, entreated to be excused from the present nomination; which excuse being accepted,

"Resolved, unanimously, That the thanks of this Convention are justly due to George Washington, Patrick Henry, and Edmund Pendleton, Esqrs., three of the worthy Deputies who represented this Colony in the late Continental Congress, for their faithful discharge of that important trust; and this body are only induced to dispense with their future services of the like nature, by the appointment of the two former to other offices in the publick service incompatible with their attendance on this, and the infirm state of health of the latter,

"The Convention then proceeded to the appointment of Deputies to represent this Colony in General Congress, for one year, and the members having prepared tickets, with the names of the Deputies to be appointed, and put the same into the ballot-box, Mr. Robert Carter Nicholas, Mr. Cary, Mr. Pendleton, and Mr. Adams, were appointed to examine the ballot-box, and report upon whom the majority fell, who retired, and after some time, returned into Convention, and reported, that they had, according to order, examined the ballot-box, and that the numbers appeared as follows:

"For the Hon. Peyton Randolph , Esq.,	- - 89
"For the Hon. Richard Henry Lee , Esq.,	- 88
"For the Hon. Thomas Jefferson , Esq.,	- - 85
"For the Hon. Benjamin Harrison , Esq.,	- - 83
"For the Hon. Thomas Nelson , Esq.,	- - - 66
"For the Hon. Richard Bland , Esq.,	- - - 61
"For the Hon. George Wythe , Esq.,	- - - 58

"Resolved, That the said Peyton Randolph, Richard Henry Lee, Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Harrison, Thomas Nelson, Richard Bland, and George Wythe, Esqrs., be appointed Deputies to represent this Colony in General Congress for one year, and that they have power to meet and to adjourn for such time and to such place or places as may be thought most proper.

"Resolved, That the said Deputies, or any four of them, be a sufficient number to represent this Colony.

Saturday, August 12, 1775.

"Richard Bland, Esq., returned this Convention his most grateful acknowledgments for the great honour they had pleased a third time to confer on him, by appointing him one of the Deputies to represent this Colony in General Congress, and said that this fresh instance of their approbation was sufficient for an old man, almost deprived of sight, whose greatest ambition had ever been to receive the plaudit of his Country, whenever he should retire from the publick stage of life: That the honourable testimony he lately received of this approbation, joined with his present appointment, should ever animate him, as far as he was able, to support the glorious cause in which America is now engaged, but that his advanced age rendered him incapable of taking an active part in those weighty and important concerns which must necessarily be agitated in the great Council of the United Colonies; and therefore begging leave to decline the honour they had been pleased to confer on him, and desiring that some person, more fit and able, might supply his place.

"Resolved, unanimously, That the thanks of this Convention are justly due to the said Richard Bland, Esq., one of the worthy Deputies who represented this Colony in the late Continental Congress, for his faithful discharge of that important trust, and this body are only induced to dispense with his future services of the like nature, on account of his advanced age.

Tuesday, August 15, 1775.

"The Convention proceeded to the appointment of a Deputy to represent this Colony in General Congress, in the room of Richard Bland, Esq., who hath resigned; and the members having prepared tickets, with the name of the Deputy to be appointed, a Committee was appointed to examine the ballot-box, and report on whom the majority fell; who retired, and after some time, reported that the numbers stood as follows:

" Francis Lightfoot Lee , Esq.,	- - - - 37
" Carter Braxton , Esq.,	- - - - 36

"Resolved, That the said Francis Lightfoot Lee, Esq., be appointed a Deputy to represent this Colony in General Congress.

"JOHN TAZEWELL, Clerk of the Convention."

Also, the Delegates from Maryland, having been re-appointed by the Convention of their Colony at Annapolis,

"Resolved, That the Honourable Matthew Tilghman, Esq., and Thomas Johnson, Jun., Robert Goldsborough, William Paca, Samuel Chase, Thomas Stone, and John Hall, Esqrs., or any three or more of them, be Deputies to represent this Province in Continental Congress; and that they, or any three or more of them, have full and ample power to consent and agree to all measures which such Congress shall deem necessary and effectual to obtain a redress of American grievances; and, further, we do authorize our said Deputies to represent and act for this Province in any Continental Congress which may be held before the 25th day of March next.

"G. DUVAL, Clerk."

A Memorial from James Stewart and Samuel Jackson, owners of the Ship Friendship, Thomas Jann, master, was presented to Congress and read, setting forth that the said Ship, on the 28th of August last, sailed from Maryland, with a cargo of Tobacco, but being overtaken by the late storm, she was driven on shoals and much damaged, and got into Hampton Road, with the loss of all her masts; and praying that the Memorialists may be allowed to unload said Ship, and that, after being refitted, she may take the cargo on board, and proceed on her voyage.

The Congress, taking into consideration the above Memorial,

Resolved, That the said cargo be unloaded under the inspection of the Committee of Norfolk, and that the said Ship, being refitted, be allowed to take said cargo on board again, and proceed on her voyage; and in case, on examination, the said Ship is condemned as unfit for sea, that the said cargo be put on board some other Vessel, under the inspection of the Committee aforesaid, and exported.

Falconer*, from London, sundry cases, containing his Books, Papers, and Household Furniture, which were in his use when he lived in London, and which were imported for his own use, and not for sale; and it being submitted to the consideration of the Congress, whether such importation is comprehended within the first article of Association,

Resolved, That such importation is not to be comprehended within the meaning of the said first article of the Association, and that the said Books, Papers, and Furniture, may be landed and delivered to the owner.

That the Provincial Convention of New-York be directed immediately to render Hudson's River defensible; that in doing this they be particularly attentive to form such Works as may be finished before the winter sets in; that it is very doubtful whether any Stone Work can be properly made at this advanced season; it is submitted to the judgment of the said Convention, whether it could not be more cheaply and expeditiously done by Works of Wood or Fascines; if they should think otherwise, that they be directed to go on with the work in the way which they think best, since it is the opinion of this Congress that the work should by no means be neglected. But if the work be already begun on the plan sent us, that they render such parts as can be first finished defensible, so that the labour be not thrown away, if an attack should be made before the whole can be finished.

That the Convention be directed to inquire whether there are not some other places where small Batteries might be erected, so as to annoy the enemy on their passage, particularly a few heavy Cannon at or near Moore's House, and at a point on the west shore, a little above Verplanck's Point.

On motion made, Resolved, That orders be sent to General Wooster, in case he has no orders to the contrary from General Schuyler, that he immediately return to the Batteries erecting in the Highlands, and there leave as many of his Troops as the conductors of the work shall think will be necessary for completing them, and that he repair with the remainder to New-York.

Mr. Dyer having, on account of his indisposition, excused himself from going to the northward, the Congress proceeded to the election of another; when Mr. R. R. Livingston was chosen.

The Congress then resumed the consideration of the Report of the Instructions to the Committee; which being debated by paragraphs, were agreed to, as follows:

Instructions to R. R. LIVINGSTON, ROBERT TREAT PAINE, and J. LANGDON, Esquires.

GENTLEMEN: The Congress expect that you repair, with as much despatch as the necessary preparations for your journey will admit, to Ticonderoga, in order to consult with General Schuyler what number of forces will be necessary in Canada, and of the best and most efficacious method for procuring or continuing such forces in the Northern Department during the ensuing winter, of engaging the inhabitants of the Colony of Canada to accede to the Association of the United Colonies, and of protecting them for the future against their and our enemies.

If, upon such a conference, it shall be judged necessary, you are authorized to direct Mr. Livingston, the Deputy Commissary-General, to furnish the necessary provisions for an army of three thousand men for six months.

You are also authorized to offer two months' pay, as a bounty, to such officers and soldiers as shall re-enlist, to be paid upon their taking the fortress at St. John's and Montreal, and you are to make use of every argument to induce them to re-enlist, or, at least, to stay until they can be relieved, and to assure them that the Congress have taken care to supply them with proper clothing.

You are to direct the fortresses at Ticonderoga and Crown Point to be put into such a posture of defence as the state of our affairs may require.

You are to advise the General to purchase of such officers and soldiers who have arms, and are sick, their arms, for the use of those who have none, or bad ones, and are well.

Ammunition, it is hoped, since the late capture, will not be wanting; if it should, the Congress will send the first that shall arrive.

If there should be occasion of re-enforcements, you are empowered, in concert with General Schuyler, to raise any number that can be procured in Canada, New-York, or any of the New-England Governments, in order to possess themselves of Montreal and Quebeck.

The Congress desire you to exert your utmost endeavours to induce the Canadians to accede to a union with these Colonies, and that they form, from their several Parishes, a Provincial Convention, and send Delegates to this Congress. And as, in the present unsettled state of that country, a regular election can hardly be expected, the Congress will acquiesce in the choice of such Parishes and Districts as are induced to join us.

You may, and are hereby empowered to assure them, that we shall hold their rights as dear as our own, and, on their union with us, exert our utmost endeavours to obtain for them and their posterity the blessings of a free Government, and that security to their persons and property which is derived from the British Constitution.

And you may, and are hereby empowered further to declare, that we hold sacred the rights of conscience, and shall never molest them in the free enjoyment of their religion.

In case General Schuyler has not yet raised the Regiment recommended to him to be raised in Canada, or in case he cannot proceed to Canada, you are to use all the means in your power to perfect the raising of a Regiment of Canadians, to join the Continental forces; and you are, for that purpose, to take with you blank commissions, which, taking the advice of the General Officers in that department, you are to fill up with the names of such persons as have the most merit and best qualifications for the service.

Congress direct you to acquaint General Schuyler that they approve of his appointment of Captain Dimon to be a Brigade-Major, and have ordered him a commission accordingly.

The Congress, moreover, are desirous that you should take an accurate view of the state of our fortifications upon Hudson's River, and make a report of it as soon as it can conveniently be done.

If the circumstances of the Army should be such that a ton of powder may be spared, you are to direct that quantity to be sent to New-York, and all such cannon and military stores as shall not be wanted in Canada, or in the fortifications on the lakes, to be sent to Albany, there to remain until the Congress give further directions concerning them; and, for this purpose, you are herewith furnished with a list of the ordnance and military stores which were at those places when taken.

You are to inform the General that the pay of some of the officers is raised, and to take with you, from the minutes, the additional establishment.

You are to direct all such officers and soldiers as shall re-enlist to be paid all arrears that may be due to them, according to the rolls to be sent by Governour Trumbull, who, in the mean time, will be requested by Congress to send the rolls to the General, ascertaining how long the men have been in the service.

The disposition of the prisoners is approved of by the Congress, but the officers are not to be permitted to reside in or near any sea-port.

You are authorized to assure Major Brown and Major Livingston, that the Congress have a just sense of their important services, and will take the first proper opportunity to reward them.

You are also to acquaint the General, that General Montgomery's request, as to the pay of the Company of Artillery by him appointed, is complied with.

A Committee will be appointed to procure as much hard money as will be necessary to be transmitted to the Deputy Paymaster-General in the Northern Army, to be used in Canada.

Ordered, That this be published.

The Committee appointed to consider further ways and means of promoting the manufacture of Saltpetre brought in their Report, which was read, in these words:

It appears to your Committee, that skilful persons sent to Virginia, and employed there in a publick Saltpetre Work, under the inspection of gentlemen who will superintend it, may, with sufficient assistance, produce a considerable quantity of that article; and that a further supply of it may be procured from the other Colonies, if the Assemblies, Conventions, and Councils of Safety, will appoint proper persons in their respective Colonies, whose business it shall be to employ and set to work such and so many of their countrymen as they shall judge fit, to collect earth from which nitrous salt may be extracted, and to manufacture it into Saltpetre.

The Committee to whom the Petition from Jasper Grifing, and the Petition from Murray, Sansom & Co., and others, were referred, brought in their Report, as follows:

That your Committee on the Memorial of Jasper Grifing are of opinion, that the examination of the facts set forth in that memorial ought to be referred to the Committee of Observation for Guilford; and that the same being sufficiently proved, the Schooner Betsey, mentioned in the said memorial, ought to be permitted to proceed on her voyage, with the cargo purchased and provided for her before the 10th day of September last; the master and owner of the vessel previously making oath, that they will use their best and utmost endeavours, that the said cargo shall be landed in some foreign port.

On the Memorial of Murray, Sansom & Co., Jacob Watson, and Frederick Rhineland, of the City of New-York, your Committee having examined, as far as they could, into the conduct of the parties concerned, find no ground to suspect that the owners of the cargo intended it should be landed or disposed of in any other manner than set forth in the said memorial; but your Committee think there is just ground to suspect that William Barron, the master of the Ship Peggy, would not be very solicitous to prevent the cargo, which might be useful to the Ministerial Army, from falling into the possession of the men of war, he having been before taken in the same ship, in Rhode-Island, with a cargo from Chesapeake-Bay, for Europe; nor can your Committee approve the conduct of the owner of the ship, who continued the captain afterwards.

Your Committee are therefore of opinion, that another master ought to be appointed to the said ship, who shall be approved by the Committee of Norwich; and that the time of her sailing, as well as her track, be appointed by that Committee, and the master sworn to use his best endeavours to prevent the said ship falling into the possession of any man-of-war or cutter, and to pursue as far as he can, the orders of the said Committee in navigating the said ship; on which terms your Committee are of opinion, the said ship ought to be permitted to proceed with her cargo.

The said Report being read, was accepted and agreed to.

That Orders issue to the Officer who has the charge of conducting the Prisoners, to march them by the nearest road to Reading, in the Colony of Pennsylvania, and that the Deputy Commissary-General be directed to supply them with Provisions for their march, agreeable to the Rations supplied the Continental Army.

That the said Commissary be directed, if the Prisoners agree to it, to send the women, children, and baggage, by water to Amboy, from thence to be sent across to Bordentown, and from thence by water to Philadelphia, from which last place they will be sent to join the garrison in the Towns allotted them, this being judged the safest, cheapest, and most commodious way of conveying them.

The Congress resumed the consideration of the Report from the Committee of the Whole; which was agreed to, as follows:

The Committee of the Whole House to whom were referred the several Petitions from the Island of Bermuda, representing the distress to which they are exposed by the Non-Exportation Agreement, and praying to be relieved in such manner as the Congress may deem consistent with the safety of America, report that they have considered the same, and thereupon came to the following Resolutions:

That the Inhabitants of the Island of Bermuda appear friendly to the cause of America, and ought to be supplied with such and so great a quantity of the produce of these Colonies as may be necessary for their subsistence and home consumption; that, in the opinion of this Committee, they will annually require, for the purposes aforesaid, seventy-two thousand bushels of Indian Corn, two thousand barrels of Bread or Flour, one thousand barrels of Beef or Pork, two thousand one hundred bushels of Peas or Beans, and three hundred tierces of Rice; and that they be permitted to export the same yearly.

That the said Inhabitants ought to pay for the above annual allowance in Salt; but it is not the design of this Resolution to exclude them from the privilege of receiving American produce, to any amount, in exchange for Arms, Ammunition, Saltpetre, Sulphur, and Field-Pieces, agreeable to a Resolution of Congress, passed the 15th of July last.

That to enable such of these Colonies as can conveniently furnish the Island of Bermuda with the abovementioned annual allowance to divide whatever advantages may result therefrom, in proportion to their respective shares of the general expense, it is further the opinion of this Committee—

That the Colony of South-Carolina supply them with three hundred tierces of Rice.

That the Colony of North-Carolina supply them with sixteen thousand bushels of Indian Corn, and four hundred and sixty-eight bushels of Peas or Beans.

That the Colony of Virginia supply them with thirty-six thousand bushels of Indian Corn, and one thousand and fifty bushels of Peas or Beans.

That the Colony of Maryland supply them with twenty thousand bushels of Indian Corn, and five hundred and eighty-two bushels of Peas or Beans.

That the Colony of Pennsylvania supply them with one thousand two hundred barrels of Flour or Bread, and six hundred barrels of Beef or Pork.

That the Colony of New-York supply them with eight hundred barrels of Flour or Bread, and four hundred barrels of Beef or Pork.

That the Conventions or Committees of Safety of the abovementioned Colonies ought to superintend the said exportation, provide against frauds, and take care that, in exchanging the said commodities of Salt and Provisions, no undue advantages be taken, by either party, of their mutual wants; and, further, that no Vessel employed in this business ought to load without their permission; and that when they shall, in pursuance of these Resolutions, permit any of the said Vessels to load, they do give notice thereof to the Committee of Inspection of the County, City, or Town where such Vessel shall load, and inform them that the same is done under the authority and by order of this Congress.

That these Resolutions ought to be kept as private as the execution of them will admit; that they should be transmitted to the several Conventions, Assemblies, or Committees of Safety, of the United Colonies, and to the Island of Bermuda; and that the Inhabitants of the latter be informed that the Congress will afford them other necessities, such as Lumber, Soap, and Candles, whenever the quality and quantity of each of those articles used in the Island shall be ascertained.

That Edward Stiles be permitted, under the direction of the Committee of Safety of the Colony of Pennsylvania, to send the Brig Sea Nymph, Samuel Stobel, Master, with four thousand bushels of Indian Corn, three hundred barrels of Flour, one hundred barrels of Bread, twenty barrels of Pork, eight barrels of Beef, thirty boxes of Soap, and fifteen barrels of Apples, to Bermuda, for the immediate supply of the Inhabitants; and that the said Cargo be considered as part of the annual allowance aforesaid, for the year ensuing.

The Congress resumed the consideration of the Report of the Committee on General Washington's Letter, and the same being debated by paragraphs, was agreed to, as follows:

The Committee to whom so much of the Letter from General Washington to the President, dated the 8th instant, as relates to the disposal of the Vessels and Cargoes belonging to the enemy, which shall fall into the hands of or be taken by the inhabitants of the United Colonies, and so much of the Report of the Committee of Congress, which lately went to the Camp at Cambridge, as related to that subject, were referred, have examined the matter thereof, and directed the same, as it appears to them, together with the Resolutions of the Committee thereupon, to be reported as followeth:

It appears to your Committee, from undoubted information, that many vessels which had cleared at the respective custom-houses in these Colonies, agreeable to the regulations established by acts of the British Parliament, have in a lawless manner, without even the semblance of just authority, been seized by His Majesty's ships of war, and carried into the harbour of Boston and other ports, where they have been rifled of their cargoes, by orders of His Majesty's naval and military officers there commanding, without the said vessels having been proceeded against by any form of trial, and without the charge of having offended against any law.

It further appears to your Committee, that orders have been issued, in His Majesty's name, to the commanders of his ships of war, "to proceed as in the case of actual rebellion against such of the sea-port Towns and places, being accessible to the King's ships, in which any troops shall be raised or military works erected;" under colour of which said orders the commanders of His Majesty's said ships of war have already burned and destroyed the flourishing and populous Town of Falmouth, and have fired upon and much injured several other Towns within the United Colonies, and dispersed, at a late season of the year, hundreds of helpless women and children, with a savage hope that those may perish under the approaching rigours of the season, who may chance to escape destruction from fire and sword—a mode of warfare long exploded amongst civilized nations.

It also appears to your Committee, that the good people of these Colonies, sensibly affected by the destruction of their property and other unprovoked injuries, have at last determined to prevent, as much as possible, a repetition thereof, and to procure some reparation for the same, by fitting out armed vessels and ships of force; in the execution of which commendable designs, it is possible that those who have not been instrumental in the unwarrantable violences above mentioned may suffer, unless some laws be made to regulate, and tribunals erected competent to determine the propriety of captures; whereupon, your Committee came to the following Resolutions:

1st. That all such ships of war, frigates, sloops, cutters, and armed vessels, as are or shall be employed in the present cruel and unjust war against the United Colonies, and shall fall into the hands of or be taken by the inhabitants thereof, be seized and forfeited, to and for the purposes hereinafter mentioned.

2d. That all transport vessels in the same service, having on board any troops, arms, ammunition, clothing, provisions, or military or naval stores, of what kind soever, and all vessels, to whomsoever belonging, that shall be employed in carrying provisions or other necessities to the British Army or Armies, or Navy, that now are or shall hereafter be within any of the United Colonies, shall be liable to seizure; but that the said cargoes only be liable to forfeiture and confiscation, unless the said vessels so employed belong to an inhabitant or inhabitants of these United Colonies; in which case the said vessel or vessels, together with her or their cargoes, shall be liable to confiscation.

3d. That no master or commander of any vessel shall be entitled to cruise for or make prize of any vessel or cargo before he shall have obtained a commission from the Congress, or from such person or persons as shall be for that purpose appointed, in some one of the United Colonies.

4th. That it be and is hereby recommended to the several Legislatures in the United Colonies, as soon as possible, to erect courts of justice, or give jurisdiction to the courts now in being, for the purpose of determining concerning the captures to be made as aforesaid, and to provide that all trials in such case be had by a jury, under such qualifications as to the respective Legislatures shall seem expedient.

5th. That all prosecutions shall be commenced in the court of that Colony in which the captures shall be made. But if no such court be at that time erected in the said Colony, or if the capture be made on open sea, then the prosecution shall be in the court of such Colony as the captor may find most convenient, provided that nothing contained in this resolution shall be construed so as to enable the captor to remove his prize from any Colony competent to determine concerning the seizure, after he shall have carried the vessel so seized within any harbour of the same.

6th. That in all cases an appeal shall be allowed to the Congress, or such person or persons as they shall appoint for the trial of appeals, provided the appeal be demanded within five days after definitive sentence, and such appeal be lodged with the Secretary of Congress within forty days afterwards, and provided the party appealing shall give security to prosecute the said appeal to effect; and in case of the death of the Secretary, during the recess of Congress, then the said appeal to be lodged in Congress within twenty days after the meeting thereof.

7th. That when any vessel or vessels shall be fitted out at the expense of any private person or persons, then the captures made shall be to the use of the owner or owners of the said vessel or vessels; that where the vessels employed in the capture shall be fitted out at the expense of any of the United Colonies, then one-third of the prize taken shall be to the use of the captors, and the remaining two-thirds to the use of the said Colony; and where the vessels so employed shall be fitted out at the Continental charge, then one-third shall go to the captors, and the remaining two-thirds to the use of the United Colonies; provided, nevertheless, that if the capture be a vessel of war, then the captors shall be entitled to one-half of the value, and the remainder shall go to the Colony or Continent, as the case may be, the necessary charges of condemnation of all prizes being deducted before any distribution made.

8th. That the captures heretofore made, by vessels fitted out at the Continental charge, were justifiable, and that the distribution of the captor's share of the prizes, by General Washington, be confirmed, which is as follows, viz:

Captain or Commander,	- 6	Mate,	- - - -	1½
First Lieutenant,	- - 5	Gunner,	- - - -	1½
Second Lieutenant,	- - 4	Boatswain,	- - - -	1½
Surgeon,	- - - 4	Gunner's Mate,	- - - -	1½
Master,	- - - - 3	Sergeant,	- - - -	1½
Steward,	- - - - 2	Privates,	- - - -	1

On motion made, Resolved, That the Committee who brought in the foregoing Report, after consulting the books, report whether any and what addition, in their opinion, may be made to the second Resolution.

Resolved, That that part of General Washington's Letter, No. 7, of the 11th instant, respecting the capture of a Vessel by the inhabitants of New-Hampshire, be referred to the Committee who brought in the foregoing Report, and that they report thereon to Congress.

Tuesday, November 28, 1775.

On motion made, Ordered, That Mr. R. Morris call on the several persons appointed to sign the Continental Bills, and desire them, with all possible expedition, to finish the numbering and signing said Bills, as the money is much wanted.

The Congress resumed the consideration of the Rules for the regulation of the Navy of the United Colonies; and the same being debated by paragraphs, were agreed to, as follows:

Rules for the Regulation of the Navy of the UNITED COLONIES.

The commanders of all ships and vessels, belonging to the thirteen United Colonies, are strictly required to show in themselves a good example of honour and virtue to their officers and men, and to be very vigilant in inspecting the behaviour of all such as are under them, and to discountenance and suppress all dissolute, immoral, and disorderly practices, and also such as are contrary to the rules of discipline and obedience, and to correct those who are guilty of the same, according to the usage of the sea.

The commanders of the ships of the thirteen United Colonies are to take care that divine service be performed twice a day on board, and a sermon preached on Sundays, unless bad weather or other extraordinary accidents prevent it.

If any shall be heard to swear, curse, or blaspheme the name of God, the commander is strictly enjoined to punish them for every offence, by causing them to wear a wooden collar, or some other shameful badge of distinction, for so long time as he shall judge proper. If he be a commissioned officer, he shall forfeit one shilling for each offence, and a warrant or inferior officer, six pence. He who is guilty of drunkenness, if a seaman, shall be put in irons until he is sober; but if an officer, he shall forfeit two days' pay.

No commander shall inflict any punishment upon a seaman beyond twelve lashes upon his bare back, with a cat-o'-nine-tails; if the fault shall deserve a greater punishment, he is to apply to the Commander-in-Chief of the Navy, in order to the trying of him by a court-martial; and, in the mean time, he may put him under confinement.

The commander is never, by his own authority, to discharge a commission or warrant officer, nor to punish or strike him, but he may suspend or confine them, and when he comes in the way of a Commander-in-Chief, apply to him for holding a court-martial.

The officer who commands by accident of the Captain's absence, (unless he be absent for a time by leave,) shall not order any correction but confinement, and, upon the Captain's return on board, he shall then give an account of his reasons for so doing.

The Captain is to cause the articles of war to be hung up in some publick place of the ship, and read to the ship's company once a month.

Whenever the Captain shall enlist a seaman, he shall take care to enter on his books the time and terms of his entering, in order to his being justly paid.

The Captain shall, before he sails, make return to and leave with the Congress, or such person or persons as the Congress shall appoint for that purpose, a complete list of all his officers and men, with the time and terms of their entering, and, during his cruise, shall keep a true account of the desertion or death of any of them, and of the entering of others; and after his cruise, and before any of them are paid off, he shall make return of a complete list of the same, including those who shall remain on board his ship.

The men shall, at their request, be furnished with slops that are necessary, by the Captain or Purser, who shall keep an account of the same; and the Captain, in his return, in the last mentioned article directed to be made, shall mention the amount delivered to each man, in order to its being stopped out of his pay.

As to the term "inferior officer," the Captain is to take notice that the same does not include any commission nor any warrant officer, except the second master, surgeon's mate, cook, armourer, gunsmith, master-at-arms, and sail-maker.

The Captain is to take care, when any inferior officers or volunteer seamen are turned over into the ship under his command, from any other ship, not to rate them on the ship's books in a worse quality, or lower degree or station, than they served in the ship they were removed from; and, for his guidance, he is to demand from the commander of the ship, from which they are turned over, a list, under his hand, of their names and qualities.

Any officer, seaman, or others, entitled to wages or prize money, may have the same paid to his assignee, provided the assignment be attested by the Captain or commander, the master or purser of the ship, or a chief magistrate of some County or Corporation.

The Captain is to discourage the seamen of his ship from selling any part of their wages or shares, and never to attest the letter of attorney of any seaman, until he is fully satisfied that the same is not granted in consideration of money given for the purchase of his wages or shares.

When any inferior officer or seaman dies, the Captain is forthwith to make out a ticket for the time of his service, and to send the same, by the first safe conveyance, to the Congress, or agents by them for that purpose appointed, in order to the wages being forthwith paid to the executors or administrators of the deceased.

A convenient place shall be set apart for sick or hurt men, to which they are to be removed, with their hammocks and bedding, when the surgeon shall advise the same to be necessary, and some of the crew shall be appointed to attend and serve them, and to keep the place clean.

The cooper shall make buckets, with covers and cradles, if necessary, for their use.

All ships furnished with fishing tackle, being in such places where fish is to be had, the Captain is to employ some of the company in fishing; the fish to be distributed daily to such persons as are sick or upon recovery, (provided the surgeon recommend it,) and the surplus, by turns, amongst the messes of the officers and seamen, without favour or partiality, and gratis, without any deduction of their allowance of provisions on that account.

It is left to the discretion of commanders of squadrons to shorten the allowance of provisions according to the exigence of the service, taking care that the men be punctually paid for the same.

The like power is given to Captains of single ships, in cases of absolute necessity.

If there should be a want of pork, the Captain is to order three pounds of beef to be issued to the men, in lieu of two pounds of pork.

One day in every week shall be issued out a proportion of flour and suet, in lieu of beef, for the seamen, but this is not to extend beyond four months' victualling at one time, nor shall the Purser receive any allowance for flour or suet kept longer on board than that time; and there shall be supplied, once a year, a proportion of canvass for pudding-bags, after the rate of one ell for every sixteen men.

If any ships of the thirteen United Colonies shall happen to come into port in want of provisions, the warrant of a Commander-in-Chief shall be sufficient to the agent, or other instrument of the victualling, to supply the quantity wanted; and in urgent cases, where delay may be hurtful, the warrant of the Captain of the ship shall be of equal effect.

The Captain is frequently to order the proper officers to inspect the condition of the provisions, and if the bread proves damp, to have it aired upon the quarter-deck or poop; and also examine the flesh-cask, and if any of the pickle be leaked out, to have new made and put in, and the cask made tight and secure.

The Captain or Purser shall secure the clothes, bedding, and other things of such persons as shall die or be killed, to be delivered to their executors or administrators.

All papers, charter-parties, bills of lading, passports, and other writings whatsoever, found on board any ship or ships which shall be taken, shall be carefully preserved, and the originals sent to the court of justice for maritime affairs, appointed or to be appointed by the Legislatures in the respective Colonies, for judging concerning such prize or prizes; and if any person or persons shall wilfully or negligently destroy, or suffer to be destroyed, any such paper or papers, he or they so offending shall forfeit their share of such prize or prizes, and suffer such other punishment as they shall be judged by a court-martial to deserve.

If any person or persons shall embezzle, or steal, or take away any cables, anchors, sails, or any of the ship's furniture, or any of the powder, arms, ammunition, or provisions of any ship belonging to the thirteen United Colonies, he or they shall suffer such punishment as a court-martial shall order.

When in sight of a ship or ships of the enemy, and at such other times as may appear to make it necessary to prepare for an engagement, the Captain shall order all things in his ship in a proper posture for fight, and shall, in his own person, and according to his duty, heart on and encourage the inferior officers and men to fight courageously, and not to behave themselves faintly or cry for quarters, on pain of such punishment as the offence shall appear to deserve for his neglect.

Any Captain or other officer, mariner or others, who shall basely desert their duty or station in the ship, and run away while the enemy is in sight, or, in time of action, shall entice others to do so, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial shall inflict.

Any officer, seaman, or marine, who shall begin, excite, cause, or join in any mutiny or sedition in the ship to which he belongs, on any pretence whatsoever, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial shall direct.

Any person in or belonging to the ship, who shall utter any words of sedition and mutiny, or endeavour to make any mutinous assemblies, on any pretence whatsoever, shall suffer such punishment as a court-martial shall inflict.

None shall presume to quarrel with or strike his superior officer, on pain of such punishment as a court-martial shall order to be inflicted.

If any person shall apprehend he has just cause of complaint, he shall quietly and decently make the same known to his superior officer, or to the Captain, as the case may require, who will take care that justice be done him.

There shall be no quarrelling or fighting between ship-mates on board any ship belonging to the thirteen United Colonies, nor shall there be used any reproachful or provoking speeches, tending to make quarrels and disturbance, on pain of imprisonment, and such other punishment as a court-martial shall think proper to inflict.

If any person shall sleep upon his watch, or negligently perform the duty which shall be enjoined him to do, or forsake his station, he shall suffer such punishment as a court-martial shall judge proper to inflict, according to the nature of his offence.

All murder shall be punished with death.

All robbery and theft shall be punished at the discretion of a court-martial.

Any Master-at-Arms who shall refuse to receive such prisoner or prisoners as shall be committed to his charge, or, having received them, shall suffer him or them to escape, or dismiss them without orders for so doing, shall suffer in his or their stead, as a court-martial shall order and direct.

The Captains, officers, and others, shall use their utmost endeavours to detect, apprehend, and bring to punishment, all offenders, and shall, at all times, readily assist the officers appointed for that purpose in the discharge of their duty, on pain of being proceeded against and punished by a court-martial at discretion.

All other faults, disorders, and misdemeanors, which shall be committed on board any ship belonging to the thirteen United Colonies, and which are not herein mentioned, shall be punished according to the laws and customs in such cases at sea.

A court-martial shall consist of at least three Captains and three First Lieutenants, with three Captains and three First Lieutenants of Marines, if there shall be so many of the marines then present, and the eldest Captain shall preside.

All sea officers of the same denomination shall take rank of the officers of the marines.

Every member of a court-martial shall take the following oath, viz:

"You, . . . , swear that you will well and truly try, and impartially determine the cause of the prisoner now to be tried, according to the rules of the Navy of the United Colonies. So help you God."

Which oath shall be administered by the President to the other members, and the President shall himself be sworn by the officer in said court next in rank.

All witnesses, before they may be admitted to give evidence, shall take the following oath, viz:

"You swear the evidence you shall give, in the cause now in hearing, shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God."

The sentence of a court-martial for any capital offence shall not be put in execution until it be confirmed by the Commander-in-Chief of the fleet; and it shall be the duty of the President of every court-martial to transmit to the Commander-in-Chief of the fleet every sentence which shall be given, with a summary of the evidence and proceedings thereon, by the first opportunity.

The Commander-in-Chief of the fleet, for the time being, shall have power to pardon and remit any sentence of death that shall be given in consequence of any of the aforementioned articles.

There shall be allowed to each man serving on board the ships in the service of the thirteen United Colonies, a daily proportion of provisions, according as is expressed in the following table, viz:

Sunday: One pound bread, one pound beef, one pound potatoes or turnips.

Monday: One pound bread, one pound pork, half pint peas, and four ounces cheese.

* See 13th and 19th of December, 1775.

In the first place, we do hereby agree for, by, and under the considerations aftermentioned, to and with the said commander, forthwith to enter and ship ourselves, and in due and seasonable time to repair on board the said ship, called the . . . , and during the term of . . . months, to the utmost of our power and ability, respectively, to discharge our several services or stations, and in every thing to be conformable and obedient to the several requirings and lawful commands of the said . . . , and his successors in command.

Secondly. We do also oblige and subject ourselves to serve on board the said ship during the said cruise; and as she is a ship-of-war, we do severally oblige ourselves, by these articles, to comply with and be subject to the rules and discipline of the American fleet, as established by the Congress, and to be governed and commanded, in time of action with an enemy, according to the same rules, and submit ourselves to the same punishments and penalties as are there inflicted, in case we, or any of us, offer to desert our quarters, or not obey the commands of the said . . . , or his successors in command, in giving chase to any ship or ships, vessel or vessels, or otherwise; and if, upon a scrutiny of our said . . . , or his said officers, we, or any of us, should be found guilty of any breach contrary to the tenor of this agreement, or any act of cowardice, we do hereby severally submit and agree to allow and forfeit our several and respective shares of and in any prize or prizes we shall then have taken, to be divided amongst the said ship's company.

Thirdly. We do also severally agree and oblige ourselves, that when any prize or prizes have been taken, to follow the express directions of the said . . . , or his successors, in boarding the said prize, and be under the command of any officer whom the said . . . shall appoint, and be assisting to him to carry the said prize to whatever port or ports such prize or prizes shall be assigned by the said . . . . And we do hereby further severally agree and covenant, in that case, to be true and faithful in discharge of our duty and trust, and will not, in any shape, embezzle, defraud, or plunder any thing on board such prize or prizes; and in case any or either of us shall be found guilty of any breach contrary to the true meaning of this agreement, we, and such of us being guilty thereof, do hereby severally submit and agree to allow so much of all and every of our shares and part of our shares of and in the said prize or prizes then or thence after to be taken, and of all our respective wages that then shall be due and coming to us, in respect of our services, as shall make good such plunder and embezzlement we shall have been found guilty of.

Fourthly. And it is also further agreed to be the true intent and meaning of all parties hereto, that the officer or officers, or any of the ship's company sent on board any prize, shall have as good a share and interest of any prize that shall be thereafter taken, during his or their absence, as if he or they had been on board the said vessel at the time of taking thereof, any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding. Provided always, and it is hereby agreed to be the meaning of the said last above-mentioned clause, that if the said officer or officers, and such of the said ship's company to whom the conduct and management of any prize has been intrusted, do not (first having accepted the commands of the said commander concerning the said prize under his or their custody) immediately repair to the respective port or harbour where the said . . . , or his successors in command, shall order, or do not proceed with the said prize or prizes so taken to the respective port or ports to be assigned by the said . . . for the time being, that then, and in failure of any or either of the agreements aforesaid contained on our parts, we, and each and every of us so offending, do hereby severally submit and agree to be cashiered, not only for our several and respective interests and shares of and in the capture of prize-money, but totally to be excluded and divested from the payment of any wages then due to us, for and in respect of our several services on board the said ship . . . , and the interest and shares of such delinquents that otherwise would have accrued to us.

Fifthly. And the said . . . , for and in behalf of himself and the thirteen United Colonies of North-America, doth hereby covenant and agree, to and with the said officers, seamen, and marines, whose names or marks are hereto set and subscribed, to pay them, in consideration of such services, so much money per month as, in a schedule here undermentioned, is set opposite to the names or marks of each respective officer, seaman, or landman; and likewise advance unto each and every of them, one month's pay at entrance, (due security for the same being first given,) the receipt whereof they do hereby acknowledge.

Sixthly. And as an encouragement to exert the valour of the seamen and marines in defending the said ship, and in subduing and distressing the said enemy, the said . . . , for and on behalf of the said thirteen United Colonies of North-America, doth further covenant, promise, and agree, to and with all and every of the officers, seamen, and marines, parties hereto, that in case any prize or prizes shall be taken by the said ship, during the intended cruise, that the same shall be proceeded against and distributed according to the resolutions of the Congress.

And if the Captain of marines, or any other commission or warrant officer, lose a limb, or be otherwise disabled, so as to be rendered incapable afterwards of getting a subsistence, he or they so disabled shall receive a bounty of three hundred dollars, if so much arise from the nett profits as aforesaid; and in case of death, the widow or children, if any, is, are, and shall be entitled to the same, together with their share of prize-money due at the time of their decease. And if an inferior officer, marine, or sailor, lose a limb, or be otherwise disabled, so as to be rendered incapable afterwards of getting a subsistence, he or they shall receive a bounty of two hundred dollars, to be deducted as aforesaid; and in case of death, his widow or children (if any) is, are, and shall be entitled to the same, together with his share of prize-money due at the time of his decease.

He who first discovers a ship or vessel which shall afterwards become a prize, shall be entitled to a double share of such prize.

There shall be ten shares of every prize, which shall be taken and condemned, set apart to be given to such inferior officers, seamen, and marines, as shall be adjudged best to deserve them by the superior officers, who shall be appointed to make such determination.

He who shall first board a ship or other vessel, making resistance, which shall become a prize, shall be entitled to a triple share.

Provided always, and it is hereby declared to be the true intent and meaning of the parties to the aforementioned articles and orders, that any of the officers, seamen, and marines, shall be liable to be removed by the Congress or Committee of the Congress, during the recess thereof, or by the Commander-in-Chief of the American fleet for the time being, from the aforesaid vessel to any other armed vessel in the service of the United Colonies, any thing contained in the foregoing orders and articles notwithstanding.

The Congress then took into consideration the Report of the Committee on North-Carolina, which being read, and debated by paragraphs, Congress came to the following Resolutions:

Resolved, That the two Battalions which the Congress directed to be raised in the Province of North-Carolina be increased to the Continental Establishment, and kept in pay at the expense of the United Colonies for one year from this time, or until the further order of Congress, as well for the purpose of defending the good people of that Colony against the attacks of Ministerial oppression, as assisting the adjacent Colonies.

much Gunpowder as can be spared for the immediate supply of North-Carolina.

Resolved, That the Delegates of the Colony of North-Carolina be directed to purchase a number of Drums, Fifes, and Colours, suitable to the said Battalions, and that the President be directed to draw on the Continental Treasurers for a sum not exceeding three hundred Dollars, for the payment thereof.

That it be recommended to the Convention or Committee of Safety of North-Carolina, in case the method of defending the said Colony by Minute-Men be inadequate to the purpose, to substitute such other mode as to them shall appear most likely to effect the security of that Colony.

Agreeable to the Order of the Day, the Congress took into consideration the Report of the Committee on the Memorials of the Tea-holders, and the same being read and debated,

On the question put to agree to it,
Carried in the negative.

Wednesday, November 29, 1775.

An Express arrived with a Letter from General Schuyler, containing an account of the Continental Troops, under General Montgomery, having taken possession of Montreal on the 12th instant, which was read.

The Committee to whom was referred the Petition of Downham Newton, of the Island of New-Providence, setting forth the distress of the Inhabitants of that Island, and offering if the Congress will permit him to export one hundred barrels of Flour for the said distressed Inhabitants, he will give any reasonable security to bring back such a quantity of Muskets as can be procured for the money arising from the sale of the said Cargo, brought in their Report, which being taken into consideration, was agreed to, as follows:

The Committee to whom the Petition of Downham Newton was referred have had the same under their consideration, and come to the following Resolutions:

Resolved, That the said Downham Newton should be permitted to export on board his vessel, on the terms proposed in his petition, such Provisions of Flour and Pork as he shall think proper.

Resolved; That the said Downham Newton should give bond, with two sufficient sureties, in a penalty equal to double the value of the cargo he shall have laden on board his vessel, the condition of which bond shall be, that the said Downham Newton shall, on or before the 15th day of February next, import into the Port of Newbern, in the Colony of North-Carolina, and there deliver to the Commanding Officer of the Continental Troops in that Colony, good Muskets and Bayonets, or Gunpowder, to the full amount of the proceeds of such cargo; and that, on giving such bond, he shall receive from this Congress a permit, to be signed by the President, allowing him to export said cargo.

On motion made, Resolved, That the executing the above business, and taking the bond from Downham Newton, be referred to the Committee who brought in the foregoing Report.

Information being given to Congress that there is a large quantity of Powder in the Island of Providence,

Ordered, That the foregoing Committee take measures for securing and bringing away the said Powder; and that it be an instruction to the said Committee, in case they can secure said Powder, to have it brought to the Port of Philadelphia, or to some other Port as near Philadelphia as can be with safety.

Resolved, That Mr. R. Morris be added to the foregoing Committee.

The Congress took into consideration the Report of the Committee on the state of the Treasury, and came to the following Resolutions thereon:

Resolved, That a quantity of Bills of Credit be emitted by Congress, amounting to Three Millions of Dollars.

Resolved, That it be referred to the Committee to consult with the Printer, and report the number and denomination of the Bills to be emitted, and that they contract or proper paper for this purpose.

The Committee appointed to prepare a Letter to the Agents brought in the same, which was read and agreed to, as follows:

GENTLEMEN: The manner in which the last dutiful Petition to His Majesty was received, and the subsequent Proclamation, are considered by Congress as further proofs of those malignant councils that surround the Sovereign and distract the British Empire. It is, however, happy for mankind that Ministers can form destructive plans with much more facility than they can execute them. The enclosed printed detail of the operations in Canada, this campaign, will sufficiently evince what little success is likely to attend Ministerial exertions for bringing the Catholics of Canada and the savages of the wilderness to war on the defenceless women and children of unoffending America. The Canadians are much too liberal to be made instruments in the black design of enslaving their brethren, and the Indians, with their usual sagacity, have by the firmest treaties accepted and pledged themselves to observe the neutrality which Congress desired.

Neither General Gage nor his successor has yet been able to penetrate into the country. The British men of war, indeed, that formerly, with so much glory, supported the interest and the honour of the Nation, have, with a wanton barbarity and inhumanity that would disgrace savages, burned the flourishing but defenceless Town of Falmouth, in the Colony of Massachusetts-Bay, and have frightened many of the weaker sex, with their children, from other places on the sea-coast. It grieves us exceedingly to see the British arms employed in such a manner, and for such purposes; but we hope the spirit and virtue of a sensible Nation will soon be exerted to procure justice for the innocent oppressed Colonies, and to restore harmony and peace to the British Empire. There is nothing more ardently desired by North-America than a lasting union with Great Britain, on terms of just and equal liberty; but as men, and as descendants of Britons, the good people of these Colonies will rely to the last on Heaven, and their own virtuous efforts, for security against the abusive system pressed by Administration for the ruin of America, and which, if pursued, must end in the destruction of a great Empire.

The intelligence now sent is, gentlemen, to prevent the Nation being imposed upon by misrepresentations, and to guard against mistakes that may probably arise from wanting a true state of facts. We cannot suppose that a brave and sensible people will be prevented by proclamation from furnishing North-America with such advice and assistance as the laws permit, and justice to an oppressed people demands.

Ordered, That a fair copy be made and signed by the President, and forwarded to the Agents.

On motion made, Resolved, That a Committee of five be appointed, for the sole purpose of corresponding with our friends in Great Britain, Ireland, and other parts of the world, and that they lay their correspondence before Congress, when directed.

Resolved, That this Congress will make provision to defray all such expenses as may arise by carrying on such correspondence, and for the payment of such agents as the said Committee may send on this service.

The members chosen: Mr. Harrison, Dr. Franklin, Mr. Johnson, Mr. Dickinson, and Mr. Jay.

The Committee appointed to take into consideration the Proclamations which lately appeared in the Papers brought in their Report, which was read, and ordered to lie on the table for the perusal of the members.

The several matters to this day referred being postponed,
Adjourned to ten o'clock, to-morrow.

Thursday, November 30, 1775.

The Congress resumed the consideration of the Report of the Committee on Proclamations, which being debated by paragraphs, was agreed to, as follows:

We, the Delegates of the thirteen United Colonies in North-America have taken into our most serious consideration a Proclamation, issued from the Court of St. James's on the 23d day of August last. The name of Majesty is used to give it a sanction and influence, and, on that account, it becomes a matter of importance to wipe off, in the name of the People of these United Colonies, the aspersions which it is calculated to throw upon our cause, and to prevent, as far as possible, the undeserved punishments which it is designed to prepare for our friends. We are accused of "forgetting the allegiance which we owe to the power that has protected and sustained us." Why all this ambiguity and obscurity in what ought to be so plain and obvious as that he who runs may read it? What allegiance is it that we forget? Allegiance to Parliament? We never owed, we never owned it. Allegiance to our King? Our words have ever avowed it; our conduct has ever been consistent with it. We condemn, and, with arms in our hands, (a resource which freemen will never part with,) we oppose the claim and exercise of unconstitutional powers, to which neither the Crown nor Parliament were ever entitled. By the British Constitution, our best inheritance, rights as well as duties descend upon us. We cannot violate the latter by defending the former. We should act in diametrical opposition to both, if we permitted the claims of the British Parliament to be established, and the measures pursued, in consequence of those claims, to be carried into execution among us. Our sagacious ancestors provided mounds against the inundation of tyranny and lawless power on one side, as well as against that of faction and licentiousness on the other. On which side has the breach been made? Is it objected against us, by the most inveterate and the most uncandid of our enemies, that we have opposed any of the just prerogatives of the Crown, or any legal exertion of those prerogatives? Why, then, are we accused of forgetting our allegiance? We have performed our duty. We have resisted in those cases in which the right to resist is stipulated as expressly, on our part, as the right to govern is, in other cases, stipulated on the part of the Crown. The breach of allegiance is removed from our resistance, as far as tyranny is removed from legal government. It is alleged that "we have proceeded to an open and avowed rebellion." In what does this rebellion consist? It is thus described: "Arraying ourselves in hostile manner, to withstand the execution of the law, and traitorously preparing, ordering, and levying war against the King." We know of no laws binding on us, but such as have been transmitted to us by our ancestors, and such as have been consented to by ourselves, or our representatives elected for that purpose. What laws, stamped with these characters, have we withstood? We have, indeed, defended them, and we will risk every thing, do every thing, and suffer every thing, in their defence. To support our laws, and our liberties established by our laws, we have prepared, ordered, and levied war. But is this traitorously, or against the King? We view him as the Constitution represents him; that tells us he can do no wrong. The cruel and illegal attacks, which we oppose, have no foundation in the royal authority. We will not, on our part, lose the distinction between the King and his Ministers. Happy would it have been for some former princes, had it always been preserved on the part of the Crown.

Besides all this, we observe, on this part of the Proclamation, that "rebellion" is a term undefined and unknown in the law; it might have been expected that a Proclamation, which by the British Constitution has no other operation than merely that of enforcing what is already law, would have had a known legal basis to have rested upon. A correspondence between the inhabitants of Great Britain and their brethren in America produced, in better times, much satisfaction to individuals, and much advantage to the publick. By what criterion shall one who is unwilling to break off this correspondence, and is, at the same time, anxious not to expose himself to the dreadful consequences threatened in this Proclamation—by what criterion shall he regulate his conduct? He is admonished not to carry on correspondence with the persons now in rebellion in the Colonies. How shall he ascertain "who are in rebellion and who are not?" He consults the law, to learn the nature of the supposed crime: the law is silent upon the subject. This, in a country where it has been often said, and formerly with justice, that the Government is by law, and not by men, might render him perfectly easy. But Proclamations have been sometimes dangerous engines in the hands of those in power; information is commanded to be given, to one of the Secretaries of State, of all persons "who shall be found carrying on correspondence with the persons in rebellion, in order to bring to condign punishment the authors, perpetrators, or abettors, of such dangerous designs." Let us suppose, for a moment, that some persons in the Colonies are in rebellion, and that those who carry on correspondence with them might learn, by some rule which Britons are bound to know, how to discriminate them, does it follow that all correspondence with them deserves to be punished? It might have been intended to apprise them of their danger, and to reclaim them from their crimes. By what law does a correspondence with a criminal transfer or communicate his guilt? We know that those who aid and adhere to the King's enemies, and those who correspond with them in order to enable them to carry their designs into effect, are criminal in the eye of the law. But the law goes no farther. Can Proclamations, according to the principles of reason and justice, and the Constitution, go farther than the law?

But perhaps the principles of reason and justice, and the Constitution, will not prevail: experience suggests to us the doubt. If they should not, we must resort to arguments drawn from a very different source. We, therefore, in the name of the People of these United Colonies, and by authority, according to the purest maxims of representation, derived from them, declare, that whatever punishment shall be inflicted upon any persons in the power of our enemies, for favouring, aiding, or abetting the cause of American liberty, shall be retaliated in the same kind and the same degree upon those in our power, who have favoured, aided, or abetted, or shall favour, aid, or abet, the system of ministerial oppression. The essential difference between our cause and that of our enemies might justify a severer punishment; the law of retaliation will unquestionably warrant one equally severe.

We mean not, however, by this declaration, to occasion or to multiply punishments; our sole view is to prevent them. In this unhappy and unnatural controversy, in which Britons fight against Britons and the descendants of Britons, let the calamities immediately incident to a civil war suffice. We hope additions will not, from wantonness, be made to them on one side; we shall regret the necessity, if laid under the necessity, of making them on the other.

Resolved, That as the importation of any universally necessary commodity, and the exportation of our produce to purchase the same, must give a proportionably greater opportunity to our enemies of making depredations on the property of the inhabitants of these Colonies, and of occasionally distressing them by intercepting such commodities, it is earnestly recommended to the several Assemblies or Conventions immediately to promote, by sufficient publick encouragements, the making Salt in their respective Colonies.

Two Letters from General Washington, of the 19th and 21st December, enclosing a copy of a Letter to General Howe, and accompanied with a number of intercepted Letters, being received and read,

Resolved, That the Letters from the General, and the intercepted Letters, be referred to a Committee of five.

The members chosen: Mr. Lynch, Mr. Hooper, Mr. Wythe, Mr. Deane, and Mr. S. Adams.

A Letter from General Schuyler, of the 21st December, being received, was read.

Another Letter from General Washington, dated 14th December, being delivered by two strangers, [Penet and De Pleiarne], was laid before Congress and read.

Resolved, That the same be committed to the Secret Committee, who are directed to confer with the bearers, and to pursue such measures as they may think proper for the interest of the United Colonies.

Resolved, That Major Preston have leave to go to Amboy, to visit his uncle who lives there, and to remain in that place one week, and then return to Philadelphia, and wait the orders of Congress.

The Committee appointed to inquire into the grounds of the information respecting a quantity of Arms and Ammunition being to be procured report, that they have examined into the same, and have received intelligence that a quantity of Arms and Ammunition, and other articles, are concealed in Tryon County, in which, also, there are several Tories, armed and enlisted in the enemy's service; whereupon,

Resolved, That the said Committee be directed to communicate the said intelligence to General Schuyler, and, in the name of the Congress, desire him to take the most speedy and effectual measures for securing the said Arms and Military Stores, and for disarming the said Tories, and apprehending their chiefs.

Resolved, That an Order be drawn on the Treasurers, in favour of the said Committee, for the sum of forty Dollars, for expediting the business to them committed.

Ordered, That the Delegates of Pennsylvania do immediately count the Silver and Gold in the Treasury, and forward the same with all convenient speed, under a guard of five men, to General Schuyler; and that the persons to be sent by the above Committee accompany said guard.

Resolved, That the Treasurers be empowered to employ a Broker to collect Gold and Silver, in exchange for Continental Bills of Credit.

Resolved, That the contents of the intercepted Letters this day read, and the steps which Congress may take in consequence of the intelligence thereby given, be kept secret until further orders, excepting only that the Delegates of Virginia and South-Carolina have leave to send to their Conventions extracts of such parts of the said Letters as they may think necessary for the welfare of their Colonies.

The Committee on Captain Sellick's Petition brought in their Report, which was read.

The Committee on the Petition of several Merchants in Philadelphia also brought in their Report, which was read.

Adjourned to ten o'clock, on Monday next.

MONDAY, December 18, 1775.

The Delegates for the Colony of Connecticut have received the following information, which they pray may be inquired into, viz:

That certain persons having formed an association for the purpose of seizing on, and removing by force of arms, the people settled on the River Susquehannah, under the government and protection of the Colony of Connecticut, have, in pursuance of such design, raised a large sum of money, and with the same employed agents to enlist men.

That they have also collected a great number of blankets, shoes, firelocks, with a quantity of powder and ball, and other military stores, in this city, and conveyed the same to their agents in this country, who have therewith clothed and armed the men they have raised for said hostile purpose.

That to induce men to engage they have, by the agents been promised the plunder of the inhabitants they should in this manner seize on and remove, over and above the exorbitant wages given them.

That by artful and wicked means the late resolution of Congress, respecting said inhabitants, which the honourable President sent forward for the purpose of preventing hostilities, has been represented as a forgery and a libel, propagated among the people who were solicited to join in these hostilities, fictitiously signed John Hancock, President; the purport of which was that this Congress had ordered the removal of said inhabitants.

That the agents of said association had proceeded to seize on large quantities of goods and stores belonging to some of the said inhabitants of Connecticut and others, which were going up the River Susquehannah, to supply the said settlers in part; but that much the greater part of said goods were designed for the Indians of said Six Nations, at the head of said river.

That the detention of said goods, the total interruption of all supplies to the Indians, and the hostile preparations making, have given the Indians the most alarming apprehensions.

That the different parties engaged in this hostile invasion began their march on Monday last, to their place of rendezvous, giving out as they went that they should be fifteen hundred strong when collected.

That all passes leading to and from said settlement are seized on and guarded by said parties.

That the distressed settlers have put themselves into the best posture of defence in their power, having no other alternative but to submit to plunder and ruin, with their families, or defend them to the last extremity.

To support the truth of the above information, credible persons are ready to be examined, and many depositions are taken and ready to be produced.

During this inquiry, which the Delegates desire may be entered upon immediately, and pursued until the whole scheme be detected, and the extensive mischief meditated prevented, they move that some one or more persons be instantly sent by the Congress with order to stop all hostilities above complained of; to restore to the people on either side of this unhappy dispute their property that may be taken from them; to set at liberty all who may on either side have been made prisoners; to direct that commerce be open on the Susquehannah with said settlers and the Indians, and to give orders that all hostilities between the parties cease, and that every one continue peaceably to enjoy and occupy the lands he was in possession and improvement of before the late disturbances between them.

STEPHEN PARIST AND MOSES THILLAM'S EVIDENCE.

Stephen Parist and Moses Thillam, of Westmoreland, in the County of Litchfield, and Colony of Connecticut, of lawful age, testify and say, that in the evening next following the fifth day of December instant, at Latmarack District, in Westmoreland, they were informed that a number, consisting of about forty armed men, were coming to take and carry away the New-England people there, with the deponents at Lacawa, who were there settled under the New-England people's claim; and about the middle of the night the company of armed men came in to Lacawa, and said they had orders, signed by the Governor of Pennsylvania, to take them off the land and carry them to Easton jail; then took and carried away ten of the inhabitants, and said that Wyoming was all taken before that time, for there was seven hundred of these men gone over; and they believed that they did break open sundry chests and carried away sundry papers of consequence. And further the deponents saith not.

DEPOSITION OF ELISHA RICHARDS.

Elisha Richards, of Westmoreland, in the County of Litchfield, and Colony of Connecticut, of lawful age, testifies and says, that on Tuesday, the fifth day of December instant, this deponent set out from Wells's Ferry, on Delaware River, and went the road to Lieutenant John Shaw, at Shahola, on his way to Wyoming, when he was stopped nigh by the said Shaw's house, by one Fuller, who was said to be Sheriff of Northampton County, in the Province of Pennsylvania, and that the said Fuller came up to him and gave this deponent a slap on the back, and told him he was his prisoner; and this deponent demanded the sight or hearing of his precept or order for so doing, when he replied, he would show him by and by, and would use him well; and then the said Fuller commanded two persons of them that were with him to keep this deponent for the present; and after this about one hour and a half, one Capt. Alexander Patterson, with about fifty men of the number that was with the Sheriff, mustered at the said John Shaw's door, and directly marched off towards Lackawack, and I heard some of them often say they were going to assist the Sheriff to take the New-England people settled at Lackawack. As they were going off Esquire John Van Campen, of said party, and the said Sheriff, asked the said John Shaw if he would not give bail for this deponent; when the said Shaw said he would give bail that this deponent should appear at Lackawack Settlement before the Sheriff the next morning, and accordingly acknowledged himself bound in a bond of twenty pounds, before the said John Van Campen, Esq.; and the said John Van Campen said that the Congress had passed acts against the New-England people settled at Wyoming, and that they were very mad at them, and that they had turned the Connecticut Delegates out of the Congress on that account, and that five hundred of their men was gone to Wyoming to take them off, and he supposed they had done it. And then the said Van Campen and Fuller went on toward Lackawack, after the other company, and the next day this deponent set out from said Shaw's towards Lackawack Settlement, and on the way he met some of the party that set off the evening before from Shaw's, with a number of prisoners, inhabitants of Lackawack; and when I got to Lackawack, at the house of John Ansley I found the said Van Campen and Fuller, with the rest of the party; when I asked Van Campen and Fuller what further they had to do with me, when the said Van Campen said he was willing I should pass on to Wyoming, if the Sheriff was willing; when the Sheriff said he was willing, if I would pay the cost. When

I asked what cost, he said the cost of serving a writ on me last night; when I told him he had shown me no precept last night, nor to day; then he made an attempt to pull something out of his pocket, and then drew back his fist as though he was going to strike me with it, and said Christ Jesus, God, and proceeded no further, but turned and said no more to this deponent; but sundry of the women belonging to Lackawack Settlement told this deponent that the party had taken nine of the inhabitants prisoners, and carried them off, and said they were going to carry them to Easton jail. And further saith not this deponent.

Dated at Westmoreland, 9th day of December, 1775.

DEPOSITION OF HENRY BUSH AND ASHBEL ROBERTSON.

Henry Bush and Ashbel Robertson, both of Westmoreland, of lawful age, testify and say, that they went from the Town of Westmoreland on Monday last, and on Wednesday last they were at Mr. Prinker's Mills, at Lower Smithfield, in the Province of Pennsylvania, and that they there saw one Joseph Savage, who told them that the Town of Westmoreland at Wyoming was all cut off and burnt, when we replied that we came from there on Monday last, and said it was not then done; when the said Savage replied again, that certainly it was done by this time, if it was not done then, for he certainly knew that the people from that Province were gone up to do that, in great numbers, every road; and, further, we were at Japack Hiller's, at the Windgap, the same day, and he, the said Hiller, told us that the people from their Province were gone up to Wyoming, to cut off the New-England people, and that there were great numbers gone up; and that about three hundred people had gone from the Jerseys to Shamokin last week, to join their Province people to cut off the New-England people, and that he believed their Towns were all in ashes by that time; and that the said three hundred people from the Jerseys passed through the County of Northampton, as they went to Shamokin; and, further, that on our way home from said Hiller's we met Shureman Fraud, of Upper Smithfield, who told us that Henry Fuller, Sheriff, and Garret Broadhead, Esqrs., and Captain Ellick Patterson had pressed sixty men in the Town of Upper Smithfield, and did press his two sons, and they did go with him, and that sixty others who they pressed did go with them, and they were gone to cut off the Lackawack Settlement of the New-England people. And further saith not these deponents.

Dated at said Westmoreland, this 9th day of December, 1775.

HENRY BUSH,

ASHBEL ROBERTSON.

HARMAUNIS BRINK'S DEPOSITION.

Harmaunis Brink, of Shippekunk, in the County of Sussex, in the Province of New-Jersey, of lawful age, testifies and says, that on the 6th day of this instant, December, he was at the house of Lieutenant John Shaw, at Shahola, at evening, where a number of men came in while he was at said Shaw's house, with prisoners from Lackawack, of the New-England people settled there; and that he saw sundry of said party that he knew by name, viz: Ellick Patterson, John Van Campen, Esq., John Van Allen, Isaac Jennings, Ellick Ervings, Benajah Mowday, John Sealy, William Smith, Joseph Smith, James Bacon, John Binker, James Lasson, Manuel Van Allen, Daniel Decker, Gascbert Vangorde, Jacob Decker, Elias Decker, Hans Williams, and Fuller, the Sheriff of Northampton County, in the Province of Pennsylvania, who went off from Shaw's with the said prisoners down towards the settlement of Pennsylvania, while this deponent was at Shaw's house; and that on Tuesday, the 5th day of this instant, this deponent remained at the house of Manuel Consolis, in Lower Smithfield, when he saw Charles Stewart, of the Jerseys, and one Garret Broadhead, Esq., of said Smithfield, have one Carver, one of the New-England people settled at Wyoming, prisoner, whom the said Stewart said he would carry to jail, for he was afraid he would carry news to the Lackawack people of the party that was going against them; and this deponent proposed that it was a hardship to put a man to jail for that, and offered to take him along the road towards one Colcofoxe's, which they consented to. And further saith not this deponent.

Dated at Westmoreland, this 11th of December, A. D. 1775.

DEPOSITION OF DANIEL ROSS.

Daniel Ross, of Westmoreland, of lawful age, testifies and says, that some time about the 1st of November last, he came to the mouth of Fishing Creek, on the East Branch of the Susquehanna River, as he was on his way from Fort Pitt to the settlement of the New-England people at Wyoming, when one Captain Dolson, and one Fields, and one Aspy, who were settled near the mouth of said Fishing Creek, told me and one Abijah Harrington, who was my fellow-traveller, that they were going to raise a party of men in Pennsylvania, to take all the New-England people off at Wyoming, and that he, the said Dolson, had orders to enlist men, and that they should have three pounds a month for their pay, and all found as to board, and liquors besides, and leggings, blankets and shoes; and that they further said that they might come up to Wyoming, and take off any horses, cattle, or any other thing from the New-England people, and they would be justified in so doing by the authority of Pennsylvania; and then this deponent and the above named Harrington enlisted under the said Captain Dolson, as soldiers, to join with others to take the New-England people off from Wyoming, and signed his enlisting orders, which were signed by Dr. Plunket, Captain Hunter, Esquire Troy, and Dr. Ellison; and that, some days after, I heard that Mr. Avery, of Wyoming, had come from the Congress, by the way of Shamokin, and that he reported that the Congress had settled a line between the two parties, and that the New-England people were to hold down as far as within four miles of the Point on the East Branch; that the Pennsylvania people were to hold the West Branch; and that the title was settled. And some days after I was at Shamokin, and there heard from sundry persons that the stories that said Avery told were false, and that they had letters from the Congress, and that they had done nothing about it then, any way; and soon after Mr. Charles Stewart came to Sunbury, and brought news from Philadelphia that the Congress had given orders to drive off the New-England people, and that he had brought printed papers, with Mr. Hancock's name to them, and others of the Congress, as the said Stewart said that the said deponent often heard read at Sunbury and other places there; and that it was giving the Pennsylvania people liberty to drive off the New-England people from Wyoming, and that when they had got them off the Congress would dare keep them off, and that this was so understood by the whole body of the people, and so reported at Sunbury, the Point, and other places in that County; and that this deponent conversed sundry times with the said Charles Stewart, and that I drank several bowls of punch with him, and while I was in his company he told publicly that if any of the people then at Sunbury, or in that County, would come up to Wyoming, and distress the people of Wyoming, by taking their horses or cattle, or any other thing, that he would justify them in so doing, and bear them out in it, and that they might have whatever they could get in that way for their own; and that this deponent then came up to Wyoming, in company with Abijah Harrington, Daniel Fields, Joseph Disbury, Joseph Smith, and Gaspary Reymy; and at Wyoming, near by where one Frazier lives, they got two colts; and Reymy and Smith went back with them, and the other four of the company came up to Shawnee Flats, and there took two more of the New-England people's horses. Fields and Harrington went back with them, and then this deponent and Joseph Disbury came up to Kingston Flats, and staid there one day and two nights, and then took two horses; the said Joseph Disbury caught one, and said it was his, and told me that I might take that along, and took one other horse, that he said belonged to one Smith, of the New-England settlers, and then we returned, on the said horses, to Captain Dolson's, where we found all the others of the party, and all the horses; and the said Dolson kept three of the horses about two days; and while this deponent was gone away from Dolson's, the abovesaid Smith took the three horses, as the said Dolson told me, and was gone to the Jerseys, to Powling's Kill, and was to sell the horses if he could, and then bring back the money, when he came into Wyoming, with the party that should come from there; and if he could not sell them, he was to put them out to pasture, on said Powling's Kill, to be kept through the winter; and soon after this Captain Dolson told this deponent, and Abijah Harrington, and one William Barr, that the authority at Shamokin had sent orders to have a party sent up to Wyoming, to see if the people were intrenching in order to defend themselves, or if they were making wooden cannon to defend with, and we set out for Wyoming, and was there taken by Captain Ransom, one of the constables of Westmoreland. And further saith not this deponent.

Dated Westmoreland, December 11, 1775.

JOHN CALKINS'S DEPOSITION.

John Calkins, of Westmoreland, of lawful age, testifies and says, he has been often at Coshockton, Delaware River, among the people settled there, and that he has been acquainted with that settlement for fifteen years; that this deponent was well acquainted with many of the people there, and knew that they settled there on the New-England claim, and that they had, before the last Indian war, laid out three Townships, by order of the proprietors of the Delaware Company, in the Colony of Connecticut, and lotted out the said Towns; but they had been often suppressed by the Indians, and had lost some men in the wars with them, viz: Moses Thomas, Huff, and one Skinner, all New-England men; and all that are now living there, that I know of, are people that came from Connecticut. But I have this fall heard that some of them had taken warrants out, to secure to themselves the titles under Pennsylvania, of small pieces of their improvements, to enable them to trade off their board and lumber sent down Delaware River, the Pennsylvania people seizing all such stuff that does come by the hand of a freeholder, as they informed this deponent. And further saith not.

Dated Westmoreland, December 12, 1775.

Personally appeared the above named John Calkin, signer to the above deposition, and made solemn oath to the truth of the same, before me,
ZEBULON BUTLER, Justice of the Peace.

DANIEL SAINT JOHN'S DEPOSITION.

Daniel Saint John, of Goshen, in the County of Orange, in the Province of New-York, of lawful age, testifies and says, that he had information from one that was a tory, that this Company which is gathering to come upon the New-England people settled at Wyoming, had connection with all the tories, far and near; and that their plan was to come here and take possession of the lands that the people here possess, and make themselves as strong as they could, and when the King's troops should invade and get possession of the sea-ports, that they were to fall on the backs of the Continental troops. And further saith not this deponent.

OF THE THIRD VOLUME OF THE FOURTH SERIES.

CORRESPONDENCE, PROCEEDINGS, ETC.
1775.
Aug. 1. Letter from Richard Henry Lee to General Washington. Suggests the construction of Batteries at the entrance of Boston Harbour. Six tons of Powder has been forwarded to the Camp, and it is proposed to send six or eight tons more.	1
1. Letter to a Gentleman in Philadelphia, from Fredericktown, in Maryland. Captain Cresap's Company of Riflemen have arrived from the Mountains; their great dexterity in shooting with the Rifle.	2
1. Letter from Philadelphia to a Gentleman in London. The arbitrary rabble of America do not desire an union with the Mother Country; the present breach is part of a system formed here before the late war; they are making great preparations for defence; the Government must act quickly, or the contest will be the stronger.	3
1. Address of sundry Officers at Crown Point, in favour of Jeremiah Halsey, late Commodore of all the Armed Vessels on the Northern Lakes.	4
1. Bounties in Land to Soldiers enlisting in the Company of Royal Highland Emigrants, at Quebec.	4
1. Letter from Elbridge Gerry to General Washington. Only thirty-six thousand of the two hundred thousand Musket Cartridges, demanded by General Lee, can be furnished at present; more Powder is soon expected from the West-Indies; there are but two tons of Lead, and no Flints in the Store.	5
1. Letter from Colonel Baldwin to Colonel Joseph Reed. A large detachment is passing over from Boston to Charlestown.	5
2. Letter from Thomas Life, Agent for the Colony of Connecticut, in London, to Governor Trumbull, informing him of the proceedings in the Susquehannah Case, before the Lords of Trade.	5
2. Letter from the Earl of Dartmouth to Lord Dunmore. The hope held out by Lord Dunmore, in his Letter of the 1st of May, that he should be able to collect, from among the Indians, Negroes, and other persons, a force sufficient to subdue rebellion, or at least defend the Government, was very encouraging: with the supply of Arms now sent, and a greater Naval force, the King's Government in Virginia may yet be maintained.	6
2. Letter from the Earl of Dartmouth to General Gage. The King intends to have in America, early next Spring, an Army of twenty thousand men, exclusive of Canadians and Indians. Encloses a Letter to Colonel Johnson, containing His Majesty's commands for engaging a body of Indians, and gives his views at large on the future plan of operations.	6
2. Letter from the Earl of Dartmouth to General Gage, requiring him to return to England immediately.	7
2. Letter from the Earl of Dartmouth to General Howe, informing him that General Gage has been recalled, and enclosing him a Commission, appointing him Commander-in-Chief in the Colonies lying upon the Atlantick Ocean,	8
Aug. 2. Resolutions of the Committee of Newbern, North-Carolina, on Governour Martin's Letter to Mr. De Rosset, of June 24, in which he avows his intention of arming the Slaves.	8
2. Letter from a Clergyman in Maryland to his friend in England. The conduct of the Ministry has hastened the separation of the Colonies from Great Britain; the Ministerial Agents are endeavouring to arouse the Indians against the Colonies; General Carlton is using every method to embody the Canadians against them; and Lord Dunmore and the Captains of the Men-of-War have been tampering with the Negroes.	9
2. Letter from the Connecticut Delegates in the Continental Congress to Zebulon Butler, at Wyoming, pressing upon the inhabitants the necessity of peace, and urging them by no means to disturb the persons or property of those settled under the Proprietaries of Pennsylvania.	10
2. Letter to the Provincial Congress of New-York, from their Delegates in the Continental Congress, informing them that they have obtained an Order on the Continental Treasury, in their favour, for one hundred and seventy-five thousand Dollars.	11
2. Letter from General Schuyler to the President of Congress. Ticonderoga in a most defenceless condition, and the Sloop of very little service. He suggests the appointment of a Committee to examine the country, and report whether that or any other place ought to be fortified.	11

2. Deposition of John Shaftorth.	13

3. New-York Committee: Colonel McDougall required to appoint a guard to take charge of Mr. Sinclair, Lieutenant-Governour of Michilimackinack. Mr. Archer, who had propagated a report that the Continental Congress had declared the Colonies independent after the 10th of March next, cannot be found.	15

3. Letter from Capt. John Lamb to P. T. Curtenius.	17

1775.

3, Letter from Samuel Mott to Governour Trumbull. Preparations making by General Carleton to invade the Colonies. At St. John's there are forty Indians, and at Montreal five hundred, to join the Regulars. The reason of our not being in better preparation here is owing to the negligence of New-York. The General drives on things as fast as he can, considering the hindrances he has; but what can be done in the war with but few Men, and less Provisions and Ammunition, and not a Tent to encamp the Men in? - - - - -	18

Gentlemen

My Anxiety for the Fate of Montreal induces me to request that you will exert yourselves among the Inhabitants to prevail on them to enter into such measures as will prevent the necessity of opening my batteries on the town
~~My blood~~ when I consider the dreadful consequences of a bombardment the distress that must attend a fire (at this season especially) when it is too late to repair the damage which must ~~arise~~ ensue - how many innocent People must suffer! & that the firm Friends of Liberty must be involved in one common ruin with the wicked tools of despotism!
My heart bleeds at the dire necessity which ~~forces~~<sup>compels</sup> me ~~thus~~ to distress that unfortunate City! - I conjure you by all the ties of humanity to take every possible Step to soften the heart of the Governor, who if he be sincere in his professions to the People committed to his charge must commiserate their condition

- in vain will he persist in a resistance
- which can only be attended with misery to the Inhabitants & with lasting disgrace to his own humanity

I am Gentlemen with ~~advised~~<sup>your</sup> earnest wishes for the success of your negotiation
